Freedom's Work but Partly Done in Russia, Says Oscar Straus; All Free Nations Must Give Aid

Democracies of the World Must Support Her Lest Autocrats Come Back to Power Through Reaction—Meanwhile This Country Must Give Generously to Feed Starving Jews of Poland.

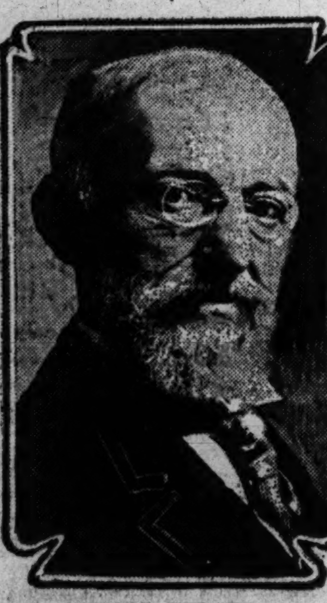
By OSCAR STRAUS.

(Former Secretary of Commerce and Labor in President Roosevelt's Cabinet and Later Ambassador to Turkey.)

NEW YORK, March 24.

RUSSIA has always been a land of mystery, a great giant held down by autocratic Lilliputians. This giant was led to believe, by the skillful machination of an unscrupulous autocracy, aided by a subserviest priesthood, that the threads that bound his limbs were strong and riveted chain. Terrorism was Russia's "big stick." Where there is terrorism there can be no public opinion, for wherever it asserted itself the secret service led it into the dungeons of the capitol and to the shambles of Siberia.

Even before the suffering and terrorized Jews and Stundists came to our shores with their tales of woes and suffering, George Kennan, the Harriet Beecher Stowe of Russia's oppressions, whose soul-throbbing, graphic pen, recording his personal observations in his great work, entitled "The Siberian Exile System," informed and aroused the public conscience not only of this country, but throughout the reading world. Even the strict censorship of Russia could not securely shut the doors against the light which Kennan, through his lectures and his books, let shine upon the world.



OSCAR STRAUS.

Shortly after the breaking out of the present war, in the latter part of August, 1914, the late Count Benkendorf, who, for a number of years, has been, and still is, Russia's Ambassador in London, and who had so large a share in bringing about the entente between his country and Great Britain, sent one of his secretaries to me and asked to have a talk with me. This followed a report in the London papers of a conference which I had with Sir Edward (now Viscount) Grey, then Minister of Foreign Affairs, at the home of Earl Grey.

Ambassador's Forecast.

Benkendorf, who I found to be not only a man of wide experience and knowledge, but also with a broad and liberal outlook, told me that this war had united the Russian people; that there seemed to be a patriotic purpost that inspired all of the nationalities, and that none were fighting more valiantly in the armies of Russia than the Jews. In answer to my query, why, then, could not Russia properly recognize this patriotic spirit, for surely he would agree with me that the duty to die for one's country should be predicated upon the right to live in one's country under equal laws and without degrading discriminations, he said he thoroughly agreed and could assure me that this war would surely result in a liberal government for Russia which give equal rights to all the subject and oppressed nationalities.

He further told me that the then Government of Russia lacked cohesion and centralization, but that would all be secured with the victory of the allies, and that the victory of the allies meant not only liberty for Russia, but liberty in Russia. Whether he foresaw that liberty in Russia would come before the end of the war I am not able to say. But I was impressed by his emphasized statement that his country would be consolidated only under a liberal regime and that a liberal regime would certainly follow the triumph of the allie.

Work for America.

In this connection we are reminded of the fact that of all the suffering of subject peoples in this world war, none equals in intensity and extent the agonies of more than 3,000,000 Jews in Russian Poland, Galicia and Lithuania under the grinding horrors of Russian despotism and organized murders by the Black Hundreds. These people have suffered fiendishly from the terrors of the present war, living most in areas swept by the contending armies. Under the new Government they, with other oppressed nationalities, will get their freedom, but to most of them that freedom will mean little unless they are promptly saved from impending starvation.

This salvation must come from America. It is to be hoped that the benevolent people of this country who can realize these agonies will aid that generous leader in so many good causes, Julius Rosenwald of Chicago, in raising as quickly as possible the ten million dollar fund to which he has given so magnificent an impetus by contributing one-tenth of the amount so urgently needed. These sorely oppressed and starving people have contributed their full share in effort and in suffering in opening the door of freedom for Russia, and if relief does not come at once they will die at once upon the threshold of their freedom. That must not be.

The overturn in Russia is not a revolution, as generally understood, but a coup d'etat, and not even such a coup d'etat as history records, but an extraordinary vitalization of the spirit of the people in the army as in the civil life. The giant has at last discovered that under the hypnotism of a grinding autocracy he had been made to believe that threads that bound him were chains. What better evidence could have been given to the world that the real issue of this war is between free government and Caesarism; between militarism and a government of, by and for the people; between international right and autocratic might; between concord based upon the guarantees of civilization and international discord upheld by all the brutalities of might.

These brutalities, unparalleled in their recklessness, have subjected our own country to a humiliating state of war which the United States has endured with a patience and a restraint that finds no parallel in ancient or modern history. The American giant, who has never known any chains, is at last aroused, and his first duty is to extend his hand of welcome and recognition to his Russian brother, so that he may know, and his allies, Great Britain, France and Italy and all the world, that America is their ally, with all her might—financial, economic and military.

World Monroe Doctrine Now.

A free Russia, with a Government of, by and for the people—whether that Government be a parliamentary Government, such as that of Great Britain and Italy, or even more nearly akin to the Government of France and this country, whatever be its term—makes possible, under the form of a league of nations, an international Monroe Doctrine, backed up by all the forces of civilization against the future rebarbarization of the world.

That the new ministerial Government of Russia may meet with some peril from the misguided extremists, which arbitrary Government never fails to develop, is quite within the realm of possibility. Therefore, all the more it becomes the duty of enlightened nations such as ours to extend the hand of recognition at the earliest practical moment, so as to give the fullest encouragement to the ministerial Government and to that

Gov. Gardner Tells the Post-Dispatch What Legislature Has Accomplished for State's Benefit

How Executive Won Fights With Law Makers

First Requisites to Success, He Found, Were an Enlarged Backbone and a Set of Iron Nerves the Acquisition, of Which Speedily Brought Co-operation From Many Sources When the Legislators Found He Would Not "Quit"—Praises Assembly Leaders.

Not Satisfied Yet He Says and Will Not Be Until Three Other Measures in His Program That Were Lost Are Passed Two Years Hence—Believes Bourbonism Is Routed Forever in Missouri, That Progressivism Is Supreme, and That the State Has Had a New Birth.

By George W. Eads,

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 24.

GOV. FREDERICK D. GARDNER, in an interview today, told how he succeeded in getting the Legislature to pass revenue-raising, good-roads and prison-reform legislation, which, he confidently expects, will produce enough money for every State activity, lift Missouri out of muddy roads and entirely change the attitude of the State government toward the unfortunates of society.

Gov. Gardner was elated over the success of his legislative program. He feels that a great work has been done for Missouri—that bourbonism is dead, and that progressiveism is in the saddle. He believes great industrial and social benefits are bound to accrue to the people from a system of 3500 miles of hard-surfaced roads, which he expects to be completed before the expiration of his term; that an era of interurban railroad building will result from the repeal of a law which closed the doors to foreign corporations; that the abolition of the convict labor system, together with the purchase of a State farm for prisoners, and that the operation of the children's code and mothers' pension act will minimize crime and poverty, go far toward reforming and redeeming the criminal element, and create such a spirit of uplift in the State that everybody will be interested in extending a helping hand to his unfortunate brother.

"Team work did it!" exclaimed the Governor when I asked him how he succeeded in getting the Legislature to pass laws which have failed in many other Legislatures.

"I want to give credit where credit is due. I had the hearty co-operation of many public spirited members of the House and Senate. Without this co-operation, this team work, it would have been impossible to pass these laws.

"I feel that the State is deeply indebted to men like Lieutenant-Governor Crossley, Representative Frank Farris of Phelps County, Speaker Drake Watson of the House of Representatives, Senator John Morton, President pro tem of the Senate; Representative Harry B. Hawes of St. Louis, who put through the good roads bill; Attorney-General McAllister, who rendered invaluable aid in drafting and helping to pass many of the bills, and to those members of the House and Senate who loyally supported these measures so essential to the welfare of the State."

Had to Enlarge His Backbone

It is well known in Jefferson City that the Senate was organized to defeat practically all of the Governor's revenue-raising bills, and that there was strong opposition to many of them in the House. I learned here that Gov. Gardner exercised such a great influence over leaders of the Legislature that he persuaded them to champion measures to which they were personally opposed, and that he had several exceedingly bitter and dramatic contests over some of his bills.

With these facts in mind, I asked the Governor how he was able to produce the team work to put his program over.

"Well," he laughed, "I had to enlarge my backbone until it was as big as my leg; I had to change the chemical composition of my nerves to iron; I had to rely upon my good physical constitution; I had to emphasize the fact that I should not be a candidate for any other office; I had to feel that I had a thorough understanding of the job I had undertaken; I had to make friends and hold them; I had to use all the diplomacy at my command, and never lose sight of the purpose or end I had in view."

Instances in which the Governor had to employ all of these qualities will be referred to later. The Governor shows no physical ill-effects from the grueling work of the past three months. He appears to be in better health than when I interviewed him in the Madison Hotel here last August, when he first outlined much of the program which has been written into the law books of the State, and to have much greater confidence in his ability to do things which he believes will benefit the entire State.

Had to Completely Refinance the State

The responsibilities of office, the annoyances of the persistent and growing army of office seekers and hard work for 18 hours each and every day have affected neither the warmth of the Governor's handshake and greeting nor the cheerful disposition which has been such a valuable asset to him since he entered political life. Members of the Legislature on their way home said that they regarded the work of this man, who stepped from his coffin factory into the Governor's chair three months ago, as nothing less than remarkable.

Most Important Laws Enacted by Legislature

(1). Creation of a tax commission, with power to equalize the assessment of property throughout the State for taxation; to make a budget to guide the Legislature in appropriations, and to exercise a supervision over all State departments to eliminate useless employes. It is estimated the tax commission, by equalizing assessments, will produce a revenue of $500,000 a year.

(2). A tax on the capital stock and surplus of corporations which will produce from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 a year.

(3). A secured debt tax which will produce from $1,500,000 to $2,500,000 a year.

(4). A tax on incomes which will produce from $300,000 to $500,000 a year.

(5). An inheritance tax to produce $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 a year.

(6). Tax on soft drinks to yield from $200,000 to $400,000 a year.

(7). Increase in saloon licenses to yield $500,000 a year.

(8). Liquor license tax to yield $200,000 a year.

(9). Tax on the output of mines to yield $30,000 a year.

(10). Increase of automobile license taxes by 100 per cent to yield $1,250,000 a year for road building.

(11). A good roads law, creating a commission to lay out and supervise the building of 3500 miles of permanent, hard-surfaced roads, and providing for raising revenues of $14,000,000 for their construction.

(12). A law creating a commission to have control of all penal institutions and the recommendation of pardons and paroles; providing for the permanent abolition of the contract labor system in the penitentiary, and for the purchase of a large farm on which convicts will live and be employed.

(13). Repeal of a law relating to foreign corporations which prevented the development of interurban railway systems in Missouri.

"It is a little too early after the adjournment of the Legislature for the people to realize the full meaning of the laws which have been passed," the Governor said, taking up his legislative program for discussion.

"We must first understand that the administration had to provide for the complete refinancing of the State, as I had inherited an indebtedness of $2,300,000 from the preceding administration and that we have had to reconstruct the State's attitude toward the unfortunate members of society.

"We had to provide means for paying off the indebtedness of the State, and additional revenues to meet necessarily increased expenses of the State government. It cannot be definitely known until the laws become operative how much revenue they will produce, but this we do know, that not much of the new revenue will be available until next year. We succeeded in passing these important laws, which, in my judgment, will yield large revenues:

"Corporation tax, which, I estimate, will produce from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 a year.

"Inheritance tax, $1,500,000 to $2,000,000.
"Income tax, $300,000 to $500,000.
"Soft drink tax, $200,000 to $400,000.
"Increase in saloon licenses, $500,000.
"Liquor license tax, $200,000.
"Secured debt tax, $1,500,000 to $2,500,000.
"Tax commission, $500,000.
"Mine inspection, $30,000.

"Two other laws of vital importance to the people of the State were passed, and one law, which has prevented the development of interurban railroads in Missouri, was repealed. These highly important measures are:

"The good roads law, providing for the expenditure of $3,500,000 a year for building permanent roads, and creating a commission to lay out and supervise all State road construction and the expenditure of the money.

"The prison reform bill, creating a commission to have control of all penal institutions, and the recommend paroles and pardons; abolishing forever convict labor in this State, and authorizing the purchase of a State farm for the penitentiary.

"The repeal of the law requiring that 90 per cent of the capital of corporations doing business in the State must be furnished by Missouri. The McKinley system has been prevented from building an interurban railroad from St. Louis to Kansas City by this law.

Tax Commission Law Most Important

"I regard the tax commission law as probably the most important passed at this session of the Legislature, but each and every one of the revenue measures is highly important, while the road law and prison-reform law are very essential to the industrial and social progress of the State.

"I think a wrong impression has gone out as to the effect of the tax commission law. The tax commission will not, as some people think, greatly increase the taxes of farmers, but it will adjust the inequalities of taxation so that everybody will pay his proper share of State taxes. It will first make these adjustments of inequalities of taxation in the counties, and then equalize taxes as between the counties. It will bring to light for taxation enormous quantities of hidden wealth."

"Do you think the farmers object to paying their just proportion of State taxes?"

"I certainly do not. I have letters from thousands of farmers saying that they are perfectly willing to pay more taxes provided others do. Under the new financial system which we have created, we shall be able to reach money in the turnover. The income tax, the inheritance tax, the corporation tax and the secured debt tax are intended to reach property that formerly escaped taxation, to a very large extent.

"I anticipate important results from the tax commission. I have in mind two of the wealthiest counties in the State. The assessed valuation of one county, for 1916, is $18,292,440, which is more than $500,000 less than the assessment of 1915. This county, in 1916, paid $61,000 to the State, and drew $89,000 from the State Treasury.

"By a system of undervaluation in this county, it was able to make the rest of the State contribute $28,000 to it for local requirements. The other county I have in mind is assessed at only $20,000,000, and it receives a much larger sum from the State than it pays in. This is true of many other counties.

"These counties make their assessments to fit local needs, and they ignore entirely the State needs. The tax commission will correct all such inequalities.

"The tax commission will have two other important duties to perform: It will be also a budget commission and an efficiency commission. It will prepare a budget for the guidance of the Legislature in making appropriations, and it will exercise supervision over every State department and cut off unnecessary employes.

"Need for Budget System Urgent"

"The need for a budget system is urgent. The present Legislature has over-appropriated $3,500,000. The Legislature cannot be criticised for over-appropriating. It had no reliable estimate of probable revenues and expenses. It had to do its work in a haphazard way. It had no means of knowing when a department head demanded a specific sum of money whether the demand was just.

"I shall have to go over the appropriations bill and veto item after item. Under the Constitution I cannot pare down items. I must either approve or reject the entire item. The last Legislature appropriated $13,000 for contingent expenses of one department. It may be that $5000 is sufficient. But I cannot cut the item to $5000.

"The tax commission will be able to give the Legislature expert advice on the financial requirements of all departments.

"You will see why I am enthusiastic over this law. It was not an easy thing to get it passed. There was much objection from some people, who feared that it would raise taxes. The people of Missouri have been getting by with a per capita tax for State purposes of $1.70, while the average rate for all the other states is $5.03. It must be apparent to everybody that if we expect to keep abreast of the other states, we must at least double our per capita tax.

"The good roads law is going to be a great boon to industry in this State. Each year the State will contribute $1,500,000 toward building a system of State highways; the counties will contribute a like sum, and we will get $500,000 from Uncle Sam. That will make $14,000,000 available for road building during the four years of my administration.

"The State Highway Commission has been appointed and is at work. It will lay out a State highway in each county, and the highways in the 114 counties will be connected up to form a symmetrical and useful State system.

"Every dollar of the money will be spent under State supervision. The plans for the roads and bridges will be drawn by the State engineers. The State now has full authority to employ convicts on the roads to provide cheap labor. I am not too enthusiastic when I say that I expect to see 3500 miles of State roads completed by the time I go out of office. We have not a mile of State road now."

Under the law which has just been enacted, the Great German Offensive Expected Soon After the Present Retreat Ends

Frank H. Simonds Declares That Masterly Reti Is Certainly a Part of Well-Planned Strategy and an Attack would Be Best Defense Against Allies' Planned Offensive—Central Powers May M e Another Thrust at Russia.

By Frank H. Simonds,

Noted Writer on the Military Operations of the War Whose A cles Are Familiar to Post-Dispatch Readers, and Who Recently Returned From Several Weeks at the Western Fighting Front.

ON Tuesday, Feb. 6, the Germans before the British lines and about the little village of Grandcourt began a retirement which gradually expanded until it became clear by the last days of the month that they were to evacuate that salient between Arras and Bapaume which had become costly and dangerous to hold by reason of British and French advance during the summer of 1916. On March 17 a new retirement away off to the south between the Oise at Noyon and the Avre at Roye disclosed the even more important fact that the Germans were making a general retirement.

At the time this article is written, it is possible to get some idea, not of how far the German retirement may go, but how far it must go now in any case. In the last four days we have seen an advance of the allies along a front of more than 100 miles for a distance ranging from one to 25 miles. At the moment they are still advancing, and the front from Arras to Soissons, which was once a wide curve outward into France toward the channel, has now become a straight line. This new line bears the same relation to the old that the string does to the bow.

FIELD MARSHAL VON HINDENBURG, Whose Great Retreat Mystifies the Entente Allies.

We know that the Germans have decided upon the withdrawal which must now extend as far as their second position in France, the position described as the Cambrai-St. Quentin-Laon line, and now rather more frequently mentioned as the Hindenburg line. We do not yet know whether they mean to stand on this line or go all the way back to the frontier, although every bit of evidence at hand points to a stand at the line.

Before this article reaches my readers the answer to this present riddle will be unmistakable.

Why the Retreat Began.

At the outset let us answer the question: Why did the Germans retreat at all?

Simply because the British and French by their attacks of last summer and fall penetrated so deeply into the German first system, reckoning the Hindenburg line as the second system and the frontier line as the third, that it became difficult to hold and at some points dangerous.

Before the attack of last summer the German line from Arras to Soissons was a wide curve, resembling a bow, with the Soissons-Arras air line as the string. After the attack and just before the retreat, the German front had been changed into two semicircles, two bows, if you please, and the British had driven a wedge right into the center. In doing this they had created two salients, a narrow one between Arras and Bapaume and a wider one between Peronne and Soissons.

In point of fact, the allies had cut straight through the original German defense lines and the Germans had been compelled to throw up one barrier after another behind the breach, as dikes are hastily erected after a break in a Mississippi River levee. These works had none of the strength of the original fortifications, and the British progress was at an increased pace as the push went on.

As early as last September military observers began to discuss the possibility of a German retirement, and some of my readers may recall an article of mine on this subject. Falkenhayn was said to have advised this, and his advice was cited as explaining in part his removal and the coming of Hindenburg.

Held Back for Peace Drive.

We see now, however, that it was well-founded speculation which looked toward the German retreat, and we may conjecture that the reasons for the delay were political quite as much as military. Thus it seems reasonable to conclude that the Germans, already resolved to make a peace proposal, wisely decided that the proposal would be weakened if it came after a considerable retreat.

Accordingly, they held on, made their Rumanian campaign and then suggested peace, with their lines still almost at the maximum. But when the peace proposals had been rejected political considerations gave way to military and they chose to retreat.

At the moment when the frost broke and the spring muds became general, thus holding up pursuit, while atmospheric conditions hampered aerial observation, the Germans began their retreat, slowly at first and finally, just at the end of bad weather and after the roads became better, they suddenly slipped out of a very wide front and began to withdraw rapidly and successfully, apparently taking their foes by surprise.

By last Sunday we had a running retreat unlike anything that has occurred since the Battle of the Marne in the west. We had British and French cavalry pounding down the roads leading toward the Hindenburg line.

But, unless the Germans intend to go back to the Belgian frontier, this condition must now change abruptly. Less than 10 miles on a very wide front intervenes between the allies and the Hindenburg line, and this week should see the answer to our first problem. If the Germans mean to hold this second line, we shall have by that time the kind of bulletins that came from Paris and London when Kluck got behind the Aisne, in September, 1914.

If Hindenburg Line Is Held.

Supposing that the Germans do make a stand on the Hindenburg line, what is there to be said of the retreat? Granted that the withdrawal is on a front from Arras to Soissons and that the new front runs before Laon, La Fere, St. Quentin, Cambrai and joins the old line east of Soissons and southeast of Arras, there is little real military advantage to be discovered for the allies, whatever the moral advantage. This is true because the Germans have not retired from country having any great military value, since it does not contain large cities or mines of any value.

The retreat gives the French back perhaps 1000 square miles of territory, and it removes the threat to Paris. It shortens the line somewhat, thus releasing German and allied troops, but not any large number. On the new line the Germans have constructed defenses quite as strong as on the old, and the communications are quite as good as they were behind the old line.

If the great offensive of the allies was designed to take place on the front that has now been evacuated, it will have to be postponed until the British and French can bring up new roads and railways to the newer fr

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Anti-American Teachers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

You have favored the introduction of military drill in our public high schools as a step in the direction of national preparedness. You are right in this. But there is another question more important. Do you know that there are not a few instructors disloyal to America now teaching in the St. Louis public schools—both elementary and high schools? There are not a few teachers who, up to this very hour, can see no wrong done our country by the German Government. There are pro-German teachers who, covertly in their classrooms, but blatantly in the corridors of the school buildings and in the street cars, daily proclaim admiration for the German Government, and their contempt for the American Government. Investigate the truth of this statement, if you are not convinced.

Why should our sons be taught skill in military tactics, if that skill is not to be supported by a love of our country? Charles E. Hughes says the German attacks are "an assault upon liberty and civilization itself." Shall American schools be used as a means of pro-German propaganda? If not, the practice, as well as the ideals, of not a few public school teachers of St. Louis must be radically different from what it is now, and has been for two years.

AN AMERICAN TEACHER.

A Pardonable Gloat.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

On Sunday morning Mar. 5, one year ago, you published an article from me, entitled "The Death Penalty," wherein I stated as an axiomatic fact, that the state cannot inflict the death penalty for crime from a moral point of justification; that a legislative body consisting of two or more individuals, in agreement with one another, cannot inhibit the Divine injunction, "Thou Shalt Not Kill;" that the Constitution of the United States does not sanction the death penalty; that, only "involuntary servitude" (slavery), is provided for in that instrument.

These arguments were advanced in reply to an article on the same subject, by one "Jeff Mackay," published the week previous, in the same column. Mr. Mackay's contention was, that "killing for a proper purpose is right, for it is the law of the Creator," vide the Malthusian theory of over-population.

Now that the Legislature of our State has taken the high moral ground of interdicting the power of courts and juries to put to death a fellow-creature under any pretense of justification, I feel that an exclamation, "Well done, thou good and faithful servants," and to say to Mr. Mackay, "One on you, Jeff," will not be inappropriate nor undignified, coming as it does from one earnestly for the right, though obscure in public affairs.

L. P. CUSTER.

Copperheadism.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

We hear the words every day "Let the people who want war go to the front." We hear these words from the lips of all those who for reasons best known to themselves are for peace at any price, from the hyphenates and all those who care nothing for American rights and honor. Champ Clark said in a speech the other day that all those who want war should be thrown in the trenches of Europe. Champ evidently is jealous of the popularity Gumshoe Bill Stone has gained with a certain element and is trying to share in it. Of course the pacificists and disloyalists would like to have all who are in favor of protecting American honor and rights thrown into the trenches of Europe, for then they would be left in full control. We should not allow the burden to fall upon the patriotic men and permit the slackers and disloyalists to remain at home and preach treason. This country has had experience with copperheads, and we should profit by that experience.

"AMERICAN."

Should They Say, "Howdy, Cap?"

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

For the past few months we have read of universal military training for our boys, which I think would be a good thing for them, but there is one thing that I would like to see done away with in this training and that is this everlasting saluting and salaaming to officers. Every man is born equal in this country, and I am sure that every soldier would feel and have just as much respect for his superior officer if he could treat that officer as one man would another, instead of making an exalted person out of him. This bowing and scraping that our soldiers have been going through for years has made snobs out of the officers. I hope that if my boy is forced to military training he will only have to pass the time of day, or use any other respectful salutation when he meets an officer who happens to be over him.

ELECTION TEST QUESTIONS.

Having been in power for four years, the Kiel administration is on trial before the voters. It must be judged not by promises, but actual performances for the past four years.

Mr. Kiel supported the charter which increased the power and patronage of the Mayor's office and increased salaries of the heads of departments, but has the Kiel administration realized the advantages of the new charter? Has it practically utilized the charter provisions for efficiency and economy?

We know that the merit system has suffered at Mayor Kiel's hands. He opposed and refused to reappoint Mr. Rogers, who tried faithfully and honestly to enforce the efficiency provisions of the charter.

Mr. Rogers stated that $1,000,000 of the city's money is wasted through failure to enforce efficiency under the merit system—through payroll padding and spoils appointments.

Hank Weeke is a notorious example of the violation of the merit system. How many other appointments have been made under the suspension of the merit system?

It is charged that the Mill Creek sewer cost $1,000,000 more than it should have cost. It is known that excessive profits were realized by contractors. The truth should be threshed out of these charges.

Are the heads of departments up to the standard available through increased salaries and required by their greater tasks under the charter?

Mayor Kiel claims credit for many public improvements initiated before he came into office. What improvements has he initiated and completed? How many planned improvements were modified or delayed?

The Skinker road is an example. The contractor was a member of the Republican City Committee, supporting Mayor Kiel. The work was delayed a year, without penalty, and defective curbing was approved.

Have the streets been kept in repair? Have they been kept clean?

Has Mayor Kiel a definite plan with regard to the United Railways? What is it?

What about smoke abatement?

These questions and others affecting the economical and efficient administration of the city's business must be considered by the voters? The test of fitness in an official seeking re-election or of a party seeking continuation of power is past accomplishments. Mr. Connett must answer for his plans and purposes.

THE INDEPENDENTS IN CONGRESS.

En route to the special session of Congress, Charles H. Randall, member from Los Angeles, declared at Salt Lake City his purpose to vote for such organization of the House as will insure full support to President Wilson. His information is that four of the five independent members are of his view and will co-operate to continue the old organization, whose loyalty to the President has been tested.

The pendency of a crisis has not averted a contest for the control of the House when the division between the parties has been close in the past. Long delays before the body was in readiness for public business has been caused by clashing personal ambitions and party interests. The presence of a different spirit on April 3 would be proof of a patriotic subordination of all minor things to the need of provision for the national emergency.

A prompt and efficient organization of the House is one of the most important measures of preparedness. Lack of preparedness there might have results even more deplorable than a similar lack elsewhere. Speaker Clark is worthy of re-election. The same reasons that urge independents to give him support might prompt them to insist on a shifting in the makeup of some of the important House committees. Republicans who have shown discernment of what is involved in the great issue and have taken a firm stand are to be preferred to paltering Democrats.

The vital thing is to avoid a delay paralyzing to governmental energy. Support for Speaker Clark means that Congress will be in instant readiness. Opposition to him may mean a deplorable parliamentary struggle.

THE FETICH OF DESPOTISM.

Despotism is, after all, nothing but a fetich which holds people in bondage through ignorance and superstition.

When a people think freedom, they become free. When the shackles of mind are unloosed the physical chains break like tow.

The Russian revolution, like all successful revolutions which preceded it, demonstrates what a sham is the divine right of Kings. One day Czar Nicholas was the most powerful ruler in the world—an absolute dictator of 175,000,000 of people. The next day he was the most helpless and pitiable person in Russia. He was not even master of his own life or his own conduct. The people of Russia have always had the same power, but their minds were bound to absolutism. They didn't know their power nor how to exert it. They were submissive to the idea of absolutism and their own strength was used to bind them.

The example of Russia and the ease with which the Russians threw off their oppressors will be inspiration to all the oppressed peoples of the earth. The thrill of liberty will spread through Germany and Austria and Turkey. The peoples in the countries where autocracy is in the saddle will begin to question the alleged rights and privileges of their "divine-right" rulers and ruling classes.

The war has shown that autocracy is powerless without the strength and resources which the people supply. The people must do the fighting and pay the cost of war in blood and treasure. Why should they not direct and utilize their own strength for their own welfare?

The dead millions of Europe's battlefields have not died in vain. Their deaths, with the new sense of power and of futile sacrifice gained by the people, mark the death of autocracy. Away with the autocrats and their privileged henchmen. Up with the divine right of men to govern themselves.

When the costly bauble of imperialism is tossed aside by all the European peoples there will be a new Europe. Civilization will go forward and mankind will prosper.

ENLIST NOW.

Young men who have been promising to enlist if the country went to war with Germany should do it now. War is not merely inevitable; it is already here. It is only a formal declaration from one side or the other that is inevitable.

The Federal army is calling for recruits. The Missouri National Guard is at only 50 per cent of the required war strength and the First Regiment has already begun a campaign for enlistments. The sooner men join the greater will be their opportunity for training and the longer they will have to prepare themselves for any campaign that may be undertaken.

Compulsory service for a large number of men is certain sooner or later. Those who volunteer early not only will receive immediate advantages but also will acquire a distinction which they and their descendants will cherish in after years. Theirs will be the boast that they gave freely and gladly the service which afterwards was exacted of others.

Nobody can foretell what war will mean. Thousands of patriotic men who answered President Lincoln's first summons thought they were in for a summer's jaunt to the South at most. Many a boy who joined that rush as a private was destined to become a veteran of four years later, with a strap to his shoulder. It is little easier to predict what will follow the opening of hostilities in 1917 than it was to foreknow the course of events in 1861.

The army needs 20,000 men now. The Missouri guard needs 4500. Those who fill these places will be picked men. They will probably be the first to be called upon for foreign service if that ever comes.

WHY SUNDAY JUMPED ST. LOUIS.

Members of the Ministerial Alliance, perturbed over the curt cancellation by Billy Sunday of his St. Louis engagement, are casting about for explanations. They might find one by turning their scrutiny inward upon their way of doing business, particularly in the matter of suppressing information.

Sunday, in his telegram of cancellation, did not specify what ailed the St. Louis situation. He merely said it was not "right." It is a safe conjecture that one thing wrong with the situation, as Sunday views it, is the pussyfooting of the preachers who have been managing things.

If there is one thing that Sunday dislikes more than the many other things that he dislikes it is the soft pedal. There is nothing muffled about Billy. But the preachers who have been planning to bring him here have gone about in gum shoes, with information in their coat-tail pockets to which the public was entitled, and newspaper reporters doing their best to neutralize the clerical bungling have been met with evasion. Sunday's telegram canceling his St. Louis engagement was in a clerical coat-tail for several days before the public was informed. Then there were rumors and denials and a publication based on partial information and further denials.

Then a letter came from George Sunday and it was passed from coat-tail to coat-tail, as if it had been something incriminating. Every move has been marked by stealth. Chairman Mauze confesses in public addresses that he is "afraid of the newspapers." No wonder the response in public interest has been scant. And no wonder that Sunday decides the situation is not "right."

JAPAN TO SEND US GOSPEL.

Many years ago we sent our first missionaries to Japan. It is in the news of the day that Nippon is about to undertake a delicate service for our possible betterment. Miss Toshiko Sakamaki of Tokio is to bring us the gospel of Shintoism, involving among other things the cult of ancestor worship. Perhaps we may respond to the gentle lady's teachings with something better than acknowledgment of the fair play in this turning about of missions.

Americans have been accustomed to recognize the worth of their ancestors largely with regard to material things left behind. Some ancestors here have pleased us on genealogical grounds by opening to us the doors of honorable organizations of Sons of This or Daughters of That. Others have furnished the nucleus of portrait galleries of avail in pretense, at least, to family pride.

The Japanese do us better than all this. Ancestry with them is, one might say, of eugenic quality. It stands to them for what they should be and what their children may be. The prayer of every good disciple of Shintoism is that he may be himself a perfectly good ancestor. He owes it as a duty to those gone before that he shall be so; owes it even as far back as to the great Ancestor of all Ancestors. His excellence is to be a link in that of an endless lineage.

There is much in this simple belief to disturb the arrogance with which we hold to some of our cults of family. Let us agree to listen to Miss Sakamaki in a spirit receptive and not lacking a certain meekness.

"THE RETREAT OF VICTORY."

It's a retreat of victory, says Berlin of the huge movement which has enabled the entente allies to recover 235 towns in Northern France. A death trap is being baited for Germany's enemies, we are told. With the retirement the master stroke begins that is to end the war with a German triumph.

Probably it is the same kind of a retreat of victory as the hasty one the Russians made some time ago in Galicia and later in Poland. A retreat of victory on a considerable scale was also conducted by the Servians, likewise by the Rumanians.

Up to date, however, no death traps have been sprung by the Russians, the Servians and the Rumanians. If a master stroke had been planned, it has been delayed. It has previously been noted that after these retreats of victory are ended, it seems to take a long time for the victory to eventuate.

When the enemy retreats it is naturally a German success. When Germany retreats, it has strategic quality and is only a German success of a different kind. Berlin always wins.

BLUEBIRD.

Bluebird: I have come to nest in Spring,
Here to mate and here to sing.
Is there welcome anywhere
For a pilgrim of the air?

Child: Stay with us, thou little pilgrim,
Make thy nest and raise thy brood.
We shall set for thee a fountain,
We shall give thy children food.

Bluebird: Is there safety here for those
Who shall falter as they fly?
What protection for the mother
While the days are going by?

Child: We shall set a children's guard
Day by day about thy nest,
Warning from thy sanctuary
Any meaning to molest.

Bluebird: I shall give thee for protection
All the carols I can sing.
I shall make the very morning
With my gratitude to ring.

I shall woo the little mother
In the tender-leafing trees,
Filling morn and noon and even
With a lover's melodies.

I shall sing for you a ballad
Of the romance of the birds;
You shall hear the song of mating,
Even tenderer than words.

Child: We shall gird you round as soldiers
Guard the sanctity of thrones—
Like a regiment of children
Bearing sticks and bearing stones.

Bluebird: I have come to nest in Spring,
Seeking kindness where it may;
There to dwell a while in glory
'Till the brood shall fly away.

I will sit upon the treetop,
There to watch and there to sing;
I will flash across the Heavens
All the splendor of my wing.

Child: Come to us, thou pretty pilgrim!
We will muster to a drum
All the big and little children
In thy service!

Bluebird: I will come.

ABOUT MOTORBOATS.

WHILE wholly sympathizing with the idea that private motorboats may be impressed into the Government service to do patrol duty, we still want to sound a warning against expecting too much of them. After all, war does not change nor expediency alter the nature of this peculiar means of getting about. It remains a motorboat, and whether it would start for its country quicker than it has been starting for its owner is very much to be doubted. There are some respects in which motorboats have served, but getting from one point to another in any hurry at all has not been one of them. Their chief usefulness, as we have understood it, has been to revive in man the patience of Job. If they have at the same time revived the picturesqueness of swearing as it flourished in the days of the pirate, that still cannot offset what they have done to revive a virtue neglected by men for a long time. People with motorboats have been an example to us all through the trying years of watchful waiting. They bore with it as sweetly as if it were nothing. They have gotten that in the patience with which they have learned to work with their engines, and it is not a thing easily to be taken away from them. If these people must fight on the water in their own craft, we shall have to acquire some part of their patience with those craft. A small marine engine is not like any other engine. It is much more human than any other machinery we have. It has its moods. If the war is to evolve out of its own necessity a marine engine that will start promptly, as an automobile engine does, then let us have that war and count its cost as nothing.

A LETTER.

Dear Clark:

For some days I have wanted to felicitate you upon your "Song of the Wild Geese."

That is a poem. It has imagination, vision, flight—originality. It is nobly conceived and ably executed. Much of your work is excellent, and some of it is superior. Now and then you ring the bell.

Sincerely,
ROBERTUS LOVE.

THE NEW TAX COMMISSION PLEASE NOTICE.

From the De Kalb County (Mo.) Herald.

The two-day sale of Herefords, held by Overton Harris at Harris was one of the most remarkable livestock events ever recorded in North Missouri. A total of $184,574 was received for the 144 animals put through the sale ring. The highest price for a single animal was $11,800, and the average price was $1281. The sale was attended by 2000 persons, and it is reported that 700 motor cars were parked on the ground during the sale.

Col. Roosevelt's statement that he can do nothing now until the Government moves is the first intimation we recall to have had from him that he is not entirely self-sufficient.

England has found that whereas a soldier can be made in four months, it takes from one to two years to make his equipment.

BEAUTY CULTURE.

MRS. K. T. G.—For those born with straight hair and whose tresses were not coaxed into curliness by a fond and persistent parent, there is no redress. Marcel curlers have been found satisfactory by many, but the curls produced by their assistance are temporary and evanescent. Tar water is said to make the hair wavy and to benefit it in other ways, acting really as a tonic. To make it, get from the druggist a 5-cent box of white pine tar; pour the contents into a bottle (a quart size) of hot water; let stand until cold. The tar will cling to the bottom of the bottle; do not shake, as you will get the full substance and strength of the tar without shaking. Just use the water from the tar. To use, put a little into a small vessel and rub into the scalp and on the hair with a brush (one a little longer than a tooth brush will do). While the hair is moist push it forward and press it with the fingers.

HOW ONE BECOMES A JESUIT.

AMICUS.—Formation of a Jesuit for his life requires about 18 years. Before entrance into the order he has already pursued studies equivalent to those required for the collegiate degree of A. B. First two years of novitiate are spent in spiritual exercises, prayer, meditation, ascetic reading, practice of mortification and in humble occupations. First year the novice devotes [illegible] days of retreat in absolute silence, to making the spiritual exercises of St. Ignatius (meditations on the last four things to be remembered and on the life of Christ). In every after year at least eight successive days are devoted to the same purpose. At end of second novitiate year the candidate takes simple vows of poverty, chastity, obedience. Then two years are devoted to study of the humanities and the modern languages. Then three years are given to philosophic and scientific studies. Opportunities are provided for special studies. After seven years of study of self, the humanities, philosophy, science, the young Jesuit, now usually about [illegible] years old, teaches five years in Jesuit College. After his college work he studies theology three years, is then admitted to holy orders. He studies theology one year more, then is given mission work and spiritual employment a year, after which comes his final year of novitiate. This year he devotes himself exclusively to the study of spiritual things, his own character, the ways and means of the institute of the society, its rules and constitution. During his third year the 30 days' retreat of silence and prayer is once more made. After this year he is admitted to the last solemn vows, now four in number; they include a special vow of obedience to the Pope. The Jesuit rises at 5 a. m. Half an hour is given to physical preparation for the day. He devotes one hour to mental prayer, for which there has been 15 minutes of preparation the night before. He then hears mass, or, if a priest, says mass. About 7 a. m. he breakfasts, and after a few minutes devoted to a review of his morning meditation, and especially the practical resolutions that it has led him to, he begins the day's work, whatever it may be—studying, teaching, preparing sermons, missions or retreats, or writing books or articles. He is advised by his rules not to continue any one form of occupation, whatever it may be, for more than two consecutive hours without a diversion of mind for some minutes at least. About noon he devotes 15 minutes to a review of his morning's work, and plans the work of the afternoon, so as to do better. Dinner is taken in common, and then, according to rule, one hour is passed in recreation in common. About [illegible] p. m. the community assemble for the recital of the litany of the saints of the Blessed Virgin. This is the only daily spiritual exercise in common enjoined by rule.

WONDERFUL PARKS.

HAVELOCK.—Central Park, New York, was the first municipal park in the world. First ground inclosed in England for a park was at Woodstock in 1123. Largest parks: Blue Hills, Boston, 4906 acres; Middlesex Fells another great Boston park, is even larger; Fairmount, Philadelphia, 3000; Balboa, San Diego, Cal., 1400; Forest, St. Louis, 1372; Swope, Kansas City, 1354; Golden Gate, San Francisco, 1043; Central, New York, [illegible]; Belle Isle, Detroit, 700. Largest Paris park, Bois de Boulogne, 2250 acres. Regent's Park, London, has over [illegible] acres. Yellowstone Park, [illegible] acres, is the largest natural park. Windsor Park, London, partly improved, has [illegible] acres. Prater Park, Vienna, has more than [illegible] acres. Largest natural parks: Yellowstone, in Wyoming, Montana and Idaho, 2,142,720 acres; Yosemite, California, [illegible]; Glacier, Montana, approximately 915,000; Mount Rainier, Washington, 207,360; Sequoia, California, [illegible]; General Grant, California, [illegible]; Crater Lake, Oregon, 159,360; Wind Cave, South Dakota, 10,522; Platt, Oklahoma, 848.22; Mesa Verde, Colorado, [illegible]; Sullys Hill, North Dakota, [illegible]; Casa Grande Ruin, Arizona, 480; Rocky Mountain, Colorado, approximately [illegible]; Hot Springs Reservation, Ark., [illegible]. One who has seen all the great parks says as to the "finest:" There are some parks that excel in one particular and others in another. Take, for instance, Golden Gate Park as to flowers growing outdoors the year round, it is the finest for that; Fairmount Park in Philadelphia is probably the finest for scenery; Central Park is the finest for some other particular feature, and the same as to European parks." The melting rills from the enormous ice masses of Glacier National Park help to feed all three of the oceans that wash the shores of North America. It is possible to launch three chips from points within gunshot of each other in the park, which, with propitious currents, will eventually float, one into the Gulf of Mexico, the second into the Pacific and the third into Hudson Bay. Here, amid the almost unexplored fastnesses of Northern Montana, is where the waters of the continent divide—north by the Little Belly River and the Saskatchewan to the Arctic Ocean; eastward, the Marias and Milk rivers take the waters of innumerable lakes into the Missouri and Mississippi, and westward glacier floods are poured into the Flathead, which through Clark's Ford, finds its way to the Columbia and the Pacific. Glacier Park is the continent's great watershed.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MRS. GARDNER.—No premium on any 1853 half if arrows at date; '57 cent is worth 7 cts. No premium on your other coins.

WORRIED.—Facts you state are not sufficient in which to say how her estate will be distributed. When of age the guardianship will cease and she may then will it to you.

TOMMY.—Eighth wedding anniversary, rubber. Prize luncheon—"Chicken" salad: Pork boiled tender, a rather lean piece or pork tenderloin, olives, pickles (preference of plain or stuffed olives, sweet or sour pickles). Cheese pimento sandwiches, orange or lemon ice, small cakes. This can all be served on one large plate, the ice in individual sherbet cups. German coffee cake: Take any desired amount of light bread sponge, add several beaten eggs, raisins, half cup melted lard or butter, one cup sugar; add flour enough to make slightly stiff, working it with a spoon; not so stiff as bread dough; let rise, then knead lightly with more flour. Put in greased tins and let rise until light. Before baking, rub top with mixture of cream, sugar, cinnamon. Bake brown. Serve either hot or cold.

MUCH OBLIGED.—For West Point apply to Senator or Congressman. The principal subjects taught: mathematics, English, French, drawing, drill regulations of all arms, natural and experimental philosophy, chemistry, chemical physics, mineralogy, geology, electricity, history, international, constitutional and military law, Spanish, civil and military engineering, art and science of war, and ordnance and gunnery. About one-fourth of those appointed usually fail to pass preliminary examinations, and but little over half the remainder are finally graduated. The discipline is very strict—even more so than in the army and the enforcement of penalties for offences is inflexible rather than severe. Academic duties begin Sept. 1 and continue until June 4. Examinations for cadets not having made satisfactory progress in studies are held in Dec. and June, and cadets found proficient in studies and correct in conduct are given the particular standing in their class to which their merits entitle them. From about middle of June to end of August cadets live in camp, engaged only in military duties and receiving practical military instruction. Cadets are allowed but one leave of absence during the four-years' course and this is granted at expiration of first two years. Pay of cadet [illegible] per year, and, with proper economy, is sufficient for his support.

GERMAN OFFENSIVE ANTICIPATED WHEN BIG RETREAT ENDS

A Successful Gateway.

Only one grave danger confronts the Germans, and so far there is every sign that they have avoided it. A retreat is one of the most difficult of all military operations, and this is true not alone because of the dangers incident to going back, but also to the possible loss of morale of the retreating troops and the consequent difficulty in rallying them to stand on a new position.

When I was in the British lines there were several Generals who expressed their doubt as to whether the Germans could get away, but the real doubt was as to their ability to stand on the new position if they should retire. The "getting away" has been successful beyond anything any critic could have expected; we are soon to see whether the halt and stand will be equally successful.

Summing up, then, the situation as it exists, we are seeing a retreat from the lines taken in September and October, 1914. We are seeing a retreat which is a consequence primarily of the Battle of the Marne, where the Germans missed their chance for a decision, and a direct consequence of the Battle of the Somme, where the British and the French dented the German line between Arras and Noyon so deeply that it became necessary to retire to a new front between those points. We may see a further extension of that retreat, so that the line runs north and south from Laon, east of Soissons, to some point west of Lille.

Such a retreat is purely strategical. All along the point has been made by the allies that the possession of territory itself means nothing, and on their own statement it is fair to recognize that the territory now abandoned by the Germans has little military value.

If to the Frontier.

Passing to the second question, "What will follow from a retreat to the frontier?" one may say this: First of all, such a retreat is unlikely because it would mean the abandonment of a great deal of territory which has a material value, large cities, the entire railroad system of Northern France, the coal region of Lens, and it would deprive the Germans of the advantage they possess in holding against ultimate settlement a large and valuable section of Northern France.

If such a retreat takes place we shall be bound to conclude that the Germans are very short of men and that they have made the retreat primarily to reduce their line and thus to release men. Their front would be shortened by not less than 80 miles by such a retirement, and this would release perhaps 500,000 men.

If such a retreat is to take place we may expect the Germans sooner or later to make a stand on a line starting about Lille, going southeast through Valenciennes, in front of Maubeuge, to Hirson, and thence to Mezieres, on the Meuse, and along the Meuse to the present position before Verdun. Generally speaking, such a position would be based upon the old French covering forts at the Belgian frontier, the positions from which the French and British advanced to their defeats in August, 1914.

Two Weeks to Decide.

The test, of course, of all their purposes will be when we see whether they stand or retire along the Hindenburg line.

Now, turning to the broader question, what does the German retreat mean in the larger possibilities of the war? If it is comprehended in a retirement to the Hindenburg line it may mean merely a local withdrawal to a new position stronger than the old, since the old has been battered and bent by the Battle of the Somme. It may mean that having achieved this strategic withdrawal, the Germans will stand on the defensive in the West from the North Sea to Switzerland and strike against Russia, against Italy or in the Balkans.

It may, on the other hand, mean that the Germans will strike either against the British in Flanders, or against the French in Champagne or in Lorraine on the western front. It the Germans do not feel that their western line is safe against the allies for another summer campaign, they will attack in the West, because they could not leave the West in peril and send the masses of their troops to the East, as they did in 1915, or to Galicia and Rumania, as they did in 1916, after their own operation at Verdun had failed.

Personally, my judgment is that we shall see a German attack directed either against the French or against the British, an attack which will be comparable to that of Verdun and will have as its primary purpose an anticipation of an allied offensive in the West.

There is the possibility of some sudden German blow following immediately upon the present retreat, and such a blow will probably fall somewhere along the western front. The German military critics, quite justly, point to the retreat of Hindenburg from Warsaw in 1914, which was followed by the great advance upon Lodz in November. The greatest mistake that could possibly be made would be to believe that the Germans have not the man power to strike again, and that their withdrawal from their old lines is a confession of complete weakness and is a prelude to a general breakdown.

A Recoil to Leap the Better.

The present German retirement is, to use the French phrase, a recoil to leap forward the better. It is an incident in a larger strategy which is not defensive but offensive. If she goes back to the French frontier, then we may conclude that the attack will come either in the shape of a drive for Calais or in another effort to regain the road to Nancy; or what is more likely, an attack upon Russia.

However, in view of what happened in Rumania last year, when all the opening moves seemed to forecast a great reverse for the Central Powers, we shall do well now to await the disclosure of the actual German purpose.

SOCIETY NEWS

French War Exhibit and Bazar Will Be Big Social Event Easter Week—Mrs. Edward J. Walsh to Have Garden Booth and Mrs. Charles Cummings Collins Gives "Bal Poudre"—Grand Opera Another Attraction for Week.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

THE French War Exhibit, around which the Allied Bazaar of Chicago which made $700,000 was built, is coming here Easter week.

If plans now being made crystallize the affair here will be one of the most brilliant social events, as well as one of the most interesting exhibits, taking place together for a long time.

Moolah Temple has been engaged for the week, and now the various French relief associations are arranging to have booths, one of which will be Mrs. Edward J. Walsh's for the St. Louis branch of the American Branch for French Wounded. A "Bal Poudre" has been announced by Mrs. Charles Cummings Collins for Tuesday evening.

The exhibit which Baron Charles Huard is showing throughout the country includes all sorts of things connected with the war, even to certain kinds of cannon. There are going to be some trenches built somewhere near the Temple that will be part of the exhibit.

A portion of the Temple will be set aside for dancing in the afternoon and evening, which will be managed by Mrs. Collins with a corps of assistants.

Mrs. Walsh's garden will be laid out like a formal garden with flowers and benches and lattices and everything for a garden—tools, smocks and hats will be offered for sale. The garden will be one of the attractions of the show.

The "Bal Poudre" looms large on the calendar, as it will be one of the "events of the year." It will be the second night of the grand opera, but that will make no difference, as it will furnish a delightful place to go after the opera.

The Puccini Festival, as the opera season of four performances is called this year, will add to the gayety of the week with its performances Monday and Tuesday evenings, Wednesday matinee and evening. Already a number of boxes have been taken and the list so far is as follows: Mrs. J. L. Mauran, Mrs. John T. Davis Jr., Mrs. J. B. M. Kehlor, Mrs. Lon Hocker, Mrs. A. H. Bray, Miss Wilhelmina Mitchell, Edward A. Faust, William J. Lemp, Dan C. Nugent, H. L. Parker, M. Shoenberg, M. L. Wilkinson, Charles Nagel, Sigmond Baer, George Warren Brown, Henry W. Peters, August A. Busch, Benjamin Grats and P. Giuseffi.

LAST Sunday at the Spring Flower Show, when Miss Esther Lehman and Leon Landau were so earnestly engaged in conversation, no one would have guessed they were engaging themselves to each other. Miss Lehman was one of the girls who assisted Mr. Landau's mother, Mrs. Louis Landau, in the Russian tearoom and all afternoon and evening she was shadowed by young Landau. Once during a lull, she perched herself upon the table at the side of the room to rest, and it was then it all happened.

Miss Lehman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Lehman of 5652 Vernon avenue, and she is planning to be married on the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of her parents in the autumn. Landau is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Landau of 5795 Westminster place.

A hemstitching machine has been installed by the Woman's Specialty Shop in Delmar boulevard, at Hamilton, number 5880; 10c a yard.—ADV.

THE engagement is being announced today of Miss Lily Schuchman to Second Lieutenant Maurice Faure who will arrive in St. Louis tonight. Lieut. Faure was a member of the Washington University faculty and obtained leave to go to France for service and is in the 117th Regiment. He is now on leave of absence to this country and will shortly return to France.

Miss Schuchman is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus Schuchman of 1525 Lafayette avenue, where she resides with her brother, Alois Schuchman. She is a graduate of Mary Institute and has known her fiance for a number of years.

No plans have been made for the marriage, but it is probable that it will take place before Lieut. Faure returns to the front.

Cummings Corset Shop, Century Bldg. Our laced-in-front models have attracted the most fastidious to our shop.

Mrs. Cornelius Tompkins of 5037 Westminster place entertained at luncheon Thursday in honor of her niece, Miss Emily Tompkins, whose marriage to Douglas MacMillan will take place April 11. The guests included Mrs. Cornelius Tompkins Jr., Miss Mamie Tompkins,

Miss Ann Pallen of New York, Mrs. Logan Tompkins, the prospective bride's mother, Mrs. Francis A. Lane, Mrs. Thomas MacMillan, mother of the bridegroom to be, and Mrs. Bryan, grandmother of the prospective bride.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Renick of 2150 Lafayette avenue, gave a dinner last evening at the Riverview Club in honor of Miss Elma Scott. The other guests were Miss Edna Kiel, Barney Russell, Joe Ayers and Tom White.

NEARLY all the boxes for the Junior League "Follies" whiche will be presented at the Odeon April 20 and 21 have been subscribed for. Rehearsals will begin Wednesday and will afford much work and more diversion for many of the "smart set." Donald Macdonald is bringing on a set of coustumes with him and everyone is curious about them as they are described as "snappy."

To the interest of the enterprise has been added a prize of $25 for the most attractive composition suitable to be featured in the show, a waltz and something vivid and gay. The contestants must send them to Miss Frances Reid Jones before April 10 at 45 Portland Place.

THE EASIEST WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—ADV.

A Coat Sale That "Spells" Coat Supremacy

What Women Learn

WOMEN who come here to find what cannot be had elsewhere, and those who come to us for the first time are always amazed at the extent and variety of stock and gratified at the values.

Garland values compel purchases—create a demand, regardless of the amount of money a woman is willing to spend.

Certain women who have always preferred to spend a hundred dollars for a garment, just because it was marked a hundred dollars and not sixty-five or seventy-five, have come to Garland's and bought, and others who could only pay a limit of $25 or $35 have found here just what they wanted for a great deal less.

Thus the woman with the hundred to spend has come to us and spent $65 or $75, and her sister too with the limit of $25 or $35, and have each saved enough to become a Garland booster for life.

This sale, Monday, will be welcomed by the women whose limit for a Spring Coat is $25 or $35.

And the hundred dollar customer will also find the same measure of savings, if she'll come.

A Sale that will serve as an illustration and explain our leadership in popular priced Coats as well as in the higher class kind—"how" and "why" we are so far ahead of all other stores in the Middle West in volume of business in popular-priced as well as in the better Coats. It has taken years of specialization to attain this leadership, and now that we have it we're going to retain it by just such masterful values as these.

$30 to $35 Coats for $25

500 Coats altogether, about equally divided in quantities.

We've told you the materials, colors and sizes, fairly complete. That's easy—but the styles, that's different—and, to use a humorous phrase of an old-time footlight favorite: "You needn't ask us for all the styles, coz we aint 'agona tell." We would though, if we could, but there are so many, it's beyond our power to describe them.

Sport Coats, of course. Every woman, especially the younger set, must have a Sport Coat. Besides, they "go" for all daytime wear. Wide collars and huge pockets of big, bright colored plaid. Belts, some wide, others narrow—some Coats have 2 belts. Full length Coats for motoring or travel. Coats that flare and Coats that hang in straight silhouette. "Barrel" shape Coats. A Coat for all ages, for all figures, for all types, for all personalities, in one or the other of the 2 lots—$15 and $25.

Afternoon Coats—Evening Wraps

Mrs. O. G. Gibson of 5147 Vernon avenue entertained yesterday in honor of Mrs. John W. Riley of Waverly, N. Y., with a luncheon and "500" party. Tonquils and tulips formed the decorations. Among the guests were Mmes. Lemon, Cudmore, Fisher, Snyder, Gerleman, Herbert, Devoto, Woltjen, Predock, Lindsey.

The University Thimble Club was entertained at the home of Mrs. J. T. Garrett, 6225 Westminster place, Parkview, Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. R. P. Garrett, Mrs. Hiram Phillips, Mrs. Arthur Lauman and Mrs. F. P. Bronaugh assisted the hostess.

Mrs. Walter E. Gorg of 4250 Harris avenue entertained her Thursday Club on March 22, in honor of her fifth wedding anniversary. Those present were: Mmes. Gilmore Bloch, Adrian Eskeles, Sam Stein, Louis Zerman, Bruno Tietsch, Walter Gottheimer and Miss Miriam Gershon.

The Ladies' Aid of St. Mark's E. L. Church will hold a parcel post and bag sale March 29, 3 to 5 p. m., at the residence of Mrs. J. A. Smith, 5647 Maple avenue.

A St. Patrick's party was given by Miss Olivia Fischer of 3230 Michigan avenue. The house was decorated in green. Those present were: Misses M. Fitzgerald, M. Colbrunn, B. Campbell, M. Lydon, F. Gund, B. Fischer, A. Henley, I. Sullivan, E. Dieterle, N. Slater F. Adrian, M. Dolan, A. Miller, F. Fusche, V. Mace, M. Skews, T. Rolfing and H. McKenzie; Messrs. J. Lydon, G. Spelman, E. Bahnsen, J. Connors, A. Hesser, C. Reichmann, E. Banks, B. Mackin and J. Sicking.

A complimentary dinner was given by the men of Lafayette Park Presbyterian Church to the ladies of the congregation who served at the banquet for the foreign missionary meeting held in the church on Feb. 26. The dinner to the ladies, supervised entirely by the men, was a complete surprise. The table had runners of patriotic design and the napkins to match were folded to show the American Eagle.

Stewart Scott gave the address of welcome. The foreign mission menu follows: Chinese celery, Siamese olives, Persian roast beef, Japanese peas, India potatoes, Latin-American tomatoes, Korean lettuce, Alaskan ice cream, African cakes, Turkish coffee, Philippine nuts and missionary bread and butter.

During dinner the ladies were entertained with appropriate vocal and instrumental phonograph selections and also with after-dinner remarks by the heads of the different societies. The committee of six, who had charge of the affair, were Messrs. Stewart Scott, William H. Riester, W. Harding Davis, Frank R. Mayer, Charles D. Morley and R. J. Turnbull. Their assistants were the Rev. W. F. McMillin, Dr. George H. Mathes, Dr. J. F. Hardlicka and Messrs Robert Rankin, Elijah L. Galt, Charles W. Siegfried, H. Anderson, Lalley, Jones, Anderson, E. J. Neal, William Haldeway, George Marshall and Robert Sievarin.

Opening the Season With a Sale of Spring Suits

Twenty-five Stunning Models $25 New Spring Favorite Colors

Comparisons Shown by Our Shoppers

Here is a comparison in values to which I would call your attention:

This other shop, however, showed the suit at a price just Twenty Dollars higher than the Bedell price.

The suits were the same model, of the same fabric, similarly tailored, silk lined in the same way, and with the identical number of button trimmings.

This is not an unusual circumstance—our shoppers are constantly reporting similar comparisons.

The Twenty-five Dollar Suits mentioned in this advertisement were all made to compete directly with the best $29.00 and $30.00 suits in other leading establishments.

In some instances, indeed, they hit the $35.00 mark.

I want every woman to receive the new Bedell De Luxe Spring Catalogue of Metropolitan Fashions. If you will address me a postcard personally I will see that you receive the book promptly, with my compliments.

A. W. Bedell
President the Bedell Company

This extraordinary offering—a selection of twenty-five of the smartest, best tailored and trimmed Spring Suit Models at the one price of Twenty-five Dollars, measures the unequaled facilities of this organization.

You will not be afforded such a selection, so far as we have been able to discover, in any other establishment in America, under Thirty-five Dollars. These Suits are all the strictly tailored types, assembled as very special offerings from our regular Spring stocks, and specially priced for the occasion. They embrace:

New Burella Weaves	Tricotines, Whipcords
Poiret Twills, Tweeds	Poplins, Oxford Cloths
Gabardines, Serges

To give you an adequate idea of the twenty-five different models we would invite you to look over the latest Paris fashion news in the periodicals—and then to inspect the offerings of the most ultra-exclusive shops—which charge the highest prices.

They are filled with that youthful spirit which is the very life of smart fashion; absolutely correct, trim in figure, lined with the most exquisite of Spring silks.

In colors they offer you the entire scale of Spring's most demanded shades—navy blue, the sand shades, wine colors, biscuit, apple green, jade, the new lighter blues, chartreuse and the various magenta tints.

INCREASE SHOWN IN YEAR'S PATRONAGE OF THE SYMPHONY

Director Zach Is Retained and Personnel of Orchestra Will Not Be Cut.

By RICHARD L. STOKES

THE Symphony Orchestra concert at the Odeon last night closed the organization's current season, with the minor exceptions of today's "pop" concert and another special program, to be given during April at the Victoria Theater.

This afternoon's most heralded feature will be a genuine Indian drum, brought here to give realism to "Two Indian Dances," by Charles Sanford Skilton, professor of the theory of music at the University of Kansas, which will be played for the first time in St. Louis. The two gambols represented are those of the Cheyenne and Rogue River Indians of Oregon. The soloist will be Mrs. Annabel Clark Ghiselin, St. Louis soprano.

For next year it is announced that Max Zach, former viola soloist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will remain as director, and that the present personnel of the orchestra, 80 musicians, will not be cut down, nor probably increased. Some interesting figures concerning the attendance are made public by Arthur J. Gaines, manager of the Symphony Society.

The total paid Saturday evening attendance this year, he says, amounted to 21,690, as against 20,285 for last year. The increase was 1405, or 7 per cent. The average attendance this year was 1446, while that of last year was 1352.

The year's greatest triumph was shown in the Friday afternoon audiences, which mustered 20,423 this season, against 14,674 last year, an increase of 39 per cent. The average attendance last season at the Friday afternoon concerts was 978; this year it was 1361. The total attendance for both the Friday afternoon and Saturday night entertainments this year was 42,113, while that of last season was 34,954—an increase of 20½ per cent. The orchestra gave this season 19 "pop" concerts up to today, with a paid admission of 30,089. Last year's "pop" attendance numbered 29,737.

Soloists for Next Year.

Already a partial roster of next year's soloists has been announced. The list includes the singers, Louise Homer, Helen Stanley, Emilio de Gogorza, Reinald Werrenrath and Julia Culp; the pianists, Harold Bauer, Ossip Gabrilowitsch and Miss Guiomar Novaes, the latter being hailed as a new marvel from Brazil; Albert Spalding, considered one of the best American violinists, and William Willeke, for years violoncellist of the Kneisel Quartet, the disbandment of which was recently announced.

The orchestra will begin a four weeks' tour of St. Louis' trade territory in the Southwest on April 21, for the expenses of which the Chamber of Commerce has pledged $10,000. Four singers will be taken along, concerning whom comment has been made that none is a St. Louisan.

In casting up the account of the season just ending, there are recalled Zach's promises of a "liberal policy." He promised "guest" conductors, modern music, music of American composers and an abatement of the "encore evil," as he termed it. These engagements have been more or less kept, save that concerning encores.

The guest conductors formally announced were Edgar Stillman Kelley of Cincinnati, and Adolf Weidig of Chicago, both of whom directed their own works. It was noted that neither was a professional director, and that they were both surpassed by Eugene Ysaye's impromptu seizure of the baton at the concerts of Feb. 9-10, when he conducted the "Fantasie on a Popular Walloon Theme," by his brother, Theophile Ysaye. It was asserted at the time that under the Belgian violinist's direction, the orchestra displayed a fire and soul which nobody suspected it contained.

Novelties in Year's Program.

In the year's programs many novelties were presented. One was by a St. Louisan, Samuel Bollinger, whose eccentric Fantasie-Suite, "The Sphinx," was performed at the first concert. Other first-time pieces were: Mrs. H. H. A. Beach's Piano Concerto in C-sharp minor, of which the composer herself played the piano part; Bossi's "Intermezzi Goldoniani"; Boyle's "Symphonic Fantasie," Converse's "Ave at Vale," styled a tone poem for orchestra; Cesar Franck's symphonic poem, "Les Eolides"; Percy Grainger's "In a Nutshell" suite—the composer again being the piano soloist; Kalinnokow's "Second Symphony"; Richard Strauss' "Serenade for Wind Instruments"; Vivaldi's two-century-old violin concerto in G-minor, resurrected by Ysaye; Weidig's classic and brilliant "Symphonic Suite"; Edgar Stillman Kelley's "Alladdin Suite"; and Berlioz's tiresome symphony, "Harold in Italy."

The American composers represented were Mrs. Beach, Samuel Bollinger, George F. Boyle, Frederick S. Converse, Kelley and Weidig. The leading positions among these compositions were taken by Weidig's suite and Mrs. Beach's concerto. Among all the composers who contributed to the season's programs Wagner was far in the lead, with 15 numbers; Beethoven and Tschaikowsky were tied for second place, with five each. The Russian, Rimsky-Korsakow, and the Frenchman, Camille Saint-Saens, were rivals for third place, with three numbers each.

"Encore Evil" Still Flourishes.

Concerning the "encore evil," it seems that it flourishes as vigorously at the end of the season as it did at the beginning. Of the 11 soloists who appeared with the orchestra during the season, all but two were permitted to give extra numbers. These exceptions were Josef Hofmann and Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink. Hofmann aroused considerable resentment, not so much because he refused to give an encore, but because he sent a servant out to slam down the lid of the piano after he had finished playing. Mme. Schumann-Heink gave five numbers in three appearances and was not expected to contribute more to the program. Single encores were given by Mischa Elman, Efrem Zimbalist, Leopold Godowsky, Mrs. Beach, De Gogorza and Percy Grainger; and two encores were yielded by Ysaye. The most flagrant violation of the encore program was committed by Frieda Hempel, German soprano, who at her Friday afternoon concert gave an added number after each of her two appearances, and at her Saturday night concert was suffered to give three encores.

The financial statement of the season just ending, compared with that of a year ago, is set forth by the management in the following figures: Total expenses for the season 1915-16, $82,509.04, and for 1916-17, $94,815; total income, 1915-16, $50,160.51; 1916-17, $58,967.50; deficits to be made up, 1915-16, $32,348.53, and 1916-17, $35,847.50.

FRECKLES

March Brings Out Unsightly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

The woman with tender skin dreads March because it is likely to cover her face with ugly freckles. No matter how thick her veil, the sun and winds have a strong tendency to make her freckle.

Fortunately for her peace of mind the prescription, othine—double strength, makes it possible for even those most susceptible to freckles to keep their skin clear and white. No matter how stubborn a case of freckles you have, the double strength othine should remove them.

Get an ounce from your druggist and banish the freckles. Money back if it fails.—ADVERTISEMENT.

ELLIS HEADS FISH COMMISSION

St. Louisan a Veteran Angler and Life Student of Fish Protection.

William W. Ellis of 3622 Bamberger avenue, a veteran fisherman, widely known to sportsmen as "Billy Ellis," has been appointed President of the State Fisheries Commission, to succeed John P. Woods, whose term expired Jan. 1.

Ellis has made a lifetime study of the propagation and protection of fish and is considered an expert fly maker and fly caster.

This week he will go to St. Joseph to inspect the fish hatchery there, and later he will tour the State in the commission's "fish car" to learn where fish propagation is most needed.

Why Look Wrinkled and Old? To Renew Youthful Beauty Try This French Recipe Tonight

Mlle. Simone Mareix

Many a wrinkled, hollow-cheeked, faded-looking woman who, after countless vain trials with soaps, creams and treatments, had given up all hope of ever regaining her youthful charm has made herself beautiful, with every sign of wrinkles and complexion blemishes gone by means of the following French beauty recipe. Are you as beautiful and youthful looking as you should be? If not, you owe it to yourself and to those who care most for you to appear at your best. Make this test tonight. Look at your face in the mirror, under a bright light and see if you have crowsfeet or pouches around the eyes, deep lines or furrows in the forehead or about the mouth, enlarged pores, blackheads, or a coarse, mottled complexion. Then wash your face in clear warm water and rub in a teaspoonful of Creme Tokalon Roseated, which you will find entirely different from any other cream. In the morning wash the face with cold water and rub in more cream, after which use a pure, specially adherent face powder like Poudre Pe-tallas or Poudre Fascination de Tokalon. Instantly you will note the improvement. Day by day watch how the old, hardened, coarse, rough skin becomes new, fresh, soft and beautiful, simply because you have helped it in the Right Way to act freely and renew its youthful activity. But don't expect to accomplish this with creams, soaps or lotions containing a large amount of free alkali, as it is only a question of time when this will destroy the delicate skin tissues and completely ruin the complexion. You must use a pure neutral, especially prepared product, such as Creme Tokalon Roseated, to rebuild the worn-out cells so as to bring back a true girlish freshness and glowing loveliness to the skin. If you have bad wrinkles, get a box of Japanese Ice Pencils from your druggist and use them in connection with the cream, and you can get quick action on the deepest wrinkle, no matter of how long standing.

Note: Mlle. Simone Mareix, the great Paris beauty expert, originated the above method and won two International Beauty Prizes. She is so positive that it will banish every complexion blemish and enable any woman between thirty and sixty to quickly make herself look from five to fifteen years younger that she personally guarantees success in every case or will refund the amount paid for any products she recommends, provided you take your dealer's receipt at the time you make the purchase. Furthermore, she offers to forfeit $200.00 to any charitable institution if it can be shown that this method will not give most astonishing new beauty to wrinkled, careworn, aged women in three days' time. Her American address is Simone Mareix, 20 West 22nd Street, New York. You can obtain the articles mentioned above at small cost from Wolff-Wilson, Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney, Johnson-Enderle-Pauley, Judge & Dolph and Nugents', or most any good druggist or department store in this city.

HOME GARDENS URGED TO CUT LIVING COST

National Body Formed to Have 1,000,000 Men, Women and Children Till Idle Land.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—When the school and home gardening movements started in the United States a score of years ago, few persons foresaw that some day this miniature farming of urban lots might prove of great economic benefit to the entire population. Up to the present the movement has been fostered as a social service—to give boys and girls habits of industry and to afford to dwellers in congested districts enjoyable, healthful and profitable occupation in their leisure, with incidental aid in beautifying cities and towns by cleaning up the back yards and vacant lots.

The present food crisis, which may become more acute in the event of a serious war, sems to have brought the day in which the idle lands within the American municipalities are likely to become an important source of food supply. So seriously is the matter regarded that a number of well-known educators and philanthropists have organized in Washington the National Emergency Food Garden Commission devoted to the purpose of putting a million men, woman and children on city and town gardens this spring, to raise vegetables for their families. Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Forestry Association, is the originator of the movement and the head of it.

The National Emergency Food Garden Commission takes the scientific lore of the official departments and retails it in simple, practical form to the prospective home gardeners through the medium of the daily press, which is eagerly co-operating to make the campaign a success. The official bureaus, too, warmly welcomed the newcomer, realizing their own limitations in the matter of practical publicity.

The plan adopted by the commission is first to create garden volunteers by making the dwellers in cities and towns realize the danger in the food situation this year, and then to give these volunteers daily instruction in gardening from the [illegible] of seeds in hotbeds to the harvesting of the ripe crops.

A program of organ, piano, vocal and violin music will be given this evening, from 4:30 to 6:15 at St. John's Methodist Church, King's Highway and Washington avenue. Those taking part will be Mrs. Lula Kunkel-Burg, Mrs. A. I. Epstein, A. I. Epstein and Miss Carolyne Rain.

Priest's Drama to Be Presented.

"The Upper Room," a drama by Father Hugh Benson, will have its first presentation in the alumnae hall at the Visitation Convent at 3 p. m. next Saturday and will be repeated next Sunday at the same hour.

Beginning Tuesday, This Week,
Every Afternoon at 3 O'Clock

THE Marquis de Giafferri will exhibit a large collection of imported models created by the foremost couturiers of Paris, and personally chosen by him for this purpose, together with accessories.

EVERY morning Mons. Giafferri can be seen in our Salon des Costumes, to show the modes more intimately and to discuss styles with our patrons.

U. S. PENSIONS FOR 414 PERSONS IN GERMANY

Payments in Last Fiscal Year Were $82,515 — Checks Withheld Temporarily.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Pension officials denied today a recent report from Berlin that the Spanish Ambassador in Berlin has been ordered to stop further payment of United States Civil War pensions to widows of veterans who have failed to preserve their citizenship. If the Spanish Ambassador has made such a ruling, he has done it without instructions of the State Department.

When the United States broke off diplomatic relations with Germany the Commissioner of Pensions issued an order directing that for the present pension checks addressed to anybody in Germany be withheld during the discontinuance of diplomatic relations. It was also directed that the same order apply to any other foreign country upon the discontinuance of diplomatic relations.

Up to Feb. 1, the Pension Office had been sending pension checks to Germany in the diplomatic pouches, through the courtesy of the State Department. The severance of diplomatic relations has made this arrangement an impossibility.

Pension checks temporarily withheld will be paid as soon as diplomatic relations are resumed. In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, there was paid out in pensions to 414 persons in Germany the sum of $82,515.42.

MISS ANGLIN IN GREEK DRAMA

Damrosch Symphonic Production May Visit St. Louis.

St. Louis may have the opportunity, a year hence, to see the Anglin-Damrosch symphonic presentation of Greek plays, such as was given in San Francisco during the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and will be given in New York next winter. Miss Anglin played here last June in the open-air production of "As You Like It."

Margaret Anglin's repertoire of Greek tragedy, in English, includes "Antigone," "Electra," "Iphigenia" and "Medea." The musical setting for these plays has been arranged by Walter Damrosch, and will be played by the entire New York Symphony Orchestra under his direction. A tour of the principal cities will follow the New York engagement.

Boy Pianist to Give Recital.

The Knabe Ampico Reproducing Piano

Enables You to Hear the World's Greatest Pianists Right in Your Own Home.

Mr. Albert Wegman, musical critic of the St. Louis Times, wrote the following criticism of the Knabe Ampico after attending the Godowsky Ampico Comparison Concert given at the Odeon, Feb. 26th last:

"Ocular evidence was necessary to determine whether the work was being done by Godowsky's hands, or by the Reproducing Piano. A mirror could not more accurately reflect the player's image than this Knabe Ampico reflected his playing. Tone, shading and phrasing were perfectly reproduced.

ONLY PERSONALITY LACKING

"Apparently, nowadays, to bring to one's own fireside in recital all the great virtuosi of the day, all that is necessary is to acquire a Knabe reproducing piano. All that is lacking is the personality—which, in most cases, is a decided advantage."

GOV. GARDNER TELLS WHAT LEGISLATURE HAS ACCOMPLISHED

State will use all the money derived from automobile licenses, options, taxes, etc., for road building. Heretofore this money has been distributed among the different counties to pay for dragging the roads. Not a mile of permanent roads was built from the State money. The automobile license fees have been doubled, and will produce most of the money to be used for road building. Under the old system the State's money was practically wasted, while under the new law permanent roads will be built with it.

The most determined fight in the Legislature was made on Gov. Gardner's prison reform bill, which, in addition to providing for a commission to govern all penal institutions, forever abolishes the contract labor system in this State. The leaders of the fight on this bill had made up their minds to force the retention of the contract-labor system.

From a member of the Legislature who attended an all-day and night conference with the Governor on this bill I obtained the facts in probably what was the most dramatic fight of the session.

"The opponents of the prison bill decided to storm the Governor in the mansion," my informant said. "They finally won over nearly all the State officials who are now members of the Board of Prison Inspectors, and leaders of the House and Senate, and other State officials.

"A delegation of 25 or 30 called on the Governor in a body, each prepared to make a fight to save the convict labor system. The subject was argued for hours, the Governor standing alone against the entire body. It was put up to him that there was no more money to run the penitentiary. An ultimatum was served upon him to this effect: That unless the Governor consented to the extension of the prison contracts for another year, the contractors would withdraw from the penitentiary next day, removing all of their materials and leaving the convicts without any work. They also tried to get the Governor to consent to an arrangement by which the contractors would furnish the raw materials and buy the finished product from the State, the actual work of manufacturing articles to be done by convicts under State supervision.

Offered to Use His Own Credit.

"Gov. Gardner rejected both propositions. He told the prison inspectors that they had the power to renew the contracts, but if they did it, they would have to be responsible to the people of the State.

"The conference lasted until 3 a. m. As a parting shot at the Governor, a spokesman for the contract system said to him: 'Governor, what are we going to do tomorrow if the contractors make good on their threat to withdraw from the penitentiary?'

"The Governor sprang to his feet and pounded the table with his fist.

"Tell them to withdraw if they want to. The State of Missouri may be busted, and it may not be able to borrow another dollar to run the penitentiary, but I am not busted! I'll go to St. Louis and borrow the money on my own account, to pay the running expenses of the institution.' "

When the advocates of the convict labor system found that they could not move the Governor, opposition to his bill dwindled to nothing, and it was finally passed almost without a dissenting vote.

Gov. Gardner has arranged for a loan of $2,000,000 from the banks to pay the expenses of the State government until the new revenues are available and the credit of the State is restored. The Governor regards this loan as almost as important as some of his legislation.

"It took me a month," he said, "to find a lawyer who would say that I had the power to borrow the money. The Attorney-General and Fred Lehmann and John F. Lee of St. Louis all agreed, when the question was put up to them, that the State had the power to borrow the money. If we had to take the money out of current revenue to pay off the State's indebtedness, it would be Oct. 1 before we could get a dollar for this year's expenses. The State has to pay 8 per cent interest for some of the money it has borrowed. By borrowing $2,000,000 the State will save $100,000 in interest.

"St. Louis banks," Gov. Gardner said slowly, "may not get this loan. Kansas City wants it. The St. Louis banks want the question of the State's power to borrow the money tested in the courts. The Kansas City bankers are eager for the loan without a court test."

The Governor paused. He made no comment, but there was somethng in his manner that indicated that he was a little bit ashamed of his home city.

"You believe that the laws passed by the Legislature will produce revenue sufficient for all reasonable requirements of the State?"

Cites Carelessness in Legislation.

"Yes. It is my expectation to pay off the indebtedness of $2,300,000, to put $750,000 into farms and improvements for the penitentiary, to pay all of the running expenses of the State, repair and improve the State institutions, and leave a comfortable actual cash balance—not a paper balance—in the treasury when my term expires.

"Let me call your attention to a few things to show the people how carelessly their Government has been run. The Legislature of 1915 passed a Confederate pension bill, which provided for the distribution of $200,000 among the veterans. There was only $30,000 available, but that seemed to make no difference. The legislation was passed, and to comply with that legislation, I have to pay off the deficit, and raise $240,000 more to pay future pensions. The same thing was true of the legislation for stamping out tuberculosis among cattle. The Legislature passed a law authorizing the slaughter, by the State, of tubercular cattle, the owner to be paid from $40 to $200 for each animal. An appropriation of only $30,000 was made. The State is now behind $135,000.

"There are many other such instances of ill-considered appropriations and laws. One thing that I want to do is to conduct State affairs on a business basis, and to eliminate all such guess-work."

"What other legislation have you in mind that ought to be enacted by the next Legislature?"

"My program included a mortgage recording tax, a central board of control for the charitable institutions and workingmen's compensation. Those three bills failed. I feel sure the benefits from the new laws passed by the Legislature which has just adjourned will be so apparent that when the next Legislature meets, in 1919, it will not fail to pass these three laws.

"I have been so busy working on this program that I have not had time to make further plans for upbuilding the State. We have made many radical departures. The secured debt tax is the first law ever passed in this State separating the classes of property for taxation. The enactment of this law ought to have a good moral effect, for it will do away with perjury in making tax returns.

"Let me illustrate. Suppose Cole County should issue $100,000 worth of 4 per cent waterworks bonds. These bonds

HAIR OFTEN RUINED BY WASHING WITH SOAP

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—ADV.

Train Your Hair as an Actress Does.

No class of people devotes as much time to beauty as do actresses, and so they must be more careful to retain and develop their charms. Inquiry develops the information that in this case they find it dangerous to shampoo with any makeshift hair cleanser. The majority say that to have the best hair wash and scalp stimulator at a cost of about three cents, one need only get a package of canthrox from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. After its use the hair dries rapidly, with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are quickly dissolved and entirely disappear when you rinse the hair. After this your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—ADV.

are sold in St. Louis. Under the secured debt tax law, the owner will pay a tax of $5 on each $1000 bond. Under the old law the tax would have been $23.50 a bond, while the entire income from the bond would be only $40. By exempting bonds from all other taxation, and imposing this reasonable tax, the incentive for perjury is removed.

"I think the State ought to have the power to separate the State sources of taxation from the county sources. The State revenues should be derived from taxes on corporations, railroads, inheritances, franchises, etc., leaving to the counties their real estate and personal property from which to raise their local revenues.

Good Example for Next Legislature.

"My hope is that the next Legislature will do as much for Missouri as the one that has just adjourned. I feel deeply indebted to the men who worked so faithfully and unselfishly with me to put into effect the laws which were absolutely necessary to rehabilitate the State's financial system.

"I was told when I suggested my program that it was too ambitious; that it would be impossible to get it adopted; that every Governor of the State since—oh, what's the name of that old red-whiskered fellow up there on the big canvas? (We were in the reception room where the oil paintings of former Governors are hung)—Brown—B. Gratz Brown—had recommended the abolition of the convict labor system, and none had been able to accomplish it, and that no Governor had succeeded in getting a revenue bill passed in the last 16 years.

"I called a series of conferences in St. Louis before the Legislature met, and we discussed the needs of the State. Most of the bills were agreed upon at these conferences, and were drawn, or practically drawn, before the Legislature convened. I familiarized myself with the State's needs, and the reports of the conferences prepared the minds of the people for the legislation which was enacted."

Gov. Gardner will have a busy time for the next 30 days. There are 213 bills passed by th Legislature which he will have to read and approve or veto; there are appropriation bills aggregating $20,000,000, with 5000 different items, and the State Board of Equalization, of which he is chairman, is now in session and will be in session for several weeks.

His Program Not Yet Completed.

Nor is that all. I walked with the Governor from the mansion to the Capitol. As we approached the Capitol I observed that the benches in front of the building were filled with people; that both sides of the stairway leading to his office were lined with other people, and that 50 or 100 more were seated in the big reception rooms.

"A small detachment of job seekers," the Governor remarked, as he pulled off his coat and dived into his private office.

extent discourage powers of reaction and the misguided extremist.

(The United States and all the entente Powers have extended this recognition since Mr. Straus' article was written, America being the first to accord it this friendly interest).

We owe that to the allies, to the cause of liberty, to the forces that will make possible the future reorganization of the world upon a basis of liberty and justice. Unless we, together with the other nations, stand for a free Russia, we will have to stand at no distant future against a reconstructed autocratic Russia. With a state of war existing between us and Germany we are as materially concerned with the maintenance of a free Russia as the Russian people themselves.

It must be gratifying to learn, from a statement made by the liberal-minded and distinguished statesman, Baron Rosen, who for many years was Russian Ambassador at Washington, that the present Government is composed of men constituting the flower of the nation. Russia's greatest and most distinguished men in every respect.

The conditions are so extraordinary that they find no precedent in diplomatic history. We are at this moment practically in a state of war with Russia's chief foe. The Russian revolution is largely due to machinations of this foe with the autocratic and reactionary powers in Russia. The restoration of that reactionary power would benefit Germany.

Therefore, it is clear that the foes of Germany have not only a moral but a selfish interest in aiding, encouraging and upholding free Government. For, as Baron Rosen says, "It will be realized now, as never before that Russia is not nominally, but actually, fighting for freedom."

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET.

A well-known actress gives the following recipe for gray hair: To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off. —Advertisement.

NOW FOR 4 WEEKS OF MUSICAL SHOWBILLS

"Betty" This Week, "Sybil" Next Week, Then Honky-Tonk Attractions.

Musical shows are the only form of entertainment now on the theatrical horizon for the rest of this season. Beginning with "Betty" tonight, the Jefferson Theater has booked four weeks of musical shows. The Shubert-Garrick Theater, which will go out of the film business after another week, may relieve this situation by giving a dramatic play bill or two after Easter, but no announcement as to this has yet been made.

"Betty" is a London musical play, and appears here as a Dillingham spectacle, with Raymond Hitchcock as the comedy star and Joseph Santley and Ivy Sawyer as the chief supporting players. Next week's musical show is "Sybil," with Donald Brian, Joseph Cawthorn and Wilda Bennett. For the weeks of April 8 and 15, entertainment of the "honky-tonk" variety will be provided, the first bill being the Passing Show of 1916, a New York Winter Garden frolic, with Ed Wynn as the star, and the second being Al Jolson in "Robinson Crusoe Jr.," another Winter Garden affair.

To return to "Betty," it tells the story of a philandering lordling who, when told that he must settle down and marry or forfeit his allowance, spites his father by marrying Betty, a pretty domestic. After he has deserted her, the father turns the tables by giving his allowance to Betty, to be doled out to her returning husband as she wills. Twenty musical numbers and dances punctuate the story, and the comedy hit of the piece is a song interpolated by Hitchcock, "Here Comes the Groom." Ivy Sawyer, a London singer, has the role of Betty. Young Joseph Santley, another of the cast, is pleasantly remembered here, having brought a musical play of his own to the Jefferson at the beginning of last season.

Last Week of "Intolerance."

The Griffith photodrama, "Intolerance,' begins the fifth and last week of its St. Louis engagement at the Shubert-Garrick today. One strong point in this film is the alternating appearance of three young women stars, all of them of first-rate ability, and two of them of considerable beauty. Mae Marsh, heroine of the modern romance, is not to be called beautiful, but her mobile, sensative face makes her, in the opinion of some, the most attractive personality of the whole four-track drama. Others believe she is rivaled in acting by Constance Talmadge, the tomboyish mountain girl of the Babylonian story. In the sixteenth century French story, Margery Wilson, as the Huguenot maid, has less chance for effective acting, but her charm is unescapable.

Griffith based the historical parts of his Babylonian story, it is announced, on cylinders recently discovered. He differs from Herodotus, "the father of history," in one important matter. Herodotus relates that the Persians got into Babylon by diverting the course of the river Euphrates, thus leaving an entrance beneath the walls at the point where the stream had been. The Griffith version is that the "intolerant" priests of Bel opened a gate to the enemy, because they were angry at the favor shown by the King to the rival worship of Ishtar. This sounds fully as reasonable as Herodotus' tale, if we assume that the priests were permitted to have charge of the public defenses.

"Rolling Stones" Repeated.

A second week of Edgar Selwyn's comedy-melodrama, "Rolling Stones," is announced by the Players Theater stock company. The play is nine parts melodrama and one part comedy, and its reception in the past week has shown that melodrama still makes a strong appeal to the St. Louis public. The story is that of two youths who start out to be highwaymen, but "reform" and attempt to get possession of an estate, one of them assuming the name of an heir supposed to have been killed in a railroad accident. The play is liberally sprinkled with love affairs.

Eddie Foy, who celebrated his sixtieth birthday a few days ago, will bring his progeny to the Columbia Theater tomorow. He now calls his children the Seven Younger Foys, since the word "little" no longer fits some of them. The Foys have an act new this season, entitled "The Old Woman in the Shoe," which was written by George V. Hobart and William Jerome. Julius Tannen, the glib "chatterbox" of past seasons, is also on the bill, having returned to vaudeville after playing the role of Mawruss Perlmutter for three seasons. Georgia Earle and company in a comedy; Arthur Deagon in songs and stories, and Frances Kennedy, comedienne, are three of the six other acts.

Melodrama comes back to the American today, under the title, "The Millionaire's Son and the Shop Girl." It is by W. G. Herman, author of "Any Man's Sister" and "Broadway After Dark." At the Grand Opera House tomorrow, S. Miller Kent will head the bill in a sketch, "The Real Mr. Q." The burlesque bills for the week are "The Thoroughbreds,' 'at the Standard, and "Burlesque Review" at the Gayety.

Will Give Organ Recital.

Charles Sanford Skilton, director of the department of organ and theory at the University of Kansas, will give an organ recital tomorrow night at the Church of the Messiah, Union boulevard and Von Versen avenue, in compliment to the Missouri Chapter of the American Guild of Organists. The second half of this program will be devoted to American composers.

Kunkel Concert Friday Evening.

The sixth and last of the Charles Kunkel concerts for this season will be given Friday evening at the Wednesday Club auditorium, presenting Isadore Greenberg, violinist; Miss Mary V. Williams mezzo soprano; Miss Leona Beckmann, pianist; Alphonse de Vos, tenor, and Lester O'Keefe, baritone.

CORNERSTONE OF $25,000 CHURCH TO BE LAID TODAY

The cornerstone of the new McCausland Avenue Presbyterian Church, on McCausland avenue between Horner and Plateau avenues, will be laid at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Those participating in the services will be the Rev. David Reiter, pastor of the church; the Rev. Baxter P. Fullerton, the Rev. Francis Lee Goff, the Rev. John W. MacIvor, the Rev. Fred G. Behner, Sherman H. Kleinschmidt and Orville P. Blake.

The McCausland Avenue Presbyterian Church is the outgrowth of a Sunday school started in July, 1882, by Miss Antonia Kriekenbaum, then a member of the Second Presbyterian Church and now a member of the McCausland Avenue Presbyterian Church. The present membership is 162 and the Sunday school enrollment is 304. The building is of Gothic type. The basement is stone, the superstructure of mat-surface brick of various shades and trimmed with Cathage stone, and the roof is slate. The total cost, including the lot, is $25,000. The superstructure is now half completed and will be dedicated and occupied about the middle of June.

(Toilet Talks).

A simple method for completely removing every trace of hair or fuzz is here given. This is painless and usually a single treatment will banish even stubborn growths. To remove hairs, make a thick paste with some powdered delatone and water, spread on hairy surface and after about two minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This method will not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be certain you get delatone.—ADV.

GLASS HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST A SPLENDID HABIT

Open sluices of system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink before breakfast a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity, and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast, and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with billiousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.—ADV.

U. S. REAFFIRMS CONDEMNATION OF REVOLT IN CUBA

Purpose of This Government to Support Cuban Government Is Reiterated.

HAVANA, March 24.—A note from the American Government to the Cuban Government reiterating the purpose of the United States to support the Cuban Government in its efforts to re-establish order, and condemning the conduct of the rebels, was delivered today by William F. Gonzales, the American Minister. The note follows:

"All declarations of the United States Government regarding the ill-conceived conflict in Cuba from the beginning have been clear and concise. There has been no occasion whatever for misunderstanding and nothing indicating that the United States could be forced into action which it has declared its determination not to adopt. But to remove all pretext of erroneous interpretations and reaffirm the condemnation of the revolt by the United States Government and its support of the Constitutional Government of Cuba, the United States Government makes the following unmistakable declaration:

"It has come to the knowledge of the United States that in Cuba propaganda persists against the Constitutional Government. The United States Government cannot understand how its policy could be misunderstood regarding the situation existing in Cuba. To avoid continuation of misunderstandings and misinterpretations of the declarations made by the United States Government, which have been published throughout the Cuban republic, which defined the policy of the United States in Cuba in unmistakable terms, it is desirable to reiterate the essential points of those declarations, to wit:

"1. The Constitutional Government of Cuba has been and will continue to be sustained and backed by the Government of the United States in its efforts to re-establish order throughout the territory of the republic.

"2. The United States Government, emphasizing its condemnation of the reprehensible conduct of those rising against the Constitutional Government in an effort to settle by force of arms controversies for which existing laws establish adequate legal remedies, desires to make known that until those in rebellion recognize their duties as Cuban citizens, lay down their arms and return to legality, the United States can hold no communication whatever with any of them and will be forced to regard them as outside the law and unworthy of its consideration."

Few Drops When Corns Hurt, Pain Stops! Corns Lift Out

Don't let corns ache twice! Lift any corn or callus off with fingers—Here's magic!

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without any pain.

This drug is called freezone and is a compound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati chemist.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

Freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without any irritation.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards.

Orrine Destroys Liquor Craving

The Orrine treatment will completely and absolutely destroy the desire or craving for whisky, beer and other intoxicants if taken according to directions. It is a simple and efficient home treatment. No detention from work or business; no publicity; no sanitarium expense.

We have sold a great quantity of Orrine during the past years and not once have we had a complaint in regard to it. This speaks very highly for the preparation and gives us pleasure in adding our testimony to its merits.

ORRINE is prepared in two forms: No. 1, a powder, tasteless and colorless, can be given secretly in food or drink; ORRINE No. 2, in pill form, is for those who wish to cure themselves. ORRINE costs only $1.00 a box. If, after a trial, you fail to get any benefit from ORRINE, your money will be refunded.

The Greatest Seller for Men Since the Advent of the Safety Razor

"No More Hot Irons Can Press My Trousers"

"No, Sir! No Sir! Never again will I go back to the oldtime, expensive, unsanitary, slow plan of having the tailor do my trousers pressing with a hot iron that scorches and hot steam that rots the very life out of the fibers of the cloth." You can now put on a new looking pair of trousers every morning of your life, with a New York Fifth Avenue finish (that by the old hot-iron tailor's method would cost you $2.00 a month), for less than 1c a month by just handing out a dollar for Leahey's

HEATLESS Trousers Press

(Protected by U. S. Letters Patent No. 1,112,922)

It's the simplest, cleverest and most efficient men's appliance that has ever been invented. There is no operating expense whatsoever. You just put your trousers in the press at night, hang the press over the back of a chair, or in the closet. Wake up next morning and get into your spick and span trousers, thoroughly pressed in fashion-plate form and thoroughly stretched into original form, smooth and snappy, with a knife-like crease from belt to boot. One pair of trousers can always look as well (if you use a Leahey Heatless Trousers Press) as the millionaire's 50 pairs.

A Personal Automatic Valet for Everybody

Hire your automatic Personal Valet for $1.00 for a Lifetime. Never wears out—always ready—and, best of all, there's no operating expense—THE FIRST COST IS THE LAST COST. Remember, you get freshly pressed trousers every day of your life.

REGULATIONS FOR GUIDANCE OF PRESS IN PRESENT CRISIS

Rules Framed by State, War and Navy Departments on Handling of News.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Regulations for the guidance of the press of the United States in handling news in the present emergency, framed by officials of the State, War and Navy Departments and accepted by representatives of the principal press associations, were made public today. The regulations follow:

"In view of the desire of the press of the country to refrain from the publication of information harmful to the public interest, and with the intention of securing the maximum publicity, with the least injury thereto, the following regulations are hereby issued for its guidance, which it is earnestly requested be closely observed:

"Regulation No. 1.—No information, reports or rumors should be published which tend to disclose the military and naval policies of the Government of the United States.

(This regulation is directed against the publication of any news or comment which might reveal the strategic dispositions or operation of armies or their sub-divisions or the fleet or its sub-divisions; any measures which might be adopted in consonance with the Department of State for the furtherance of American defense and, in general, any plans for the use of the army and navy during the existence of national emergency.)

"2. No information, reports or rumors should be published which tend to disclose:

"(A). Movements or employment of armies and their subdivisions; fleets and their subdivisions.

"(B). Movements of the vessels of the navy or their arrival at or departure from any port.

"(C). Departure of merchant vessels should not be mentioned, and it is desired that the name of the port of arrival be omitted.

"(D). Assignment or movement, whether as groups or individuals, of officers and men of the military and naval establishments.

"(E). Transportation of mails, supplies or munitions.

"(F). Information of any designs, inventions or test thereof; or of manufacture, transport or distribution of implements of war.

"(G). Concentration of military or naval supplies or location of such supplies.

"(H). Activities in or about arsenals, fortifications, army posts, naval magazines, navy yards, naval bases and radio stations.

"3. Publication of any maps, diagrams or photographs, which in any way might seem of military or naval value.

"4. No moving pictures should be displayed which are of military or naval value.

"5. Any doubtful matter should be submitted to the authorized representative of the department concerned, who shall give an immediate decision thereon and keep the inquiry made strictly confidential.

"6. It is requested that no information, reports or rumors attributing a policy to the Government in any international situation, not authorized by the President or a member of the Cabinet, be published without first consulting the Department of State.

"Note.—The above regulations shall not be enforced in any matters officially given to the press by properly authorized officials."

WILL DISCUSS PEACE WORK

Missouri Branch of National Organization Will Meet Tuesday.

A meeting to discuss the work of the League to Enforce Peace will be held at 2:30 Tuesday afternoon in the auditorium of the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney store. Frederick N. Judson, head of the Missouri Branch of the league; Percy Werner and Miss Amelia Fruchte will speak. Mrs. Chester A. Stauffer will sing, and Adeline Palmier Wagoner will recite "America! Mine!"

The League to Enforce Peace is a national organization, of which William H. Taft is president. Its purpose it not to attempt to end the present war, but to bring about agreements which shall prevent future wars.

COLORADO FUEL CO. ADOPTS SERVICE RETIREMENT SYSTEM

Employes Given Credit for Time With Corporation Regardless of Whether It Is Continuous.

PUEBLO, Colo., March 24.—A service retirement system for employes of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. was announced today by President J. F. Welborn at a conference here attended by company officials and employes' represntatives elected under the Industrial Representation Plan.

The retirement regulations differ radically from those of most other corporations, in that in figuring an employe's term of service he is given credit for all the time he has spent with the company, regardless of whether or not this time has been continuous. Under the plan as announced by President Welborn, employes and offcials are eligible for retirement at the end of stated periods of service. The monthly allowance in each case is to be 30 per cent of the average monthly pay during the 10 years preceding the retirement, but no regular allowance is to be less than $20 per month.

Men who have reached the age of 65 years, and women who have reached the age of 55, and who have been in the service of the company 20 years or longer, are to be placed on the retired list automatically. A man who has reached the age of 60 years, or a woman who has reached the age of 50 and who has been 30 years with the company, may, with the approval of the president, be retired.

Graceful and charming as well as dashing and adventurous, "The American Girl" is worthy of her name.

Every one of these stirring, spirited photodramas, is vivid with the strong, fearless individuality of a daughter of the prairies whose heart is as warm and true as her courage is high.

The American Girl
By Frederick R. Bechdolt

and her gallant horse show the way through the most dangerous and exciting adventures, evading by a hair's breadth the many perils which threaten to overwhelm them, and emerge in triumph from the most thrilling situations ever shown upon the screen.

Each "American Girl" picture is a complete story in itself. Played by Marin Sais. Produced by Kalem, whose short pictures are famous the world over. See a new one every week.

LEARN MUSIC AT HOME
Now Lessons Cost You Nothing!

At last you can have your dearest wish. Right in your own home you can learn to play your favorite musical instrument and bring into your own life and the lives of others endless pleasure and happiness through your music. By our new plan more than 200,000 gentlemen, ladies and children in all parts of the world have learned to play successfully and skillfully. Let us prove to you how easily and quickly you can learn to play any instrument BY NOTE in your own home, without a teacher, by our New Improved Home Study Method, and without paying a cent for instruction.

PIANO, ORGAN, VIOLIN, CORNET, MANDOLIN, BANJO, GUITAR, CELLO, PICCOLO, TROMBONE, CLARINET, FLUTE, HARP, SIGHT SINGING.

We want to enroll one pupil in each locality to help advertise our simplified system of teaching. For a short time only we are making this wonderful offer to teach you our full Conservatory Course—in your own home without paying a penny for lessons. Your only expense is for postage and for the Sheet Music used, which amount to only a few pennies a week. Send the coupon and learn for yourself how interesting and fascinating our new easy lessons are—how easy you can learn to play by note. No tiresome, dry exercise—no inconvenience. No trick music, no "numbers," yet simple, wonderful, amazing easy for even a mere child.

READ!

"Since I've been taking your lessons I've made over $60 with my violin."—Melvin Freeland, Macopin, N. J.

"When I started your lessons I knew nothing about the cornet or music, but now I can play almost any piece of music." — Kasson Swan, Denmar, Nova Scotia.

"Your method is splendid and far beyond my expectation. I will only be too glad to recommend your school to all my friends." — S. Wearmouth, Esquimalt, Canada.

"I want to extend the heartiest approval of your Piano Course. It has done more for me than years of other lessons. So complete in every way. I certainly can recommend it to others, and will do so."—Mozie N. Lewis, 319 Jefferson, Neosho, Mo.

"I just got home from my vacation, and the folks at home are delighted to hear me play the Organ so well. They say you have a wonderful system of teaching Music."—M. F. Allard, New York.

SEND NO MONEY

We want to have one pupil in each locality at once to help advertise our wonderful, easy system of teaching music. For a limited time we therefore offer our marvelous lessons without cost. Beginners or advanced pupils. We have hundreds of pupils right here in New York, the musical center of America, who prefer our Home Study method in place of best private teacher.

Let us send you our new 32-page book, which describes the secret principles of our wonderful New System of Music Teaching from beginning to end, and contains scores of letters from pupils who have become expert players as a result of the Course. We cannot explain this great plan here—you must see the book. Clip the Coupon and mail it today or send a postal card before you turn this page and forget.

PRINCES OF INDIA OPEN COFFERS TO AID GREAT BRITAIN

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

GWALIOR, India, Feb. 1.—The Maharajah Sindhai of Gwalior, one of the wealthiest and most powerful of the Indian Princes, today told a correspondent of the Associated Press that he and the other rulers of India were prepared to pour all their resources into the common war coffer until Germany was crushed. The Maharajah said that the world conflagration, by furnishing a common platform upon which all India could work, had done much to encourage co-operation among the Indian state and also to emphasize the essential unity of aims between them and the Government of India.

Gwalior, whose people he rules, under the British Government, is one of the central states of India, with a population of between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000.

The Maharajah is a Major-General in the British army and gave his personal services with the British expeditionary force to China in 1901. During the present war his troops have been in France, are fighting in East Africa and Egypt and are helping guard the Indian frontier from Quetta and Bannu.

Has Made Huge Donation.

How much he has donated he will not know until the war is over and the final accounts are in, but he has thus far expended somewhere in the neighborhood of 300,000 pounds sterling ($1,500,000), outside the upkeep of the hospital ship Loyalty. To this great contribution he modestly calls himself only a subscriber, but, as a matter of fact, during the two years and more the ship has been in commission, he has financed it himself and spent on it nearly 300,000 pounds. He also is expending 1000 pounds a month for the upkeep of a convalescent home for officers and soldiers which he established at Nairobi, Africa, at the beginning of the war.

Regarding Germany he was most uncompromising.

"I believe the war will continue for 18 months longer," he said, "and I hope that it will go until Germany has been crushed. I am sure that all India feels as I do about this matter.

"Germany firmly believed India would join the central allies, but there never was a chance that India would turn against Great Britain. Today Hindustan is standing loyally with the rest of the British Empire and will continue to stand until the last gun is fired."

Not Ready for Self Rule.

The correspondent referred to the fact that at the time of the recent conference of Princes in Delhi there was some talk that the conference might ultimately develop into a Council of Princes who should have a direct voice in matters of imperial moment.

"Yes, there was some expression of ideas along that line," said His Highness. "We hope that a Council of Princes or a House of Lords of some sort may be the outcome of these conferences. And we Princes also look forward to the time when British India also shall have a similar assembly under proper safeguards."

"What would happen in India if the British Government suddenly should decide to grant absolute self-rule to British India, should constitute the Princes absolute sovereigns, and should withdraw entirely from the country?" the correspondent asked.

"If you should take away our British sovereign someone else would have to rule. Who would it be? That is hard to say, but it would be a case of the survival of the fittest. If the British were to withdraw from India altogether the country would be plunged into chaos.

FINANCIAL ADVERTISING MEN TO MEET IN ST. LOUIS JUNE 3-7

Independent Organization to Hold Session Simultaneously With Advertising Clubs of World.

The Financial Advertisers' Association, a national organization of the advertising representatives of banks and trust companies, will meet in St. Louis June 3 to 7, in connection with the thirteenth annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

The association is an independent organization, with its own constitution and officers, and was formed two years ago at the Chicago convention, with John Ring Jr., publicity manager of the Mercantile Trust Co., as its first president. Another St. Louisan, M. E. Holderness, assistant cashier of the Third National Bank, is now president of the organization, having been elected to that office at the meeting in Philadelphia last year.

B. W. Moser of the St. Louis Union Trust Co., will have charge of the financial advertising exhibit. Among the speakers will be E. B. Wilson of the Bankers' Trust Co., New York; H. D. Robbins, a New York broker; H. B. Mulford, financial editor of the Chicago Evening Post; C. W. Bailey of Clarksville, Tenn., and W. R. More-head of the German-American Trust Co., Los Angeles. Besides the separate sessions, the association will meet with the main convention in its general meetings.

The committee in charge of the parade scheduled for Monday night, June 4, is headed by Arthur Siegel. The committee has planned to have erected on Twelfth street at a suitable point between Washington avenue and Market street, a grandstand to seat 10,000, which will be reserved for delegates. The parade of illuminated floats will giv St. Louis manufacturers, jobbres and wholesalers the opportunity to show their products. The delegates will march at the head of the line, and will be seated in the grandstand when the manufacturers' display passes.

Lots of "Snap" Lots of "Pep"

EVERY MAN WANTS IT
EVERYBODY NEEDS IT

Tells How Cadomene Tablets Comes to the Rescue of "Nerve-Shot" Mankind.

A physician genius—a genius in compounding of medicine, originated three-grain Cadomene Tablets for nerve-wrecked people, particularly men, who are averse to taking liquid tonics, because of their inconvenience and usually nauseous taste.

This physician and numerous others unite in saying that a superior formula has never been compounded, to take care of the ills for which Cadomene Tablets are recommended. Just a small tablet, with highly concentrated ingredients, sugar-coated and easy to swallow.

The man with lots of snap, and lots of "pep" in his make-up, gets there, accomplishes life's purpose, is welcomed in any company, is a social favorite, with myriads of friends who seek his company.

The exultation and the joy of living radiates a magnetism that is irresistible in such a person—man or woman. Good health, strong, well-nourished nerves, a cheerful mind, and hope eternal are ever present in the man of snap and fire. Some enjoy these blessings throughout life. Others for a brief period only—a few years at most—and then comes bleak, loathesome lives, and physical and mental decline.

There are many tributary causes, but always a "starved nervous system" is present, and manifested by symptoms, which even the public often suspect, and a few of which are, extreme nervousness, insomnia, cold extremities, sluggish circulation, despondency, aching in back, headache, kidney disorders, dreadful dreams, timidity, fear without cause, and a general inability to concentrate the mind, and act naturally and rationally as others do under all circumstances.

Elderly people who are suffering from la grippe and other debilitating sicknesses, who have lost appetite, nervous indigestion accompanied by weakness, aches and pains will find Cadomene the ideal tonic invigorating medicine they need.

A weakened nervous system will be indicated by some of the foregoing symptoms, and the treatment is simple, though most effective and lasting in its benefits. Go to your druggist, get a sealed tube of three-grain Cadomene Tablets, and begin their use at once. After you have taken them regularly a short time you will recognize the improvement in your feelings and sensations. Your appetite will improve, the food will taste better and you will begin to notice how springy is your step and how much brighter the world in general appears, and soon the "pep" and the "snap" of energy of a strong nervous system will be yours. Then you'll be glad you know about this marvelous medicine, Cadomene Tablets. —ADVERTISEMENT.

PADEREWSKI HERE, APRIL 23

Noted Polish Pianist Dedicated Odeon With Recital in 1900.

Ignace Paderewski is announced in recital at the Odeon on the evening of April 23. It is recalled that the great Polish pianist's visits here extend over a period of a quarter of a century, and that it was he who, in 1900, dedicated the Odeon by giving the first recital in the new building, then not entirely completed. Only a few persons attended his first recital, but as a rule he has since drawn capacity houses.

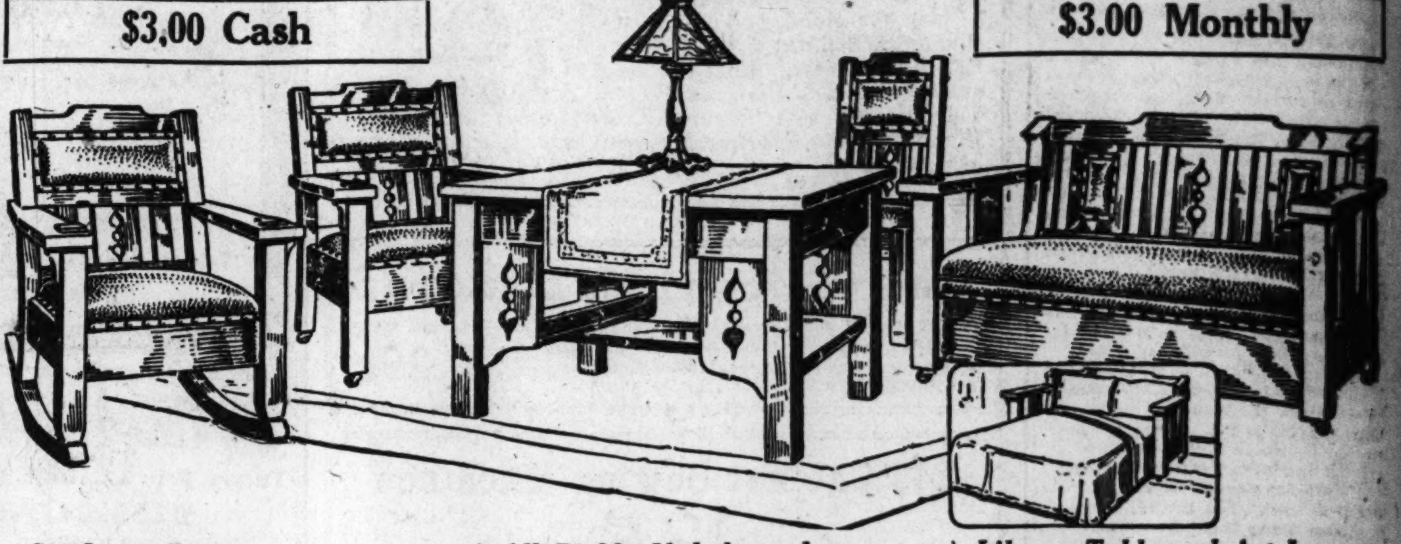
$3.00 Monthly



Six Large Pieces
Think of buying a massive Divan-Bed outfit like this—six large and handsome pieces, as illustrated—for only $52.50—it's a wonderful value—the greatest we have ever been in a position to offer—and we urge you to give it your prompt attention.

This Outfit Consists of
A massive "Divan-Bed" Davenport, Arm Rocker, Arm Chair, Reception Chair, Library Table and Art Lamp—the complete furnishings for your front room—all of a class and character that will please the most particular.

All Richly Upholstered
Both the backs and seats of the Divan-Bed Davenport, Chairs and Rockers are handsomely upholstered in imitation Spanish leather and present a pleasing contrast to the solid oak—the seats have cushion springs on steel supports so the upholstery can never sink or sag.

A Bed at Night
The Davenport can be instantly converted into a bed at night—the bedding can remain under the seat and comes into position when the seat is turned—has set of comfortable bed springs like an ordinary bed.

Library Table and Art Lamp
The Library Table matches the balance of this outfit—it is in Mission design, and has a convenient magazine and book rack underneath, as shown in the illustration. The Art Lamp has leaded-glass shade and is fitted for gas or electricity.

Entire Outfit for $52.50
We know, positively, that if you priced these pieces separately almost anywhere else, they would come to $65.00 or $70.00—so you can see what an unusual value we offer at $52.50, and the terms of payment are equally pleasing.

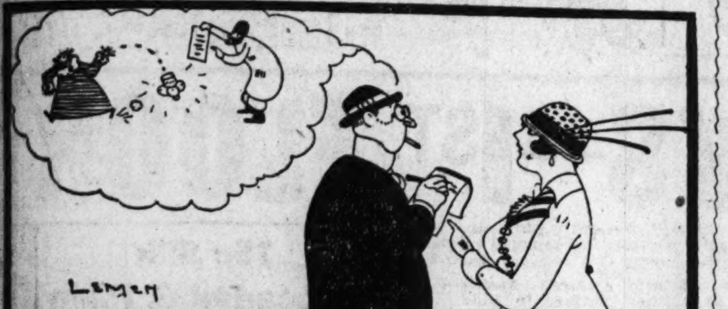
Jests and Jingles

By W. H. JAMES

ARABELLA AND THE CZAR.



MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN has told us all about it;
For she's the brightest girl in town, and don't you ever doubt it.
It seems the Czar went out to call upon the Russian army,
And said: "Well boys, how are you all? Is everybody for me?"
He thought they'd all throw up their caps and shout and yell and cheer him,
But, bless your soul those Cossack chaps let on they didn't hear him,
"Now what can be the matter here?" said Nick in perturbation;
"My august front, I greatly fear, evokes no wild elation."
A walking delegate stepped out; he had an ultimatum;
He turned the puzzled Czar about and thrust the paper at 'im.
It started with a long "Whereas" and ended with "Now be it,"
The which a resolution has, wherever you may see it.
These fighting men presumed to say, the Czar's dismay completing;
"Eight hours work and ten hours' pay, or we will quit retreating."
Now never since the world began, through all of histories' pages,
Had flying soldier, as he ran, demanded higher wages.
The Czar he couldn't see aright, without a little squinting
Why men who had been hired to fight should get a raise for sprinting.
And so he threw away his crown; we have no ground to doubt it;
The brightest girl in this big town has told us all about it.

THE KING PASSES.

(Chorus of Kings.)

WE are the rulers of the earth,
And land and rolling sea;
In us you'll find is all the worth

(First King.)

THE right Divine
Is surely mine,
The scepter and the crown.
If common swine
Dare cross the line
I quickly cut them down.

(Second King.)

I know that might
Makes all things right,
And heaven bids me speed;
The men that fight
And die at night
Are creatures for my need.

(Third King.)

MY sword I wield
Behind my shield—
A shield of common men.
The blood they yield
Upon the field
Shall make me strong again.

(All in chorus.)

ONLY kings, indeed, are brothers;
Earth affords no room for others.
Kings must live and men must die;
Lift the crown and scepter high.

(People, fearfully.)

WHO are these that call us swine,
Whence is this their right divine.
Are they not of fleshly birth,
Sprung as we are from the earth?
We have heard through devious ways,
For which to Heaven we give praise,
There is a land beyond the sea,
A glorious place where men are free.

(Soldiers in the distance.)

WE serve the King, we know not why;
We tremble at their passing by.
Our brothers are but worthless clods
And only Kingly right is God's.

(They advance and overhear the people.)

A GLORIOUS land beyond the sea;

(Soldiers.)

BROTHERS in arms, can this be so?
A land where men are freedmen all.
Not sodden slaves to strike a blow
That Kings may rise and men may fall?

(Enter King's officer.)

ATTENTION! Forward! Yonder swine
Crumble now before your line!
In the market place they plot

(The People.)

THERE is a land beyond the sea,
A glorious place where men are free.

(Soldiers stand fast.)

FIRE on our brothers we will not,
Though in the market place they plot.
Freedom is no fearsome thing
Seen by any but a King.
We, too, like they, would wish to be
In that land across the sea
Where every man is truly free.

(Officer rushes back to the Kings.)

FLY, fly, my Lords;
They've learned at last!
The people know;
The die is cast,
And freedom spreads its far-flung wings

OUR land, like that across the sea
Is a place where men are truly free.

JUST TALKING AROUND.

"HELLO, Binks."

"Howdy, Jinks. What do you think of Russia?"

"My wife says it's too bad."

"What? That the Russian people are free?"

"No, that it happened too late in the season to get out Russian styles for Easter."

"I'll bet the Czar feels put out."

"Who's that?"

"General Political Amnesty."

"What'll they do with Siberia now?"

"Subdivide it and advertise it as a summer resort, I guess."

"My brother was in Russia once."

"That so? How long did he stay?"

"Fifteen years and nine months."

"Then he must have been in jail."

"Sure."

'What for?"

"He tried to convince them a politician was a human being."

"He ought to have [illegible] more sense."

"Yes, he always did make extravagent statements that he couldn't prove."

"Did they treat him well in jail."

"He said the exp[illegible]eral education."

"How was that?"

"He learned to eat caviar."

"And to like it?"

"Well, I wouldn't say that. He was in less than 16 years.

"Where's your brother now?"

"O, he's been in Spain for four years or more."

"What's he doing there?"

"Taking a post-graduate course or olives.

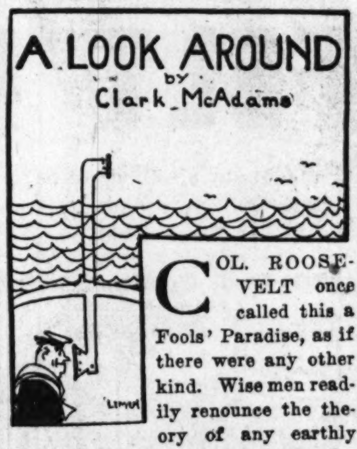
Preparedness.

SUBURBS: My neighbor has a big dog we are all afraid of. What would you advise?

"Get a bigger one. Five dollars, please."

A LOOK AROUND

by Clark McAdams



COL. ROOSEVELT once called this a Fools' Paradise, as if there were any other kind. Wise men readily renounce the theory of any earthly Paradise. Was Germany, then, prior to the war, a wise men's Paradise? Certainly not. There is given us this choice—between the peril of being attacked because we are prepared and the peril of being attacked because we are unprepared. A fool could as well conceive either condition to be Paradise. China, which the Colonel likes to hold up to us as one of these extremes, is not a Fools' Paradise by that sign at all. If there are fools in it which believe it to be Paradise, that is only because neither arming nor disarming rids any country of fools. They are a hardy and somewhat ubiquitous lot. Who shall say where the war in Europe will prove the fools to have been? Were they in Germany, with its militarism, or were they in England, with its feeling of unarmed security? The wise man saith that no man knoweth what wisdom in this matter is, but the fool saith in his heart that it is as plain as the nose on one's face. Thus doth he proclaim himself a fool.

Honesty and Military Necessity.

WHAT is the explanation of the great numbers of Chinese in Japanese banks and other posts where honesty is required? A student of the Orient says it is because the Japanese are a warrior nation and military necessity through hundreds of years has made them unlike the Chinese, who have been at peace. We see something of that going on in Europe now. Military necessity sticks at nothing. Given that meat to eat, youth is no longer nourished by the same code of honor which is its sustenance in peace. It was no Chinafied nation that raped the Sabine women, but that warlike Rome which was to become mistress of the world. Thus we have it, precisely. The Japanese frankly confess their lack of the moral advantages by importing Chinese tellers. Is it, then, any wonder that we have pacifists who view with alarm our own arousing from peace to that warlike mood which seeks whom it may devour? Not at all. Let us be fair with these people and slip an occasional pie into that cellar where in these stirring times they perforce hide.

The Czars of Democracy.

DEMOCRACY has its czars, no less autocratic than that of Russia. If czaring is indeed done for, may we not hope to have seen the last of those autocrats who are the terror of us all? It is inconceivable that the apartment house janitor is to go on in the way he has been going, or is he, too, to be a truck gardener who shall peddle us carrots? Then there is the hotel clerk, that Roomanoff of the public house? Is he to go on unrestrained while the Little Father himself no more than clips asparagus sprouts and cries his vegetables in the Nevsky Prospekt? We think not. Those proud dictators of our daily life must come down off their thrones with the rest, and their cake basket hats must be made into wrist watches and la vallieres for the poor. It is the spirit of this our time. The man who serves us shall serve us—not as serfs, but even as his own peers. We only want one of these fellows to fix us with the old imperial stare. That will be all.

Working the War Up.

THE war has now been worked up to a point where it ought to meet the utmost requirements of those who believe in this theory of making of men men. Counting our own country in it, there are now some fourteen countries actively engaged, and they make up most of the conscious earth. If Asia is not as well represented as it might be, we must recall that the Asiatics have been doing business somewhat longer than the rest of us and do not regard war as that same novelty which it is to us here. They have been through it, so to speak, and are no longer attracted by it as a means of improving their mortal lot. We must not blame the Asiatics for taking this bored view. They have probabaly gotten out of it what there is in it, and there is no more reason why they should join with us than there is that elders, weary of play, should romp with children. We must not assail them. We must only ask them to bear with us while we have an experience that has been their own. We are all entitled to the same experience.

GERMAN WRITER PREDICTS KAISER WILL ABDICATE

Author of Celebrated Book "J'Accuse" Gives Reasons for His Views.

PARIS, March 24.—The abdication of the German Emperor is predicted by the former German magistrate who wrote the celebrated book "J 'Accuse." in an interview published in Ceuvre. He says:

"The Kaiser is obsessed by the thought that he is responsible for the war, a thought which poisons his whole existence. He feels that he is menaced by three enemies at home, without counting those abroad: First, it the Crown Prince, the real author of the war; second, is the Junker pan-Germanist—you cannot imagine the smouldering hatred of the Emperor for those whom he believes to be the maniacs who are driving him into an abyss; third are the people, not the Socialist party, but the people who are starving and who he feels are growing in number and rising little by little against those who organized the war.

"The other day at the meeting of the parliamentary presidents and the ministers of the Federal sovereigns, at which the submarine war was decided upon, the struggle between the Kaiser's party and that of Von Tirpitz was most bitter. The majority against the Emperor was so great, however, that he was obliged to submit and pretend that he was convinced. In particular he was personally opposed to a break with President Wilson, but he was forced to consent.

"Documents will be published one day which will prove that secretly he did everything not to bring America down upon him and that he considers that the rupture was an irreparable mistake. The failure of the submarine war will soon show that he was right, but it will be too late.

Fears Anti-Militarists.

"The people he fears most are the anti-militarists, anti-Prussian, Liberal Republicans, who want the Reichstag to be based on universal suffrage. That is why Wilhelm is so anxious to convince the nation that he did not want war. All his protestations are made to appease the Liberals, and his famished and ruined subjects, whose murmurings are growing stronger. He wants to continue popular at any price and that is why he spoke the first word of peace. The people were grateful for it, but the submarine war came and spoiled everything.

"It is hard to realize how this Emperor, who enjoyed a popularity unexampled in our epoch, suffers in his pride. He alone, perhaps, in Germany, knows the whole truth, since he alone has in his possession the elements for forming a judgment on the situation as a whole. How can he resist morally and physically under such a strain? Certainly he hopes sometimes, but less and less, for the success of the unrestricted submarine war which he opposed. He sees the isolation of Germany become more and more complete.

"Once he tried to initiate peace negotiations and failed. To try again would be to admit and proclaim to the whole world, but above all to the German people, which he fears most, Germany's real situation. If the allies solemnly declared, as they did with Napoleon in 1815, that they would refuse to treat for peace with the Hohenzollerns, it would be a knockout blow. Our German people, who still believe in him, would abandon him, for peace at any price will soon be the unanimous and hidden thought of tortured Germany.

"What resource is left to him but a dramatic abdication in order to retain the sympathies of the German people and save the political future of Prussia? He will say: 'I sacrifice myself to make peace. Without me those only are responsible who desired a savage war and the complete isolation of Germany, those who took at the beginning my son as their party leader and forced me to mobilize, a measure I to take.'"

TRUSS WEARERS, Here's Great, Good News

Tiresome, Torturous Trusses can be thrown away forever, and it's all because STUART'S PLAPAO-PADS are different from the painful truss, being medicine applicators made self-adhesive purposely to prevent slipping and to afford an arrangement to hold the distended muscles securely in place.

Your Liver Is the Best Beauty Doctor

A dull, yellow, lifeless skin, or pimples and eruptions, are twin brothers to constipation.

Bile, nature's own laxative, is getting into your blood instead of passing out of your system as it should.

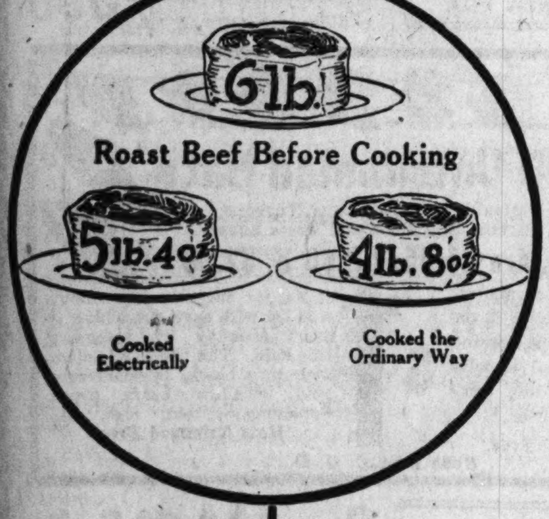
When You're Convinced of These Surprising Facts



Roast Beef Before Cooking

Cooked Electrically

Cooked the Ordinary Way

When He Is Late You Can Retard the Cooking Without Spoiling the Meal

1—How the electric range abolishes guesswork in cooking and baking, and makes entirely certain your best results under all conditions.

2—How you can start your meal, regulate the heat and leave the food to cook while you attend to household duties elsewhere.

3—How electric cooking prevents about 10 to 20 per cent of the shrinkage (cooking down) that now occurs in your food, and thus saves just that much in your meat and grocery bill.

4—How electric cooking retains all the delicious juices and flavors of the food, does not dry it up or burn it.

5—How electric cooking keeps the air in your kitchen sweet and pure. Not even a plant will live in a kitchen where the ordinary cook stove is used.

6—How electric cooking keeps your kitchen cooler and far more comfortable; does not blacken your pots and pans, does not smoke or smell up the house, and keeps your kitchen walls and ceiling spotless.

If you could have these and other attractions without added cost of fuel, would you be interested? All right, here is our plan that has convinced hundreds and will convince you too:

Our Guarantee Offer

We will install an Electric Range in your home on a 45 day guarantee. You pay one-tenth of the purchase price at the time of purchase.

If at the end of the 45 days you want to keep the range you pay the balance of the purchase price in 11 equal monthly installments.

But if the range does not do what we say we will call for it, refund all the money you have paid (excepting for electric current used), and thank you for having tried the range.

We take the risk—not you.

Will You Keep It?

Hundreds Answer "Yes!"

One enthusiastic woman writes us: "It would break my heart to part with it!"

Saves Five Ways

Electric cooking saves you time, money, food, work and health.

You twist a switch and the heat comes on—just as you want it—high, medium or low.

There is no flame to blow out if you turn it low or leave it; no danger for children.

Will You Take Advantage of Our Offer?

Electric cooking has proven to be the super-method of preparing food in over 3000 communities.

At 3 cents per kilowatt hour for current, St. Louis people have an economic advantage that millions in other cities would hail with delight.

Resolve right now to let us prove in your own kitchen the wonderful excellencies of Electric Cooking. Resolve to take advantage of our 45 day guarantee.

See Electric Ranges in Operation at the Household Show

The St. Louis Household show at the Coliseum will continue until midnight Saturday, March 31.

We have on display and in operation there Electric Ranges of all styles and sizes. Competent cooks will prepare your favorite dish if you request it. Or you will be allowed to cook the dish yourself if you like.

Come and see Electric Cooking. Discover new table delights and kitchen short-cuts. Then you'll agree, we believe, that this will be the ruling method soon in up-to-date households.

TICKETS FREE We have obtained a limited number of tickets to the Household Show for customers. You can get them free by calling at any of our offices before too late.

BERLIN, March 24.—A medical journal states that the mortality from cancer is increasing enormously in this country as a direct result of wounds received in war.

GRANDMOTHER USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER HAIR WHEN FADED OR GRAY

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded streaked appearancce this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But the brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own which is usually too sticky so insist upon getting Wyeth's, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says his customers insist on Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because, they say, it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.—ADV.

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs WITHOUT DIETING OR EXERCISING often at the rate of over a pound a day and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practising physician and personally select the treatment for each individual case, thus enabling me to choose remedies that will produce not only a loss of weight harmlessly, but which will also relieve you of all the troublesome symptoms of overstoutness, such as shortness of breath, palpitation, indigestion, rheumatism, gout, asthma, kidney trouble and various other afflictions which often accompany overstoutness.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you renewed energy and vigor, a result of the loss of your superfluous fat.

You are not required to change in the slightest from your regular mode of living. There is no dieting or exercising. It is simple, easy and pleasant to take.

If you are overstout do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

ST. LOUIS REPORTS 44 MOTOR BOATS TO NAVY

Furnishes Information on Request by Government Made in Preparation for War.

A list of 44 motorboats, 30 feet or more in length, most of them owned by St. Louisans, was sent to the Navy Department yesterday by Nelson Thomas, secretary of the St. Louis Yacht Club, in reply to a request for such information.

The Government, in the event of war, will wish to obtain a large fleet of motor craft, and will ask owners of such craft to sell at a price fixed by arbitration, or to lease them at a rental and damage allowance fixed in the same manner. Boats 40 feet or more in length usually cost at least $2500.

The list of boats owned by St. Louisans and St. Louis County residents, with their length in feet, is as follows:

Huntress III, 36 feet, Otto Fritsch.
La Belle, 40 feet, Arnold Courvoisier.
Anna K., 45 feet, Edmond Klein.
Anchor II, 36 feet, F. G. Reinheimer.

Sunshine, 45 feet, H. L. Dazey.
Dolphin, 32 feet, C. M. Dolph.
Mergery, 40 feet, H. P. Finnigan.
Naidnah, 43 feet, E. W. Handlan.
Sumac, 50 feet, Louis A. Hoerr.
Loiterer III, 45 feet, Oscar Johnson.
Norka, 50 feet, August Kron.
Burr Oak, 33 feet, William A. Logan.
Laura Lane, 50 feet, Charles E. Lane.
Marie R., 50 feet, A. S. Reidinger.
Ruth, 40 feet, W. J. O'Hara.
La Tosca, 36 feet, T. Ben Siesle.
Melba, 40 feet, Dr. T. F. Zeller.
Doodle Bug, 40 feet, Q. L. Slucumb.
Samoth, 35 feet, Nelson Thomas.
Missouri IV, 32 feet, A. E. Winkelmeyer.
Mirth, 40 feet, George J. Charlier.
Normal III, 40 feet, George Smith.
Liberty, 40 feet, Herman Anstett.
Irenbe, 36 feet, James A. Cornelius.
Agner, 43 feet, C. J. Backer.
Naiad, 52 feet, Herman Kirtman.
Nomad, 32 feet, Dr. O. H. Helbig.
Comet, 36 feet, C. J. Cox.

Medical Lecture Today.

The second of a series of public lectures in the course on Military Medicine will be given at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the Laboratory Building of Washington University Medical School, Euclid and McKinley avenues, by Maj. Stodter, U. S. A. His topic will be "The Military Policy of the United States."

STATE COMMERCIAL CLUBS TO ELECT ON DEMOCRATIC PLAN

Each Unit in Federation Privileged to Name Man for Executive Committee.

At the annual convention of the Federation of Missouri Commercial Clubs, to be held Tuesday and Wednesday at the Planters Hotel, the Executive Committee for the ensuing year will be elected for the first time in democratic fashion. Instead of the members being selected at random, each commercial club in the State will have the opportunity of placing a man in nomination. Sixteen, one for each congressional district, are to be elected. The Chamber of Commerce will make the St. Louis nominations. St. Louis, having three congressional districts, will have three men on the committee.

The following will deliver addresses: William Hirth, Columbia, Mo.; Dean F. B. Mumford, Columbia; S. A. Baker, Jefferson City; W. H. Stubblefield Jr., Cape Girardeau; J. C. Willbrand, St. Charles; E. L. Sanford, Springfield; F. C. Millspaugh, Canton; E. G. Bennett, Carthage; W. E. Taylor, Moline; E. A. Parks, Louisiana Col. Berryman Henwood, Hannibal; Tom Witten, Trenton; Rabbi Harrison, Mayor Kiel, J. Lionberger Davis, W. H. Bloomer, J. O. Ballard, B. F. Bush and H. P. Robbins of St. Louis.

E. P. Lampkin, who has been looking after the arrangements, expects practically every county in the State to be represented. The Chamber of Commerce will entertain the delegates at luncheon Wednesday at noon.

Here's a Silk Event!

That will bring new fame to THE LINDELL, for we are going to save you all the way from 25% to 50% in this sale

OUR Silk buyer made two trips to New York for the special purpose of securing the silks in this sale. He was rewarded in getting more than 25,000 yards of the most beautiful silken fabrics of the day, and at prices that hardly lend credence to the constant reports of "rising markets."

RISING prices might be a condition that other stores have to contend with, but tomorrow THE LINDELL STORE will feature this wonderful collection of thousands of yards of the new Silks, many of which are not mentioned, at the lowest prices on record.

Beginning Monday, and Continuing All Week,

Minnie K. Fink, M. D.

Medical Director of the Nemo Hygienic Fashion Institute of New York

Will hold private consultations in our Corset Section.

Dr. Fink is at the service of any of our customers who desire advice as to the corset required for health and style. By personal suggestion and criticism she has made thousands of women, like you, healthier and happier. This is a very unusual opportunity for you to solve your corset problems. Dr. Fink will gladly explain the remarkable Nemo Inventions that have transformed the art of corset fitting into a branch of preventive medicine and, if you wish, she will prescribe the correct Nemo model that you should have.

HER BRONCHITIS IS RELIEVED IN A SINGLE NIGHT

Altoona Mother Tells of Her Experience With Vick's VapoRub.

Every mother owes it to her family to investigate the Southern remedy—Vick's VapoRub Salve. In the South it is universally used in place of injurious internal medicines for treating all forms of cold troubles—from head or chest colds, down to sore throat, bronchitis or incipient pneumonia. In addition, it has a hundred uses in the home as a soothing, cooling salve. Usually croup is relieved in fifteen minutes and most colds over night.

Last January Mrs. A. S. Kennedy, [illegible] Street, Altoona, Pa., was asked by her druggist, Welsh Brothers, to give this preparation a test. Mrs.

FRANCES LENORE KENNEDY
ALTOONA, PENNA.

Kennedy writes—

"I have used your trial jar of Vick's VapoRub and now would not be without it in the house. I found it cured my little girl of a spell of bronchitis over night without the aid of internal medicine. I have used it myself for pleurisy, and in a few minutes the pain was gone." Three sizes, 25c, 50c, or $1.00.

DEFINITION OF DISLOYAL ACTS AND PENALTIES

ALIENS NOT EXEMPTED

Those Owing Temporary Allegiance Subject to Law in Return for Protection.

By STERLING E. EDMUNDS
Lecturer on International Law, St. Louis University Law School.

In the event of war it would become important to distinguish between those acts of disloyalty only morally condemnable and those which would place the offender under the legal penalties.

The crime of treason is set out in the United States criminal code in section 10165, in the following language:

"Whoever, owing allegiance to the United States, levies war against them, or adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort, within the United States or elsewhere, is guilty of treason." And the next section prescribes the penalty of death, or, at the discretion of the Court, imprisonment not less than five years and a fine not less than $10,000.

As to what is meant by "levying war" the courts have held that there must be an actual assemblage of persons for the purpose of affecting a treasonable end, though all persons who "aid, abet, counsel or countenance" such assemblage are equally guilty, whether they are present or not.

The phrase, "adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort," has been judicially construed to mean, "In general, any act committed after war actually exists, which indicates a want of loyalty to the Government and sympathy with its enemies, and which, by fair construction, is directly in furtherance of their hostile designs." Such, for example, would be the selling to or providing for an enemy, arms or supplies of any kind; any lending of money or credit, or any communication of intelligence concerning the national army or navy.

Expression of Opinion Not Treason.

The mere expression of opinion indicative of sympathy with a public enemy, is not treason, within the meaning of the act, though it is gross disloyalty.

The United States criminal code further provides that whoever has knowledge of the commission of any treason, who conceals and does not disclose, and make known the same to public officials, is guilty of misprision of treason, and may be punished by imprisonment for seven years and a fine of not more than $1000.

The states of the Union also have statutes defining the crime of treason. The Missouri statute uses practically the phraseology of the Federal act, with an alternative penalty of death or imprisonment not less than 10 years. The statute dealing with misprision of treason follows the Federal criminal code.

It might be thought that the United State statute excludes aliens from its operation, since it refers to "whoever, owing allegiance to the United States," etc., but it does not. Resident aliens are held to owe a temporary allegiance, which is inferred from their obligation to obey the law of their domicile, in return for protection. Such acts committed by aliens are not only punishable under the criminal codes in the Federal and state courts, but may likewise be punished in time of war before a court-martial, when they take on the character of espionage. They may then be dealt with as spies.

Criminal Code Difficult.

The citizen owes unqualified allegiance, where the allegiance of the alien is qualified. The citizen, in return for protection by his state, may be called on for all sacrifices of personal comfort, of property and even of life itself, if so much is necessary to the preservation of the nation. The alien, on the other hand, cannot ordinarily be compelled to render military service, though his property is subject to all of the charges which may be placed upon any other property within the state.

The criminal code of the United States is woefully lacking in an adequate description of crimes of a treasonable character, with the result that many things may now be done, in the nature of spying, for purposes of impending war, which must go unpunished. Some bills were introduced in the last Congress to correct these faults, but failed to pass.

OPERA PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

Boston-National Engagement Opens April 9 With "Tosca."

The repertory for the Boston National Grand Opera's engagement of four performances at the Odeon is announced as follows: Monday night, April 9, "Tosca;" Tuesday evening, "La Boheme;" Wednesday afternoon, "Madame Butterfly," and Wednesday night, "Aida."

The principal singers in "Tosca" will be Luisa Villani, Giovanni Zenatello, George Baklanoff and Paolo Ananian. The chief members of the cast for "La Bohéme" will be Riccardo Martin or Guiseppi Gaudenzi; Maggie Teyte, Mabel Riegelman and Virgilio Lazzardi. Tamaki Miura, Japanese prima donna, is expected to repeat the triumph in the title role of "Butterfly," which she gained here last season. In "Aida" Mme. Villani will take the title role, with Maria Gay as Amneris, Zenatello as Rhadames, Baklanoff as Amonasro and Jose Mardones as Ramfis.

The Associated Press News Service is received and printed exclusively by the Post-Dispatch in the St. Louis evening

Russian Pianiste Recital April 12.

A program of the more modern Russian music will be given at the Kirkwood Country Club on the night of April 12, by Mme. Theodora Sturkow-Ryder, Russian pianiste. This will be her first appearance here since the World's Fair, when she gave an all-Russian program at Festival Hall under the leadership of Walter Damrosch.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head-colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.—ADV.

AT ONCE! STOPS ANY INDIGESTION OR STOMACH DISTRESS

"Really does" put upset stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness due to acid fermentation in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach antacid and regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments and turns sour, you belch gas and eructate undigested food or water; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin is worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest antacid for the stomach in the world.—ADV.

COUNTY TO HAVE BRANCH OF LEAGUE TO ENFORCE PEACE

F. N. Judson, State Chairman, to Preside at Organization Meeting Saturday Night.

A St. Louis County branch of the League to Enforce Peace is to be organized next Saturday night at a meeting at the Courthouse at Clayton. Frederick N. Judson, State chairman of the league, who recently was elected a member of the league's National Executive Committee, will explain the objects of the organization.

L. Gilbert Dake of Kirkwood, a teacher in the Soldan High School, is county chairman. The County Committee will consist of one resident from each voting precinct in the county.

Judson last week returned from New York City, where he attended a meeting of the National Executive Committee. Judson promised the Eastern members of the committee to point out to the people of the Middle West that the League to Enforce Peace, instead of being in any way in conflict with the preparedness movement, is heartily in sympathy with preparedness, which it regards as essential to the success of the league's program.

County conventions are being called in many of the counties of Missouri. Two such conventions—those of Livingston and Marion Counties—were held yesterday. Bates, Buchanan, Mississippi and Pettis Counties will hold conventions next Saturday.

Doctor Tells How to Strengthen Eyesight 50 per cent in One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." It is sold in this city by Johnson, Enderle & Pauley, Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson and others.—ADV.

Charities Meeting Plans Discussed.

The Executive Committee of the Central Bureau of Catholic Charities and Kindred Activities held their first meeting last week, at which committees were appointed to complete arrangements for the sixth annual conference of Catholic charities of St. Louis, to be held at the Odeon Sunday afternoon, April 29. The purpose of these meetings is to inform the public and Catholic contributors of the conditions and workings of Catholic charities.

"TIZ"—A JOY TO SORE, TIRED FEET

"Sure! I Use TIZ Every Time for Any Foot Trouble."

Good-bye corns, callouses, bunions and raw spots. No more shoe tightness, no more limping with pain or drawing up your face in agony. "Tiz" is magical, acts right off. "Tiz" draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet. Use "Tiz" and wear smaller shoes. Use "Tiz" and forget your foot misery. Ah! how comfortable your feet feel.

Brand New Way to Remove Hairy Growths

(Actually Removes Roots and All)

The vexed question of how to completely banish superfluous hair has been solved at last! By means of the new phelactine process, the hairs entire, roots and all, come out before your very eyes—easily, harmlessly, "quick as a wink." It is so different from the depilatory, electrical and shaving methods, you simply must try it to fully appreciate its remarkable advantages.

Phelactine is perfectly odorless, non-irritating, non-poisonous—a child could eat it without the least injury. It leaves the skin so soft, smooth and hairless, no one could tell you ever had a moustache or other hairy growth. If you will procure a stick of phelactine and follow the simple instructions you will certainly be astonished and delighted with the result—or druggist will refund the price upon request.—ADV.

U-BOAT DEPOT FOUND IN SPANISH WATERS

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

MADRID, March 12.—An elaborate organization, by which a far-flung cordon of German submarines, stretching around the Spanish Portuguese coasts, has been maintained in provisions and supplies has been unearthed by the Spanish authorities. A ribid censorship has been established but it is known that at least four men have been arrested, one of whom was supposed to have been an American, but later proved to be a German. It was reported that other suspects hailed from the United States, but this was later shown to be due to the fact that they had used many aliases and had found American names to be the most useful.

Ingenious Model Used.

A most ingenious method was used in getting the supplies and provisions to the submarines. Lines of automobiles were run from Madrid to certain coast points, in order to avoid using the regular train service. At designated points floating depots were established beyond the limits of Spanish waters. These depots consisted of a series of small stout wooden floats, about sizes of a fisherman's dory. Each float formed a good sized receptable, securely built to protect the contents against water. Under cover of night small boats loaded these floats with provisions of all kinds, grease and fuel oil and any other articles required by the submarines.

A coast guard patrol boat discovered one of these depots as a number of men were busy restocking it from some of the small sailing craft used by the coast fishermen. The coast guards used their revolvers and captured several prisoners as well as a large quantity of supplies and considerable correspondence. Later investigation showed that one or more members of the coast guard itself was implicated.

Links in Long Chain.

Information gathered by the Spanish secret police and naval and port officials tallies with reports by travelers from Berne as to the number of submarines employed in the German patrol. According to this information the peninsula cordon is a link in a great chain stretching from the Baltic to the Mediterranean, one submarine being allotted to every 10 miles. Each of the undersea boats is supposed to be able to sail 10 miles in an hour and thus keep in close touch with its neighbors in the line.

The Spanish Ministry of marine permitted the news of the first four arrests to be made public, but since then absolute secrecy has been observed in official quarters in regard to the entire affair, although a number of suspects are known to be under surveliance.

FRENCH WAR RELICS TO BE SHOWN HERE

Exhibition Trench Will Be Dug From Moolah Temple to Vandeventer Avenue.

An exhibition of French war materials, including several French aeroplanes, cannon, machine guns, shells of all kinds and uniforms, and captured German aeroplanes, cannon and guns, will be exhibited in Moolah Temple Easter week.

There will also be an exhibition trench dug from Moolah Temple to Vandeventer avenue, fully equipped, just as the trenches on the battlefield. In this trench will be guns of every description.

The exhibition was arranged by Baron Huard and his wife, who is a daughter of Francis Wilson, the American cator. Two hundred members of committees have been appointed to take charge of the exhibition.

Motion pictures of the battles of Verdun, Combles, Perronne and of the fabrication of artillery will be exhibited at the temple.

One-half of the proceeds will be contributed to French war relief and one-half to local charity. Baron Huard has announced that if America should enter the war before or during the exhibition, the French share of the proceeds will be contributed to the American Red Cross. It is expected that the committees in charge of the exhibition will arrange to have the entire proceeds sent to the French war sufferers.

A number of booths will be in charge of St. Louis women. Autograph photographs of noted Frenchmen and other articles will be offered for sale. Mrs. E. J. Walsh will have charge of the booth for the American fund for French wounded, Mrs. J. E. Jamison the British booth for French wounded and Mrs. F. P. Crunden the booth for relief of fatherless children of France. L'Alliance Francaise will have a booth, in charge of Mrs. Walter Campbell. Mrs. John H. Haliday will have charge of the booth for Servian relief, Mrs. Marc Seguin for Belgian relief and Mrs. F. G. Steedman for Irish relief.

Besides the war equipment, many interesting photographs and posters will be exhibited.

Subsea Scenes in Verne Film.

Under-sea scenes are featured in "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," a film version of Jules Verne's romance, which is to be shown today at the New Grand Central Theater. A special camera was used in photographing the sub-aqueous scenes and action. A fight between a pearl diver and an octopus at the bottom of the ocean is one of the incidents of a plot which abounds in the unusual, as seen from the window of a submarine.

The Associated Press News Service is received and printed exclusively by the Post-Dispatch in the St. Louis evening field.

Deserted in a Week, Wife Says.

Suit was filed at Clayton yesterday by Mrs. Pauline O'Brien to divorce Joseph F. O'Brien. The plaintiff alleges he deserted her Nov. 23, 1915, a week after their marriage. She alleges she does not know his whereabouts. The restoration of her maiden name, Pauline Nance, is asked.

Does Your Husband Drink? Druggist Tells How to Cure The Liquor Habit at Home

Free Prescription Can Be Filled at Any Drug Store and Given Secretly.

H. J. Brown, a Cleveland man, was for many years a confirmed drunkard. His friends and relatives despaired of ever redeeming him. His sister sought the best medical men in Europe in the hope that she might find something which would cure him. Finally she was recommended to an eminent chemist, who gave her a private formula (the same as appears below) and told her how to use it. She had it filled at a drug store and gave it to him secretly. The results were startling. In a few weeks he was completely cured. That was over ten years ago and he has not touched a drop since. He now occupies a position of trust and is enthusiastic in his efforts to help others overcome the liquor habit. He feels that he can best do this by making public the same formula which cured him. Here is the prescription: Go to any first-class drug store and get prepared tescum powders. Drop one powder twice a day in coffee, tea or any liquid. It is harmless, tasteless, odorless and cannot be detected. You can use it without the knowledge of any one. A lady who recently tried it on her husband reports: "My husband was on a spree when I got the powders and he usually stays drunk from three to four weeks at a time. After putting the powder in his coffee for four days he sobered up and has not taken a drink since and says he is through with it forever. He also complained that whisky did not taste the same. I shall not tell him what did it, but I am grateful for this help and I shall recommend it whenever possible."

Note: A leading druggist, when shown the above article, said: "Yes, Tescum is a very remarkable remedy for the drink habit. It is harmless, wonderfully effective and is having an enormous sale. I advise every one who wishes to destroy the liquor habit to give it a trial." It is sold in this city by Johnson-Enderle-Pauley, Wolff-Wilson, and all other first-class druggists, and they guarantee it to do this work or refund the money.—ADVERTISEMENT.

GOODYEAR TIRE SERVICE

"Why gamble with trouble?" asked A. G. Cameron, St. Louis branch manager of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. "Old man trouble most always wins in the end in that kind of a proposition. I'm referring to tire trouble, of course.

"Often a motorist notices a little tread cut on one of his tires. 'I'm in a hurry,' he says to himself, 'and that cut's only a small one. I'll get by.' And he drives on and forgets it. The cut becomes larger, deeper, reaches the fabric, dirt and water work in; finally the blowout results. The tire is ruined. Maybe Mr. Motorist is 50 miles from help when it 'pops.'

"All of which is preliminary to an introduction to the Goodyear service stations in this city.

"They are conveniently distributed as to location. Each is ready and fully equipped, not only to sell tires, but to give real service as well. Goodyear service consists of prevention as well as of cure. The service station man gives a standing invitation to 'drive in.' Have your tires examined regularly. Have the little tread cuts cured at the first stage. Don't wait for the blowout. See that your front wheels are in exact alignment. Keep your air pressures right. Get the most comfort possible with safety to tires.

"We feel that our service station system in St. Louis and East St. Louis is better for the car owner this year than it has ever been before."

A NEW "DOUBLE SIX"

"Double Six" is the official title of the new 12-cylinder car just announced by the Kissel Motor Car Co. as "the nearest approach to the ultimate in motor car performance."

The new model is now ready for delivery to dealers in limited quantity, the factory producing at this time five a day, as compared with 35 to 40 of the Hundred Point Six model. Nor is it likely that this ratio of production as between the two can be greatly changed owing to the naturally wider demand for the smaller and less expensive car.

MARMON GETS ROBBERS

Robbers who made a daring attempt to rob the Lockport, Ill., bank recently were quickly overtaken in their flight by a speedy Marmon 34, directed by a determined driver. Dr. John Courtney of Lockport pursued the robbers in his Marmon and, not daunted by the bullets the robbers hoped would turn him from the chase, speedily overhauled and captured them.

FIVE TONS OF ABSORBERS

Five tons of shock absorbers were sold by the Panama Rubber and Equipment Co. during the St. Louis Automobile Show. The company is concentrating its efforts on a few special items and pushing them, with the result that greater sales are made.

MAXWELL TRUCK TRIALS

After creating considerable interest in the new Maxwell one-ton truck at the automobile show, the Weber Implement and Automobile Co. has been continually bombarding the Maxwell factory with letters regarding the first shipping date. The following letter from the Maxwell corporation explains the situation: "An explanation due those who have or expect to give Maxwell truck orders," says Geo. Weber, the local distributor:

"All of you who have seen our progressive assembly system will be interested to know that the same method of manufacture will be employed with the truck. Our machinery and majority of materials are all ready and waiting and have been for two or three weeks.

"Detroit in common with most industrial centers throughout the country, has been unfortunately placed lately as regards inbound and outbound traffic. We are having a task to get our truck material into the factory. Annoying delays have occured. Instead of getting our trucks through production early in March it is unlikely that we shall be in a position to ship any trucks until the latter part of the month or early in April."

SPRING TIRE SUGGESTIONS

B. O. Leftwich, manager of the Bittel-Leftwich Tire Service Co., local distributers of Lee tires, has prepared a list of spring suggestions for tire users. Some of them follow:

"Before you finish tuning up your car for the coming season, take your casings off and examine the rims. If they are rusty, don't fail to scrape and paint them.

Don't put the casings back until you have made sure that the rims are absolutely true and free from dents. Sprinkle soapstone into the casings before replacing the tubes.

If the rear tires are worn, get a new pair for the rear and let the old casings spend their declining days on the front wheels, where the service is easier. You will be money in pocket by so doing.

Test the alignment of your axles. The easiest way is to measure between the felloes of the wheels or the edges of th rims at the point directly in front of the axle. If this measurement differs from the same measurement taken o nthe oposite side of the wheels, it shows the axles are out of alignment. Correct this defect immediately or expect big tire bills.

Buy a good pressure gauge and register a solemn vow to use it frequently and regularly throughout the season.

If you add new accessories this spring be sure they do not bring the weight of your car above the weight your tires are designed to carry. If you are in doubt about this matter, be on the safe side and buy the larger size tires, which are made for your present rim equipment. They cost a little more to buy, but considerably less to use.

TO DRIVE OVERLAND

Harry Newman of the Harry Newman-Johnson Co., St. Louis distributor of the Hal-Twelve, spent the greater part of last week at the Hal factory in Cleveland arranging for Overland shipments to combat the freight car shortage.

"While express shipments have in a small way overcome the obstacles encountered through unprecedented demand for the Hal-Twelve, both in Chicago and St. Louis," says Mr. Newman, "some arrangement had to be made that would prove more economical. With the first soft breezes of spring, several of our purchasers were 'stung with the touring bug' and conceived the idea of combining an early spring tour with a 'drive-away.'

"In my opinion, many purchasers, not only of Hal-Twelves, but other makes, will journey to the factories this year and pilot their cars home to avoid the freight car evil."

JORDAN PRICE ADVANCE

The list prices of the Jordan luxury car will be advanced April 1, 1917, inaccordance with the following schedule: Jordan seven-passenger touring car, $1795; Jordan two-passenger roadster, $1795; wooden wheels regular equipment, wire wheels $100 extra; Jordan four-passenger sport model, $1895; wire wheels regular equipment. This advance is $145 over the old prices.

TO BUILD 300,000 BODIES

The value of the output of the Chevrolet Motor Co. is said by Russell E. Gardner Jr., manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co. of St. Louis, to be greater than that of any other automobile manufacturing concern in the world. It is not generally known, but the Chevrolet Company owns 450 of the 826 shares of the stock of the General Motors Co. The General Motors Co. manufactures the Cadillac, Buick, Oldsmobile, Northern motor, G. M. C. truck, Western Axle, Sterling motor and others of less importance.

It is interesting to St. Louisans to know that the bodies of all Chevrolet automobiles are made in St. Louis. It is planned this year to make 300,000 of these bodies at the factory of the Chevrolet Motor Co. of St. Louis.

100 HAYNES CARS A DAY

Despite 24-hour-a-day factory schedules, despite multiplication after multiplication of factory buildings, despite a steady influx of new workers, the 3½ years and more since the advent of the Haynes "Light Six" have denied the Haynes people even a breathing spell. "One car sells two more," is the way they put it, and judging from the ever-increasing demand it must be true.

The present 350,000 square feet of floor space in its plant will soon be increased to nearly 1,000,000 square feet, it is planned. The 1917 output will be three times that of 1916, and 1916 far overshadowed the year preceding—100 cars a day is the capacity goal for 1917.

A Monopoly on Battery Quality

Three exclusive Vesta improvements give the Vesta Storage Battery a monopoly on battery superiority and make it unquestionably the most wonderful battery in the world.

VESTA Indestructible Isolator

VESTA Impregnated Wooden Mats

The Impregnated Wooden Mats absorb battery acids as freely as ordinary mats and form a perfect path for the current yet prevent "treeing" and its disastrous consequences.

VESTA Titanium

Titanium, a rare mineral, hardens the lead plates, giving them longer life. It precipitates all minerals and impurities in solution and adds vastly to the efficiency of the battery.

All of these double-life giving features are covered by U. S. Basic Patents belonging to the Vesta. They can be used only by the Vesta.

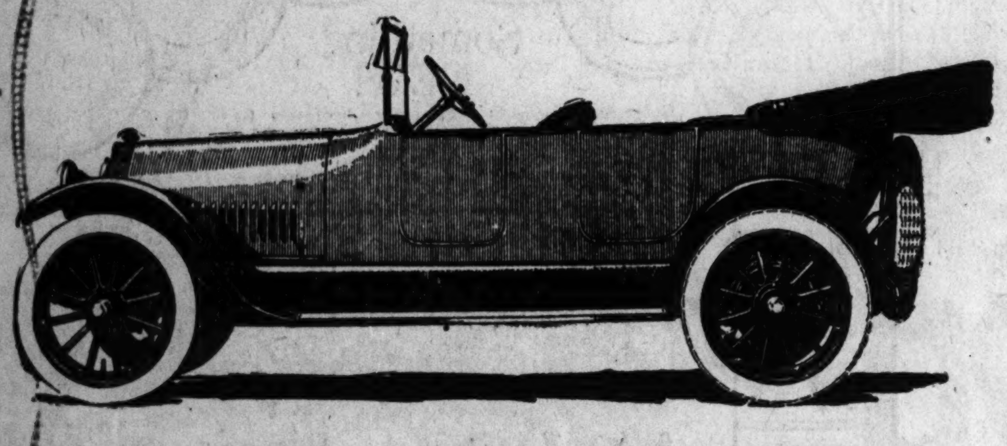
Studebaker
Established 1852



THINGS YOU FORGET

The Studebaker Series "18" car is an evolution and perfected piece of mechanism. That is why you can FORGET many little things about Studebaker that you have to REMEMBER and care for on other cars not so highly developed.

For instance; the cooling system of the Studebaker car will work in any climate, at any temperature, providing you keep water in the radiator.

The lubrication system of a Studebaker car will work unfailingly in absolutely all conditions, if you will remember to put oil in the crank case occasionally.

The electric lights, and the electric starter will never fail you if a little distilled water is put in the battery from time to time.

You will not have to paint your body frequently to keep it looking nice, because Studebaker's finishing work is the sum of years of experience.

You won't have to renew the leather on your cushions, because experience has taught Studebaker how to select and buy the highest quality of leather.

You won't need to worry about making a grade with a Studebaker car, because the Studebaker motor has been perfected into the most powerful motor in the world in ratio to gasoline consumption.

You won't have to continually worry about lubrication, about oil and greasing parts of your car, because every part is equipped with ample capacity grease cups.

These are the things that make it a delight to own and run a Studebaker car, and cause you to say, "I never have any trouble with it."

DORRIS' NEW POLICY

Since the recent increase in the capital of the Dorris Motor Car Co. to an even million, and the entrance into its affairs of the aggressive new management, it is clearly apparent that much will be heard of the "Luxurious Dorris" this season.

W. R. Colcord, president of the company, stated yesterday that a new sales and advertising policy had been adopted. The outstanding feature of this new policy is the concentration of sales effort in newspapers instead of many miscellaneous mediums. Mr. Colcord and the directors of the Dorris company believe that newspaper advertising is the shortest route between the manufacturer and the buyer.

This new policy will mean a great deal to the agents of the Dorris car in other cities. The average automobile agent has to beg his factory to give him all the help that he thinks he ought to have. The new Dorris sales policy will put each agent right up on his toes to earn the maximum of factory help instead of begging for the minimum.

The 1917 Dorris—the I-B Six—is a beautiful car. It is conspicuous for all the unchanged fundamental features of the original Dorris of a dozen years ago—until power plant, valve-in-head motor, fan fly wheel, multiple disc clutch, platform spring suspension—principles later adopted by most of the highest grade cars of today. The Dorris also typifies a very definite refinement in body lines, and about the last word in car comfort. The seven-passenger touring car sells without price increase at $2475. The standard colors will be olive green, dark blue and wine color.

THE DEALERS' ELECTION

The annual meeting and election of officers for the Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers Association of St Louis will be held the evening of April 9 at the City Club. Two tickets, formulated from a popular vote, will be put in the race by the nominating committee, which consists of W. L. Johnson,, F. W. Wolffe, and N. F. Sutton. The Show Committee, through its chairman, Jos. A .Schlecht, will at that meeting report the results of the recent automobile show and distribute checks for the rebates due member exhibitors.

MADE SOUTHERN RECORD

Equipped on rear with United States 36x4½ "Royal Cord" Treads and United States "Plain" Treads on front, the Cadillac Model 35 demonstrator belonging to the Chattanooga Automobile Co. recently broke all former time records between Chattanooga and Atlanta and Mavon, doing 441½ miles in 13 hours and 35 minutes, thereby beating the best previous round road trip by four hours and eight minutes.

It is most interesting to note that the part of the journey between Chattanooga and Atlanta was covered in three hours and 35 minutes, thus beating the record of the famous "Dixie Flyer" by eight minutes.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

DE LUXE TO HANDLE ELGIN

Announcement was made last week that the De Luxe Automobile Co., 3105 Locust street, had become distributors in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois for the Elgin six, a car which, although new to St. Louis, has gained great popularity in other sections of the country in the last three years.

The Elgin, following the lead of many of the big motor car producers, is standardizing one chassis, supplying the choice of two bodies, a touring car and a club roadster, each listing at $985.

The Elgin, manufactured in Chicago, is a product of a group of experienced automobile men, who, three years ago, recognized the growing demand for a popular priced six.

The personnel of the entire organization represents motor car experience. C. S. Rieman, the general manager, has served in the same capacity in the Saxon, Chandler and Federal Motor Truck factories. B. J. Cline, in charge of production, was formerly production manager of the Chandler. Will H. Brown, the Elgin sales manager, was formerly vice president in charge of sales for the Ovferland.

WORKERS ARE PARTNERS

An important page of history in American business has just been made by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., Akron, O. With the winding up of the books on the plan of stock distribution inaugurated by H. S. Firestone, president of the company, the records show that over 90 per cent of the employes responded heartily to the investment offer made. Out of 12,500 employes, 11,000 are now stockholders in the company.

TO SELL STANDARD TRUCK

A local agency for the standard motor trucks has been taken by Geo. F. Smith of Channing and Franklin avenues, St. Louis. This concern handling contractors' equipment of every description is probably better known among contractors than any other concern in this section of the country, and it is chiefly due to the fact that so many calls for information from contractors all over the State for motor trucks equipped with dump bodies that Smith, himself an engineer of experience, selected the Standard line of truckse to fill this requirement.

A five-ton hydraulic hoist dump trick equipped with a 135-feet steel body will be on exhibition in his service station.

NEW TRUCK UNIT.

A new truck unit for the transformation of any motor car chasses into trucks has been placed on the market by the Ford Tractor Sales Co., 1710 Olive. The Lucke-Douglas truck unit, as it is known, is guaranteed up to one and one-half-ton capacity and sells complete for $275.

One of the new features incorporated in the unit is a short chain drive which is entirely encased, therefore free from firt and making for long wear and low upkeep cost. The standard chassis is changed in no way. The rear wheels are replaced with a gear which works within a housing attached to the rear wheels. The attachment is guaranteed by the makers for one year.

The Most Beautiful Car in America.

Now Is The Time To Buy Your "Six-46"

Let us again urge you to place your order for a Fairfield "Six-46."

Don't wait too long—don't be too sure that you can buy to just as good advantage thirty or sixty days from now.

For the spring season is nearly here and it is certain that we shall not be able to supply more than one-fifth of the demand for this popular car.

Then, also remember that the cost of manufacturing, materials and labor is still soaring.

With the single exception of the Fairfield, every light Six on the market has been increased in price, anywhere from $100 to $250—and more "raises" are undoubtedly coming.

If it were necessary for us to purchase the material for any of our models today, we couldn't attempt to sell them without increasing the price twenty per cent.

So, from every angle, you see, the Fairfield is a "preferred buy" right this minute. By contracting for our supplies more than eight months ago, we have done everything that we possibly could to protect ourselves and you. But in the face of a constantly rising market we may be forced to increase prices proportionately.

From the present outlook, there is no other alternative, for we flatly refuse to compromise on the quality of our cars. We shall continue to use only the best materials no matter how far the commodity prices may advance.

Above all, please understand that this advertisement is written in a sincerely helpful spirit. It is by no means our purpose to "stampede" motor car buyers into early or ill-advised purchases.

We are merely telling you the facts—facts that can be readily substantiated by your banker or any man who is well informed in regard to industrial conditions.

The "Six-46" now costs $1375. At that price we honestly believe that it represents more actual dollar for dollar value than any other motor car on the market.

Wait too long—and you run the risk of paying more.

Place your order now and you can rest assured that you will never regret the decision.

"Purr" and "Punch"

Two Power Ranges Combine These Opposite Virtues in the Peerless Eight

The delectable purr of an ideally soft, smooth, flexible motor may now be had in a car capable of stupendous feats of power and speed.

Two Power Ranges make the Peerless Eight a car of "dual personality"—of unbelievable contrasts of performance.

A "Loafing" Range

For all ordinary driving you will use its "loafing" range. In this range it performs all those feats of smoothness which distinguish the really fine from the ordinary car in the every day service of an exacting owner. And in this range it is on half rations, consuming fuel so sparingly as to shame many a lesser powered six—even many a four.

A "Sporting" Range

Among the finer cars of the day, there are a few which pretend no compromise with the demand for the gentler virtues of soft, smooth flexibility. Such cars are out and out exponents of the more rugged virtues of brute power and speed. In its "sporting" range the Peerless is ready to vie with such cars in their own chosen field.

Let us demonstrate how much more your motor car will mean to you when you can run the whole gamut of motor car performance with one and the same car—the Peerless Eight.

MORE AND BETTER CARS

In addition to increasing the production of the Gole Motor Car Co. from 5000 to 10,000 cars for 1917, A. F. Knobloch, the general manager of the Cole concern, has left no stone unturned in adding to the quality of the product. An analysis of the Cole product shows that it embodies the recognized best units available, he claims. From time to time added refinements have been brought into its construction that contribute immeasurably to it as a class car.

The curtains on the Cole eight open models, when in place, open and close with the doors. There is a touch of permanence to them that takes them out of the makeshift class. The finest hardware obtainable is used in equipping the doors with locks, handles and hinges. Extra high upholstery at the back of the real seats in the touring car and roadster afford a new comfort for the passengers riding there. A special contrivance is provided to hold the top rigidly to the windshield, yet it is so made that it can be released without an effort when the top is to be lowered.

NEARLY DOUBLED SALES

"The best year in our history," was the unanimous verdict at the annual meeting of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., held Monday at the general offices of the company at Akron, Ohio.

Gross business jumped from $36,000,000 to $63,000,000, an increase of 80 per cent over 1915. And Goodyear had no "war babies," so that the growth has been in domestic and peaceful foreign business. Net earnings of the company, incidentally, jumped from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000.

FEATURE COUNTRY CLUB

When the Willys-Overland company staged the biggest dealers' convention ever held in the history of the automobile industry at Toledo last month, one of its chief attractions was the complete line of new Overland and Willeys-Knight models on exhibition at the factory's showrooms. The convention had been in session less than a week when it became evident to officials of the company that the entire production of Country Club roadsters would be insufficient to meet the demands of its dealers.

E. M. Bachrach, the Overland dealer at Manila, traveled thousands of miles in order to attend the convention. He brought with him a Toledo certified check for $100,000, and was so enthusiastic over the appearance and performance of the Country Club roadster that he was half inclined to invest the whole amount in this one model alone.

FOREIGN SHIPMENTS.

"Shipping automobiles to foreign countries from the United States is a particular business," said Joseph W. Moon, president of the Moon Motor Car Co., St. Louis. "Recently we shipped three of our 1917 touring cars to Tigal in Java and one to Panama and we are now holding shipments of 6 to Spain and 4 to Sweden and Norway because of our inability to find ships to carry them. Our general sales, for the month of February were 2.64 times greater than for February, 1916.

Russia's Working War Prisoners.

PETROGRAD, March 24.—At the end of last year 1,138,410 prisoners of war were at work in this country, being employed in agriculture, mines, factories, on roads, railway and other communication lines.

ALLEN'S MT. WILSON CLIMB

Motorists are becoming more enthusiastic than ever over mountain climbing. They are anxious to give their machines crucial tests at their own hands, in the hope that the outcome will be successful, thus bringing new glory to the car they drive. This applies to owners of moderate-priced cars as well as to owners of the higher-priced machines, so reliable has the lower-priced car of today proven itself to be. This spirit prompted C. E. Cox of Middleboro, Mass., to make a recent ascent of Mount Wilson, one of California's beautiful peaks, in an Allen roadster. The trip proved to be a remarkable one.

Rising from sea level, Mr. Cox's Allen roadster climbed to a height of 6000 feet, a distance of nine and one-half miles by road. The weather was very warm and the grade in some places varies from 15 up to as high as 19 per cent. Under these trying conditions the radiator of the average car would have required additional water on account of boiling, but Mr. Cox experienced no trouble whatever in keeping the temperature down without adding one drop of water to the supply started with.

Glenn Curtiss, the noted aviator and builder of aeroplanes, who was the first man to fly in an aeroplane in St. Louis, is a Marmon enthusiast when it comes to the automobile. Curtiss has a Marmon 34 convertible sedan car, in which he makes long-distance earth-flights on the splendid roads in Central New York. "I like the Marmon," said Curtiss the other day to a St. Louis friend who visited him at his home, "because it gives one the sensation of flying—it glides so smoothly that one doesn't feel as if he's in contact with earth at all."

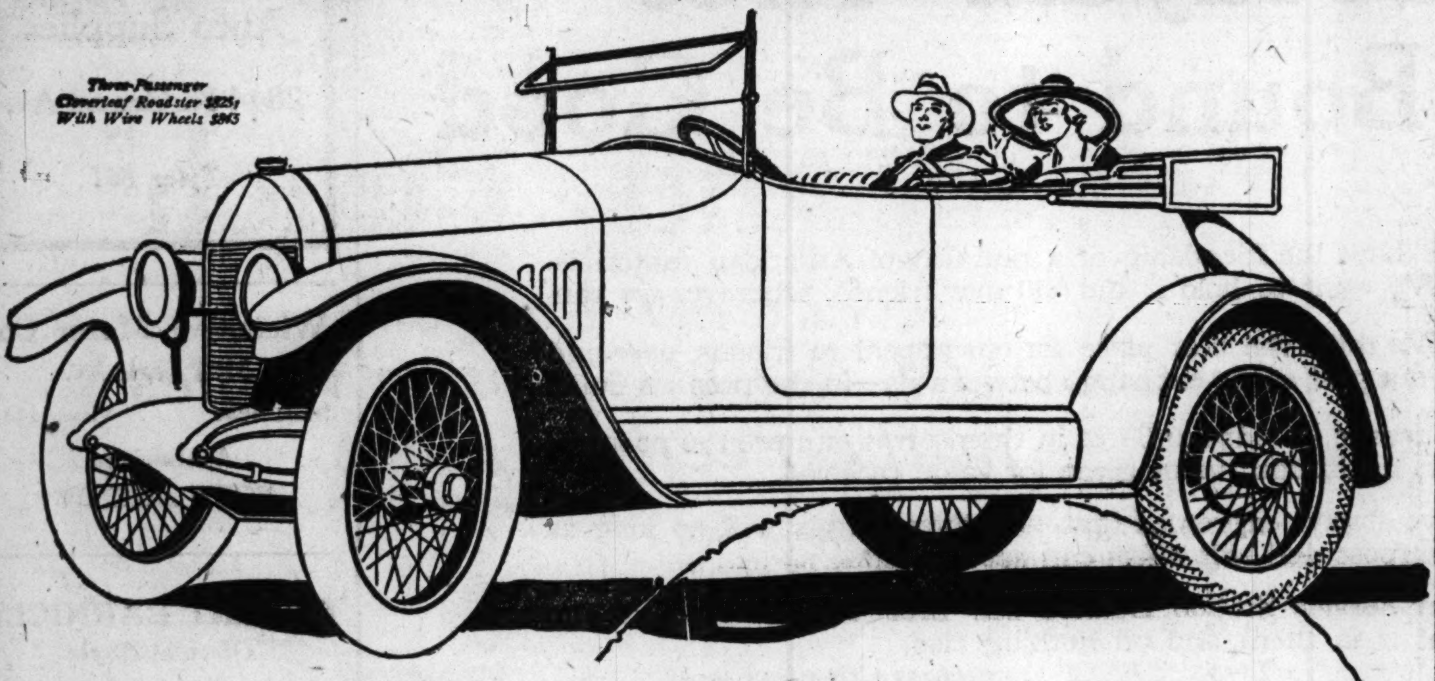
Crow-Elkhart



Three-Passenger Cloverleaf Roadster $825; With Wire Wheels $865

COME TODAY!

A Wonderful Improvement in Power!

NOW, Martin E. Crow has developed the only Counterbalanced Crankshaft Motor in any car under $1500. He has achieved the ultimate in power refinement. Sweetness—such as you never felt before—is yours at all speeds, past 60 miles an hour!

This new power flows—like liquid—silently, with rare resilience. It diminishes to a lazy walk or expands to soar over the highest hill without any attention-attracting sensation.

In the 9-Year Chassis—of the latest, greatest light car improvements developed out of millions of miles of service—comes this newest automobile success. And you get 20 to 30 miles on a gallon of gasoline because smoothness means economy!

At $795 the Crow-Elkhart is America's largest automobile—with wide 49-inch rear seat and extra tonneau room for two auxiliary seats. The Cloverleaf Roadster is classic in line and arrangement—a dashing car for red bloods.

HUDSON-PHILLIPS GETS HARROUN CAR AGENCY

An announceemnt awaited with such interest in local auto circles is the advent of the new Harroun car's entrance into the market. The big, little five-passenger car, put out by the Harroun Motors Corporation of Detroit, of which Ray Harroun, former racing driver, is vice president and chief engineer, will be sold and distributed in St. Louis and surrounding territory by the Hudson-Phillips Motor Car Co., local distributors of the Hudson Super-Six automobiles.

The new Harroun car has a valve-in-the-head motor with a bore of 3¼x5¼-inch stroke. For ignition there is a Bosch Magneto. The Stewart Vacuum System is used with the fuel tank at the rear. The wheelbase of the car is 106 inches with extra wide, roomy seats, the rear seat measuring 49 inches inside the upholstery. The lines of the car are similar to the latest creations in larger cars. Bodies are regularly finished in green, with brown wheels, a pleasing contrast being obtained through the use of a khaki top and side curtains.

MARION PRICE ADVANCE

Frank Bishop of the Briscoe Motor Sales Co., 3141 Locust street, St. Louis distributors for the Marion-Handley, were advised last week by the factory that on April 10 there would be a $75 advance on the price of all models.

The Marion-Handley line, called the Six Pre-Eminent, is made up of two models, the "six-40" listing now at $1275, and the "six-60," priced at $1575. All cars sold before April 10 will carry the present price.

INTELLIGENT MEN FOR EFFICIENT SERVICE

"There is probably nothing as important in the motor car business today and, at the same time, as widely misunderstood as the word service," said J. D. Perry Lewis of the Lewis Automobile Co., the local Chandler distributer.

"The prime prerequisite of service is that it be intelligently rendered. Promptness and dispatch are features, but these are both of little or no value unless it is intelligent service, a quality so often found lacking.

"By intelligent we mean that the man assigned to any particular piece of world should know exactly what he is doing.

"It is hit-or-miss repairing and adjusting to which many owners can trace the major portion of their trouble. There should never be a question as to where the trouble is located. A man thoroughly experienced with a certain car can trace it with a precision that is almost uncanny.

"In our service department we have mechanicians who have been in the automobile business since the days of the "one-lunger." They have studied motor cars and know them, especially do they know the Chandler. It is this that we mean when we say that efficient service must be intelligent service.

OVERLAND PRICES UP

Prices of six models of the Willys-Overland line are to be advanced on April 1, according to information just received by the Overland Automobile Co., Willys-Overland dealer in this city.

The Overland Light Four Touring Car will sell at $695, having been advanced $30. The roadster of the same type sells at $680.

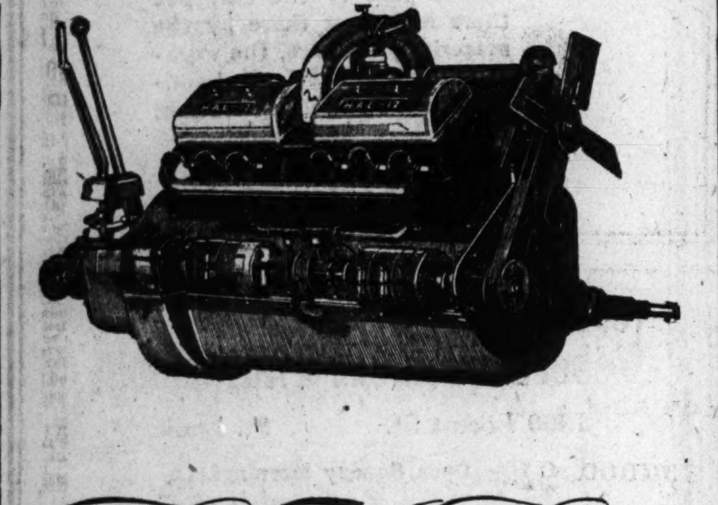
The raise in prices also affects the distinctive and popular Country Club model, which will sell at $795.

The price of the Willys-Knight Four has also been advanced from $1285 to $1395.

The Overland Light Delivery wagons have also gone up in price, the panel type now selling at $730 and the express type at $705.

The prices of the Overland Big Four and the Light Six touring cars will be advanced on May 1. Extended advertising campaigns which had been prepared on these models made it impossible for the new prices of these cars to become effective for another 30 days.

The Associated Press News Service is received and printed exclusively by the Post-Dispatch in the St. Louis evening field.



The Hal Twelve

After you have driven the Hal-Twelve for a short time probably you will admire its economy in fuel, oil and tires almost as much as you admire its great smoothness and remarkable power. The motor is a valve-in-head twelve, developing 87 horse power (brake test). The car weighs 3975 pounds.

Goodyear Tires Are Bound to Be Good

WE have the friendship of a plurality of American motorists. We want to hold it and add new friends, wherever we can.

We think the best place for our appeal to friends, new and old, is in our part of the exchange between us—in the tires we build.

For that reason, Goodyear Tires in themselves express the policy of our whole institution: value given for value received.

They have always expressed that, and they always will, so long as sincere purpose and able effort can accomplish it.

Goodyear Service Station Dealers sell tires on the basis of the good that is in them, and on nothing else.

They employ no lure of delusive discounts, definite mileage guarantees, so-called "free" service.

Every one of these fictitious inducements has to be paid for—we lump the saving and put it back into the tire.

And the money you pay a Goodyear Service Station for tire value buys tire value, and that alone.

If you are a Goodyear Tire user, you know already what the Goodyear Service Station method means to you—your tires have computed it for you in extra miles delivered, in extra months of service, in consistent freedom from trouble.

If you are not a Goodyear Tire user, you owe it to yourself to learn what it can mean to you—in temper, time and dollars saved.

Any Goodyear Service Station Dealer will be glad to furnish the equipment for your instruction—a set of Goodyear Tires.

And he will take pains to help you get out of those tires all the good that's in them.

FRENCH CAPTURE TWO OF LA FERE'S ADVANCE FORTS

They Also Occupy West Bank of River Oise From Outskirts of La Fere as Far North as Vendeuil, Distance of Four Miles.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, March 24.—Two of the advance forts in the defensive system of La Fere, a strong point on the Hindenburg line, have been captured by the French, who have also occupied the west bank of the River Oise from the outskirts of La Fere as far north as Vendeuil, a distance of about four miles. The new French success is chronicled in the official report issued by the war office tonight, which adds that several villages on the east bank of the Ailette River also been taken, the German rear guards being driven back.

The statement reads:

"North of the Somme we have forced back the enemy to the outskirts of Savy, where he had established himself in a line of trenches prepared in advance from the Somme to the Oise. (Savy is four miles west of St. Quentin.)

"Our troops, continuing their success, gave battle to the enemy, who defended himself foot by foot, and pushed him about one kilometer north of Grand Seraucourt and Gibercourt, occupying the west bank of the Oise from the outskirts of La Fere as far north as Vendeuil. Two advanced forts of the defensive system of La Fere fell into our hands.

"South of the Oise, in spite of the inundations effected by the enemy, we made important progress on the east bank of the Ailette, regaining several villages and compelling the German rear guards to retire.

"In the lower section of the forest of Coucy, north of Soissons, there is little change. We found numerous German dead in the trenches taken by us yesterday north of Margival.

"A German long range gun about twelve o'clock today fired a number of shells of heavy caliber on the town of Soissons.

"Artillery fighting has been quite marked in the regions of Berry au-Bac and Rheims, as well as in Alsace in the direction of Violu-Py, south of Col de Sainte Marie.

"Aviation: On March 23 Adjutant Ortoly brought down his fifth German airplane. Today our special guns brought down a German machine which fell in our lines near La Veuve (Marne). This afternoon a German hydroairplane, proceeding in the direction of Etretat (northeast of Havre) was captured at sea; the two aviators were taken prisoner."

'GERMANS TURNING ALLIED OFFENSIVE INTO CONFUSION'

Tageblatt Correspondent Describes Retirement and Destruction on Western Front.

By CYRIL BROWN

"Regarding the goal and limits of the retreat, no details naturally can be given as long as the enemy itself does not display a thorough understanding of the situation. He will still have for weeks to support a tension which must tear to pieces the nerves of the enemy's army leadership. They work before our very eyes and yet are themselves opposed to an invisible enemy, forces bobbing up everywhere in a strength difficult to reconnoiter, and our main forces and main positions still an inscrutable secret.

"Reconnaissances on a broad front are costing the enemy, who is always visible to and get-at-able by us, much blood. The giant offensive has turned at the last moment into a miserable confusion."

Technique of the Retirement.

"The retreat has released a not inconsiderable terrain for motion warfare and here the German infantryman can try out his stronger virtues, in which

Colder weather at the end of this week is the prospect offered by the Weather Bureau, in the weekly forecast sent out yesterday from its Washington office, covering the plains states and the upper and middle Mississipi Valley, which includes St. Louis.

The prediction is for fair weather and moderate temperatures in the first half of the week. Wednesday or Thursday, it is surmised, conditions will become unsettled, and local rains, followed by much colder weather, are predicted for the close of the week.

COMMENT FROM BOX CAUSES NAZIMOVA TO STOP PLAY

Mrs. Marshall Field and Party Leave Theater After Occurrence in Washington.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The temperament of Mme. Alla Nazimova, playing at the Belasco Theater here in "Ception Shoals," coupled with the nervousness of a guest in a box party given by Mrs. Marshall Field, caused the curtain to be rung down during the performance last night.

Toward the end of the second act, when Miss Elizabeth Luckett, in the role of the young mother of a 5-weeks-old baby, was attempting to explain to a girl of her own age, isolated from all women up to this time, about married life, an audible comment came from the box occupied by Mrs. Field. In an instant Mme. Nazimova was heard to say: "Curtain," and the scene closed.

Nazimova told the manager of the theater that she could not proceed. He went to the box occupied by Mrs. Field and her party and the occupants departed. The play was then resumed.

NOTED AUTO DRIVERS IN U. S. INVITED TO JOIN AVIATION UNIT

Movement Started by Aviator De Lloyd Thompson—Would Be Known as "Aerial Sharpshooters."

DETROIT, Mich., March 4.—Information was received here from Los Angeles that De Lloyd Thompson, an aviator, today telegraphed to 11 famous automobile drivers in America, inviting them to become members of an aviation unit to serve the Government in case of war. The proposed unit would be known as "the Aerial Sharpshooters."

GARDENING A PATRIOTIC DUTY

Government Urges Vegetable Cultivation as War Measure.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—A statement urging that as a patriotic duty city residents transform their yards into gardens and farmers so diversify their crops as to make each section self-sustaining, was issued tonight by Carl Vrooman, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

The great need in war time, Vrooman said, would be a surplus of wheat with which the nation could feed its allies. He also declared the acreage of soy beans and cow peas should be increased to augment the resources for protein which in time of emergency could take the place of meat for human consumption. Two or three crops of some sort should be raised during the coming summer, he said, on every vacant square foot in the cities.

NO FUND FOR BIG WASHING

Collector Rothwell Can't Have Federal Building Cleaned for Ad Men.

Fountain Rothwell, Collector of Customs and custodian of the Federal Building, fears the Federal Building may not be washed or cleaned in time to make the city's public buildings presentable during the admen's convention in June, unless an appropriation for the work, asked for several months ago, is rushed through by the authorities in Washington.

Rothwell pointed out that no word as to the appropriation had been received here and he believes the press of other matters considered more important in Washington has caused officials to lose sight of his request. Because of the delay bids have not been asked for on the work of cleaning the building.

LONDON TO SET CLOCKS AHEAD

Italy and France Also Are to Adopt Changes in Time.

LONDON, March 24.—All clocks in the United Kingdom will be moved forward one hour at 2 o'clock on the morning of April 8. The clocks will be moved back again Sept. 17.

The Italian Government has issued a decree that all clocks shall be moved forward one hour for the period between April 1 and Sept. 30. France also will move its clocks forward one hour beginning today.

WHITLOCK AND OTHER AMERICANS TO LEAVE BELGIUM

RELIEF WORK HAMPERED

Germany Arraigned by U. S. in Announcement of Withdrawal of Envoy.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Because of "the German Government's disregard for its written undertakings" for the protection of Americans and American relief work in Belgium, the State Department announced today that American Minister Brand Whitlock had been withdrawn from Brussels and the staff of the American Commission for Relief in Belgium advised that they should not remain longer in German occupied territory.

Minister Whitlock, who has been kept on Belgian territory chiefly to aid the relief work, will go to Havre, the temporary capital of the Belgian Government. The places of the American relief workers will be taken by Dutch citizens and the commission through that means will continue from outside bases as best it can the work of caring for 10,000,000 dependent Belgians.

The department's announcement, one of the most severe indictments of Germany yet drawn by the United States, recites that restrictions have been imposed on the Americans "which, under ordinary conditions, would never have been tolerated," and that Minister Whitlock has been denied diplomatic privileges and courtesy. It says that the most serious development, however, has come within the last 10 days, when several of the commission's relief ships have been attacked without warning by German submarines in flagrant violation of the solemn engagements of the German Government.

Whether Germany will continue to make the relief work difficult for other administrators is not known here.

Why Commission Was Withdrawn.

The following announcement was given out by the State Department:

"By direction of the President, the Minister at Brussels has been instructed to withdraw from Belgium with foreign diplomatic and consular officers and take up his official residence at Havre.

"After consultation with the commission for relief at Belgium, Mr. Whitlock has also been instructed to arrange for the departure of the American members of the commission. This step, the seriousness of which is fully appreciated by the Government, was taken only after careful consideration and full consultation with all the interests involved.

"When diplomatic relations with Germany were broken off, the normal procedure would have been to withdraw the Minister at Brussels and the American members of the relief commission. Both this Government and the commission, however, felt a heavy moral responsibility for the millions of innocent civilians behind the German lines and it was decided that the work of the commission must be kept going, despite all difficulties, until continued American participation should become impossible.

"For over two years it has been the single-minded purpose of this Government and the commission to see that these ten millions of civilians were fed, and with this end in view the Americans concerned have submitted to restrictions forced on them by the German authorities, which under ordinary conditions would never have been tolerated.

Whitlock's Work Hampered.

"Immediately after the break in relations the German authorities in Brussels withdrew from Mr. Whitlock the diplomatic privileges and immunities which he had up to that time enjoyed. His courier service to The Hague was stopped; he was denied the privilege of communicating with the Department of State in cipher and later even in plain language. The members of the relief commission were placed under great restrictions of movements and communications which hampered the efficient performance of their task. In spite of all these difficulties, the Government and commission were determined to keep the work going till the last possible moment.

"Now, however, a more serious difficulty has arisen. In the course of the past 10 days several of the commission's ships have been attacked without warning by German submarines in flagrant violation of the solemn agreements of the German Government. Protests addressed by this Government to Berlin through the intermediary of the Spanish Government have not been answered.

"The German Government's disregard of its written undertaking causes grave concern as to the future relief work. In any event, it is felt that the American staff of the commission can no longer serve with advantage in Belgium. Although a verbal promise has been made that the members of the commission would be permitted to leave if they desire, the German Government's observance of its other undertakings has not been such that the department would feel warranted in accepting responsibility for leaving these American citizens in German occupied territory.

"This Government has approved the

WIDOW RENOUNCES WOOD WILL; WANTS HALF OF $3,000,000

ACTION CUTS BEQUESTS

Reduces Those to Four Institutions Made by Humane Society Head.

Mrs. Minnie Wood, widow of Henry Wood, millionaire president of the Missouri Humane Society, and former president of the Union Dairy Co., yesterday filed a renunciation of her husband's will, which was filed Friday, and elected to take her dower interest, one-half the estate, the total value of which has been estimated from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000.

If this renunciation stands at law, it will reduce by nearly one-half the bequests made to four institutions which were to be the ultimate chief beneficiaries—the Bethesda Foundling Home, St. Luke's Hospital, St. Louis Children's Hospital and the Jewish Hospital.

It will not, however, interfere with the bequest of an ultimate sum of $20,000 to the Humane Society, or with the immediate bequests of $5000 to the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer and $3000 to the Memorial Home. A bequest of $20,000 to Alma Cummings, 6-year-old daughter of Mrs. Minnie K. Cummings, a widow of 4909 Parkview place, will also stand.

Lived Apart About 10 Years.

Wood and his wife, it was learned yesterday, had lived apart for about 10 years. He was 70 years old, and she was about the same age. He lived at the Buckingham Hotel, she at the Windermere Hotel. A friend said they had disagreed about adopting a child, as they were childless. Mrs. Wood was for a time in a sanitarium in the East, suffering from a nervous breakdown. It was said that there was a reconciliation between Wood and his wife, three days before his death, which occurred last Monday at St. Luke's Hospital.

Wood's will established a trust fund for the benefit of a number of persons, including his wife. Her annual income was fixed at $2400, while that of Wood's two sisters in England was fixed at $3000 each. Two nephews were among the heirs. After the death of all the heirs, the property was to go in equal shares to the four institutions named, $20,000 first being deducted for the Humane Society.

The will also provided that, if there was a surplus of income after the payment of the annuities, $1000 a year should go to the Humane Society and the remainder should be divided among the four institutions. The halving of the estate, by the widow's action, will reduce, if it does not remove, this surplus.

Surprise to Child's Mother.

The bequest of $20,000 to Alma Cummings was a surprise to her mother, the latter said yesterday. Mrs. Cummings was a saleswoman in the Union Dairy Co. retail store before her marriage, about eight years ago, to the late George R. Cummings Jr. Soon after her marriage, she said, she introduced her husband to Wood, and Wood visited them at the Buckingham Hotel, where they lived. He first saw Alma when she was about 6 months old, and showed an increasing fondness for this child, who was taken to see him in the hospital at his request. Cummings died last summer from the effects of an accident at a bathing beach near Boston, and his wife took charge of his business, as head of a shoe manufacturers' supply company.

TWO WOMEN SERIOUSLY HURT WHEN CAR AND AUTO COLLIDE

Mrs. Robert Sheehy and Miss Margaret Cummings, both of 4108 Westminster place, were seriously injured yesterday afternoon when an automobile in which they were riding collided with a Page avenue car at Grand and Finney avenues. Three others in the machine were thrown out.

The machine, driven by Mrs. Sheehy, was southbound on the west side of Grand avenue. It crashed headon with the street car as it was turning from Grand avenue into Finney. Mrs. Sheehy was thrown through the windshield. She was cut about the head and face and hurt internally. Miss Cummings sustained fractures of three ribs, internal injuries and a long cut on her cheek.

Others in the machine were Robert and Leo Sheehy and Miss Catherine Cummings.

MAN IS SHOT BY A ROBBER

William Dickerhoff, 52 years old, of 1442 North Twenty-third street, a cigar manufacturer, was shot at 11:15 last night on Twenty-second street near Mullanphy street by one of two men who held up Dickerhoff and a man who was walking with him. Dickerhoff's wound, in the left side above the thigh, was treated at his home by his son-in-law, Dr. J. L. Price, who said it did not appear to be dangerous.

Dickerhoff said his companion, whose name he did not remember, resisted one of the robbers, who was unarmed, and that the one with a revolver then fired twice. After wounding Dickerhoff, the men ran away without taking anything from either man.

SPEAKER PICTURES GRAVE PLIGHT OF UNTRAINED SOLDIER

Military Camps Teaching Americans Value of Preparedness, Army Officer Says.

CONFERENCE HELD HERE

College Presidents Report That They Heartily Favor Training for Students.

Maj. Paul B. Malone, U. S. A., officer in charge of military training camps, in a speech last night at the Planters Hotel at a conference dinner of the Military Training Camps Association, pictured dramatically the quandary of an unprepared soldier in the event he had to go to war. "Yet in two weeks some of us may be called upon to do this!" he exclaimed.

He declared that 20,000 men who have attended the training camps in the last 3½ years have done more to awaken the United States to its unpreparedness than all the army officers and civilian officials had been able to do in 100 years.

"And that is because they realized after five weeks' hard training how unprepared to take the field they were," the Major continued. "When a man goes into the training camp he feels that within that time he will be fully equipped to receive a Major's commission; after the third week he realizes that it takes a great deal longer to make a first-class private. But in five weeks we can teach him the difficulties of leading men into action."

Says America Needs Training.

Maj. Malone said America needed this training not only for today, but also because of the centuries that are to come. He briefly traced the history of the world, and blamed all wars upon the commercial desires of some particular nation at some particular time.

"After all, the potentiality of any nation depends upon its commerce and its metal supply, [illegible] hard thing to say to a mother—'We want your son to shoulder a gun and fight for that flag with his life,'—but it is necessary sometimes.

"The day has come when we must face this proposition squarely. We must turn our backs upon a century of tradition, and bow to the teachings and warnings of history. The trumpet call to national service is sounding through the halls of every nursery of education in the country. We need, we must have, universal compulsory military service."

Bishop Tuttle, venerable head of the Episcopal Church in the United States, who was the first speaker at the dinner, said:

"I belong to an organization whose Master is the Prince of Peace, yet he is the same One who said, 'Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's,' and recognized the authority of civil government; and once He said, 'My kingdom is not of this world.' The civil Government under its flag has a right to fight."

Speakers in Friendly Tilt.

The session was enlivened by a friendly tilt between Dr. H. W. Hart, president of McKendree College at Lebanon, Ill., and Dr. C. H. Rammelkamp, president of Illinois College at Jacksonville, Ill. They were introduced as the heads of institutions, each of which claimed to be the first of its kind in their state.

"I can say this much for Dr. Rammelkamp's institution—it produced William Jennings Bryan," remarked Dr. Hart.

"I hope you will not regard Bryan, in this crisis, as a typical alumnus," retorted Dr. Rammelkamp, pleasantly. "But I might add that one of Bryan's grandfathers came from McKendree College."

Dr. Edmund J. James, president of the University of Illinois, was toastmaster, and the dinner, as well as the day conferences, was attended by prominent educators from many states and by army officers.

Dr. Henry S. Drinker, president of Lehigh University, at South Bethlehem, Pa., and chairman of the Governing Committee of the Military Training Camps Association, was introduced by Dr. James as the college president who had done more than any other educator, possibly, to interest American schools in military education.

Dr. Drinker declared that military camps are an agent of democracy. "When you have a millionaire from New York, a Harvard man, a store clerk from Maine, a locomotive engineer from Florida, a college president, drilled by a Sergeant from the regular army, then you have true democracy. That's what the camp produces."

List of Camps to Be Announced.

It was announced that all interested in attending a training camp this summer may obtain full details by writing to the Military Training Camps Association, Federal Building, Chicago. An authoritative list of camps, and the dates on which they will be held, will be announced tomorrow. It has been definitely decided to hold camps at Ft. Snelling, Ft. Riley and Ft. Sheridan.

At the day sessions, held at the Missouri Athletic Association's clubhouse, Dr. Drinker read the report of the Advisory Board of College Presidents. This was that college presidents had decided that volunteer military training camps are valuable vacational pursuits, and that efforts should be made to induce all students to attend such camps.

"We find that there is less drinking and rowdyism in the training camps than in the college," the report stated. "We urge each and every one of you

GRAND DUKE RETIRES AS HEAD OF RUSSIAN ARMY

LONDON, March 24.—The retirement of Grand Duke Nicholas from his post as commander in chief of the Russian armies is officially confirmed, according to a Reuter dispatch from Petrograd. Pending the appointment of a successor, the dispatch adds, Gen. M. V. Alexieff, chief of the general staff, will act as commander in chief.

The retention of Grand Duke Nicholas as commander in chief was considered undesirable by the Russian Minister of War because of the Grand Duke's connection with the Romanoff dynasty.

PETROGRAD, March 24.—Gen. Alexei E. Evert has been replaced by Gen. Letchitzky as commander of the Russian army on the central front. Gen. Letchitzky was in command of the extreme southern wing of the armies on the Russian front during Gen. Brussiloff's offensive early last summer. It was his force which drove the Austro-Hungarians out of Czernowitz and subsequently cleared Bukowina of hostile troops.

ASKS ALIENS OPENLY TO ADHERE TO AMERICA'S CAUSE

Former Peruvian Minister to U. S., Living in New York, Says Country Upholds Humanity.

NEW YORK, March 24.—A statement calling upon every alien in the United States to make "an open demonstration of adherence" to the great causes the country is upholding was issued here tonight by F. A. Pezet, former Peruvian minister to the United States, who now is in business in this city.

"I think that the time has come," Pezet said, "when it is necessary that all aliens residing in the United States [illegible] of this country and the many advantages that its free institutions offer, should make an open demonstration of adherence to the great causes that this nation upholds in its present stand on behalf of the rights of all people and more especially of the peoples of the Americas.

"If I could make my voice heard from one end to the other of this nation I would call upon all aliens who enjoy the protection of 'Old Glory' to sign the pledge of adherence to the great cause of humanity that the United States upholds."

POLICE FIND STOLEN AUTO AND CAR IS RESTOLEN FROM THEM

Machine Standing Before Station Taken While Man Is Being Questioned About It.

A stolen automobile, standing in front of the Dayton Street Police Station, was restolen last night while police inside the station were questioning Thomas Sullivan about how he came into possession of it.

Sullivan, 20 years old, of 1619 North Leffingwell avenue, was arrested near Twenty-second and Locust streets, when dealers reported that he was trying to sell a machine. The machine bore an Illinois license, and police records showed it had been stolen Thursday night from 3117 Locust street.

At the station Sullivan insisted the auto had been given him by a friend, and denied he had tried to sell it. When he was taken to a cell, a half hour later, a chauffeur was sent to the street with instructions to put the machine in a garage. The car was gone.

NONPARTISAN MEETING TO PLEDGE SUPPORT TO PRESIDENT

Mayor Kiel to Call Gathering Which Will Be Similar to Those Held in Other Cities.

A nonpartisan mass meeting will be called for next Saturday, to pledge loyal support to President Wilson and to urge Congress to pass a law for universal military training. The place of the meeting will be announced by Mayor Kiel.

The Mayor received a telegram yesterday from Howard H. Gross of Chicago, president of the Universal Military Training League, asking him to call the mass meeting. The message said meetings were to be held at the same time in other large cities. The Mayor replied that he would gladly issue the call.

'AMERICANS WOULD GO INTO CONFLICT BODY AND SOUL'

Paris Paper Says They Would Give to Task Keenness "They Put Into Business."

PARIS, March 24.—The Journal Des Debats, in a long and friendly discussion of America's position, says:

"Once the Americans begin fighting, they will go into the conflict body and soul and with the energy and tenacity that characterizes them. They will want to succeed and will joyously consent to the heaviest sacrifices. The idealists will be interested passionately in the great enterprise of the liberation of the world. Others will give to the task the keenness they put into the management of their enormous businesses."

PRIVATE WIRELESS SUPPRESSED

DALLAS, Tex., March 24.—Forty-six private radio plants have been dismantled in Dallas and vicinity during the last ten days by agents of the Department of Justice, it became known today.

According to Special Agent Spencer under whose supervision the destruction of the plants was carried out, several of them were powerful enough to have communicated directly with German radio stations on the other side of the Atlantic.

SUPPLIES FOR ARMY BEING BOUGHT TO LIMIT OF ITS APPROPRIATIONS

GENERAL MILITARY BUDGET TO BE SENT TO CONGRESS

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Having taken virtually every defense measure possible before the assembling of Congress, President Wilson and his advisers are concentrating their efforts to prepare for the more sweeping steps for which congressional authority will be sought.

The details of the steps to be recommended are held in closest confidence, but officials let it be known today that a general military budget, co-ordinating many items of expense deemed imperative, will be laid before the House and Senate when the extra session begins.

During the day the Council of National Defense held a long conference with its Advisory Committee of seven industrial leaders, who mapped out mobilization plans for the country's economic resources, the Navy Department awarded contracts for destroyers, and called a conference of steel and other material companies for next week to consider means of speeding naval construction. The War Department announced that failure of the army appropriation bill at the last session of Congress would not be permitted to handicap the army's preparations and regulations were promulgated to guide the country's newspapers in a voluntary censorship preventing publication of details which might embarrass the Government.

President in Close Touch.

With these developments President Wilson kept in close personal touch. Late in the afternoon, after a walk, he and Mrs. Wilson went to the state, navy and war building and paid visits to Secretary Baker and Secretary Daniels. The talk with the War Secretary lasted nearly an hour.

In making the awards on destroyers today, Secretary Daniels accepted the maximum estimate of each of the three companies submitting figures. Of the 24 ordered, nine will be built under the emergency fund, Congress having specifically authorized only 15. A considerable number of other builders were in conference with officials, however, and indications are that today's order will be doubled or even trebled, if facilities for construction can be found.

Regarding the activities of the War Department, Secretary Baker made this statement to the newspaper men:

"Of course, everybody knows that the international situation is tense. The War Department, like every other department of the Government, is busy with a state of preparation, but without attempt on the part of the department or anybody else to determine what that preparation is for, except to put our national strength in a state of efficiency.

"Everybody realizes that this is a sort of unnatural situation. We are making preparations and buying supplies and all that sort of thing, and yet the policy of the country is still to be determined by the legislative body and just what will happen is to be determined by the President and Congress.

"All that you can say of the War Department is that it is pressing ahead all purchases of everything that will be needed to keep an army, if the army is to be called upon."

Precedent for Quick Action.

In awarding contracts for the 24 destroyers on the same day that bids were opend, the Navy Department established a precedent for quick action. All the vessels, which will duplicate the 35-knot type, already building, will be contracted on a basis of cost plus 10 per cent profit. Contracts for ten went to the Union Iron Works, San Francisco; eight to the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., Quincy, Mass., and six to William Cramp, & Sons, Philadelphia.

Emergency funds provided by Congress are to be used in hurrying these and other naval vessels to completion. Builders engaged on battle cruiser contracts conferred during the day with the Compensation Board which will allot the emergency appropriation.

The Council of National Defense and the Advisory Committee were in session virtually all day considering reports on what had been accomplished. It was stated that an official attached to the committee, a retired business man of wide experience, recently had spent several weeks in the Quartermaster's Department, going over the army purchasing system. As a result of much study he has reported to Secretary Baker that he was filled with admiration for the efficiency, zeal and adequacy of the service.

Contracts for the quartermaster's supplies, such as clothing, shoes, tentage, etc., have been placed up to the limit of available funds with a provision for the automatic extension of the orders on a large scale as soon as additional funds are available. In this connection, it was stated officially today, that the country was in a better position to get quickly an adequate supply of army rifles than ever before in its history.

The general military budget to be laid before Congress is expected to include many army measures which failed at the last session, and which are now being restudied and co-ordinated. The nature of any recommendation as to changes in army organization, such as the adoption of a universal service policy, has not been disclosed.

Underwriters Offer Aid.

A possible new element for the consideration of the National Defense Council was called to its attention today by Richard M. Bissell and Wilbur E. Mallalieu of New York, president and general manager respectively of the National Board of Fire Underwriters. The board has offered to organize and direct for the Government the working out of a broad plan for dealing with fire prevention requirements. The theory on which the suggestion was based was that a campaign of incendiarism might follow an outbreak of hostilities with Germany.

The underwriters have detailed information as to fire-fighting facilities throughout the country and a highly trained corps of engineers and inspectors. These agencies were placed at the disposal of the Government, together with all the administrative machinery of the organization to meet any emergency. Secretary Baker referred the matter to the Advisory Commission of the council for consideration.

Returning congressional leaders have begun to lay their plans for whatever the President may recommend at the extra session, and today Chairman Kitchin called the House Ways and Means Committee to meet next Wednesday. While the primary purpose is to consider organization matters, the Government's fiscal situation is sure to be discussed. Members are talking among themselves of a huge Government credit to the allies, but any action to that end will await the President's announcement of his program. On Monday Representatives Flood of Virginia, Ragsdale of South Carolina and Harrison of Mississippi, members of the Foreign Affairs Committee, will confer with Secretary Lansing.

Navy Yard Jobs for Strikers.

CUMBERLAND, Md., March 24.—Fifty machinists and helpers at the Western Maryland Railway shops at Ridgeley, near this city, struck today in sympathy with the Hagerstown men, 300 of whom walked out Monday. Government representatives today were offering the men places in the navy yards as skilled mechanics. A few accepted.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ENLISTMENT ARE EXACTING

MANY OFFER, FEW CHOSEN

Woman Here Wishes to Join Army; Another Would Like to Enlist in Navy.

Medical and physical examinations of applicants for enlistment in the army, navy, marine corps and militia are just as strict and exacting now, when the nation is facing a crisis, as in times less urgent.

Around the recruiting stations yesterday small groups were congregated most of the day, eager for information of requirements for enlistment and probabilities of actual service.

Recruiting officers for the First Missouri Infantry yesterday outlined to a Post-Dispatch reporter detailed qualifications necessary to pass the tests. The prospective recruit must be between 18 and 35 years of age, weigh between 120 and 190 pounds, and be 5 feet 4 inches or more in height. He must possess a symmetrical body, well developed, together with a fairly acute sense of hearing. Most important of all, he must have good eyes, especially the right eye, which is the "shooting eye." His vision must be normal or better. He must not have "hammer toes" (overlapped toes), which tend to lessen marching ability. Upon a recruit's ability to show a good set of teeth depends a large proportion of his chances of acceptance. The head, chest, abdomen, limbs, heart, lungs and other internal organs, are also examined by the surgeons. Finallq, the applicant must be unmarried and of good moral character.

"Your Country Needs You."

"Your Country Needs You," "Enlist Now First Regiment Missouri Infantry, N. G.," and "Be With Your Friends When They Go To War" are slogans that appear before the two new recruiting offices for the First Battalion, First Regiment, at 611 Locust street and 618 Olive street that opened yesterday.

At this office one man was accepted and six men were told to return for further examination out of a total of 29 applicants. At the recruiting station at 618 Olive street three men were accepted out of 21 applicants. James E. Hobbs, 1211 Carr street, and William J. Petering, 2310 Palm street, were accepted. Maj. E. J. McMahon, in charge of both offices, said the First Battalion needs 300 men to bring it up to war strength.

Of 30 applicants at the recruiting office of the Second Battalion, 302 North Sixth street, only five men were able to pass the physical examinations. They were Walter Sharp of 2905 Magnolia avenue and Leo M. Cunningham of 1279 Wagner terrace; Edmund A. Quasebarth, 3963 Wyoming street; Edwin H. Jefferies, 6414 Westminster place; Henry J. Decker, 1701 Wash street.

U. S. Army Recruiting.

Nine men applied at the United States Army recruiting office, at Third and Olive streets, and eight were accepted. They were: George Callicutt, 2701 Tamm avenue; Thomas J. Kelly, 5734 Garfield avenue; Perrie E. Hoppe, 5749 Garfield avenue; George D. Randolph and Joseph H. Allison, both of Point Pleasant, Mo.; Bailey R. Russell, Sedalia, Mo.; William Ross, Brighton, Io.; Roscoe Chrisman, Lagondo, Mo.

At the United States Marine Corps recruiting station, in the Fullerton Building, 12 men were accepted out of 30 applicants. They were Joseph Berger, 2920 Eads avenue; Harry Shockley, East St. Louis; James Myers, 1915 Twenty-first street, East St. Louis; Alonzo Clark, Centerville, Io.; Travis Lee Evans, Muskogee, Ok.; Paul Bailey, Carbondale, Ill.; McKinley Glenn, Du Quoin, Ill.; William Pratt, Louisiana, Mo.; Samuel Knox, Norcatur, Kan.; Fred Harper. Kansas City, Mo.; James B. McDonald, St. Louis; James McGee, Atlanta, Ga.

Woman Wants to Serve.

A well-dressed young woman applied at the Marine corps office to learn if she was eligible to enlistment in the navy. She was told the Marine Corps was a branch of the navy, but made no provision for women recruits.

In order to heighten recruiting enthusiasm, a recent Marine Corps order provides that all noncommissioned officers on recruiting duty be supplied with complete rifle outfit and accouterments. Henceforth, Sergeants at recruiting stations will explain and demonstrate the working parts of the rifle and other equipment.

The navy recruiting office was moved yesterday from the Federal building, where it has been since 1913, to Seventh and Chestnut streets, in order to accommodate the increase of applications. Four flags will be hung from windows.

COULD SOON HAVE DIVISION IN FRANCE, ROOSEVELT SAYS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 24.—Theodore Roosevelt, in an address here today, said he would have a division of American soldiers in the trenches of France within four or five months if given permission by the Government.

The statement was made just after the band had played "Dixie" and Col. Roosevelt had remarked, "I would like to hear that tune against Von Hindenburg's line in France."

Col. Roosevelt departed today for Fort Myer, to hunt devil fish.

proposals of the Netherlands Government to send into Belgium a certain number of Netherlands subjects to carry on work thus far performed by the American staff."

German Statement as to Belgian Relief Ships.

BERLIN, March 22, by wireless to the Associated Press, via Tuckerton, N. J., March 24.—The negotiations for the release of 15 Belgian relief steamers now at English ports have failed, but a new effort to this end may be made, according to the German naval authorities.

"It is not our fault that negotiations have failed," said a representative of the admiralty today. "We are willing to do all on our power to provide safe conduct for these ships to Rotterdam, but, in order to do so, we must have the names of the ports to which they are bound and the routes; otherwise, it would be absolutely impossible to safeguard them in the war zone. The British refuse this, such refusal being merely a cloak to the British plan to confiscate the ships, with their 70,000 or 80,000 tons of grain. Then they are to put the blame on us if the Belgians starve.

"As to the three relief ships lost, the Storstad was sunk by a submarine within the forbidden zone. We can and will make no distinction within that zone. When the Storstad entered it, it did so at its own peril. The other two ships, the Lars Fastenas and the Lars Kruse, must have been sunk by a mine, not by a submarine."

RUSSIANS TAKE TOWN FIRED BY TURKS, WHO FLEE

he always has been superior to the troops of the allies. With his better knowledge of terrain, of the distribution of forces, he can act more elastically than the enemy, feeling his way into the unknown.

"Here is an unbridled, new fighting spirit; a farewell and reprisal fighting; a hunger for deeds. Once more it is the war of man against man, of ruse against ruse.

"It was wonderful how volunteers offered themselves in whole groups. Until the last minute the blasting commanders remained in the villages and hamlets, doing their duty and then seeking to put their way back. Masterful was the system of the general retreat. For every platoon the direction to be followed had been prescribed, and despite the tremendous mass of men and baggage there was no confusion, no friction, no mixup.

Work of Destruction.

"The time for retreat was made known to each formation through dispatch riders. Giant loads of dynamite had been brought on in motor trucks. Previously they had inconspicuously here and there burned down houses and larger buildings whenever a particularly heavy bombardment was hurled to make the enemy think his shells were responsible.

"This preparatory work of destruction extended over very many days, and finally one could, under the shelter of a heavy fog, proceed to the final stage of burning down villages and hamlets."

British Occupy Roisel, Seven Miles East of Peronne.

LONDON, March 24.—The British have occupied the village of Roisel, on the Somme, according to the official report from British headquarters in France tonight. Roisel is seven miles east of Peronne. Heavy fighting took place at Beaumetz-Lez-Cambria, where the Germans, in a strong attack, gained a footing. By a counter attack the British again drove them out. The statement reads:

"Our troops have occupied Roisel, seven miles east of Peronne.

"This morning strong hostile detachments again attacked our positions in Beaumets-Lez-Cambrai and obtained a temporary footing in the village. They were immediately counter attacked and driven out, leaving a few prisoners in our hands.

"We have made progress during the day on a front of one and a half miles to the southwest and west of Ecoust-St.-Mein (southeast of Croisellles). Enemy attacks on our posts in this neighborhood and north of Boiry-Bacquerelle were repulsed.

"We carried out another successful raid early this morning east of Arras. The enemy's second line was reached and casualties were inflicted. We also entered the enemy's trenches east of Neuville St. Vaast. A number of Germans were killed and occupied dugouts were bombed.

"The enemy attempted to reach our lines this morning near Richebourg L'Avou. (south of Neuve Chapelle), but were dispersed by our fire. Another hostile raiding party reached our trenches west of Messines."

Berlin Reports Engagement Between 'Protecting Troops and Enemy.'

BERLIN, March 24, by wireless to Sayville.—Today's official statement says:

"Western front: On both sides of the Somme and the Oise engagements are occurring between our protecting troops and enemy vanguards. After these frequent engagements, in which they suffer heavy losses, the enemy forces simply grope ahead in a hesitating manner and frequently throw up trenches, being severely hampered in their freedom of movement by our measures.

"Yesterday the French attacked our outposts west of La Fere and along the lowlands of the Aillette; also near Neuville and Margival. They were everywhere repulsed."

Reports Capture of Russians.

German forces under command of Archduke Joseph yesterday stormed the Russian positions on the Rumanian frontier ridge between the Solyomtar and Czobanos valleys, according to today's official statement, and captured 500 Russians.

An announcement regarding the Macedonian front says:

"The engagements between Lakes Ochrida and Presba and near Monastir seem to be over for the time being. From March 12 until March 21, the French made attacks every day. They launched in these attacks considerable portions of their Seventy-sixth, One Hundred and Fifty-sixth and Fifty-Seventh divisions, as well as several colonial regiments.

"The ground gained on March 18 and 18 by the enemy was compensated for by our counter attacks on March 20 and 21. The dominating heights in the mountainous district west and north of the Monastir Basin, which had been the object of the French, are firmly in our hands. The enemy suffered heavy losses, which seem to be the cause of the present quiet."

Russians Take Persian Town, Turks Flee; Retire on Rumanian Front.

PETROGRAD, March 24.—The capture by Russian troops of the Persian town of Kerind, in the sector west of Kermanshah, about 40 miles from the Mesopotamian border, is announced by the War Office. Pursuit of the Turks toward the Mesopotamian border continues:

The announcement follows:

"In the direction of Hamadan our troops, on March 17, occupied the town of Kerind, which had been set on fire and destroyed by the Turks. The enemy withdrew to positions near the village of Khair. The pursuit continues."

Under pressure of German attacks against the Russian position between the rivers Sileha and Chvanich, on the Rumanian front, says the official statement, the Russian troops withdrew to the next line of defense about two-thirds of a mile to the eastward.

IF WILSON WANTS WAR, BRING IT ON, BERLIN PRESS SAYS

FINDS REPORTS PUZZLING

BERLIN, March 23, via London and Amsterdam, March 24.—Latest reports from America have at last served to arouse Germany to the seemingly inevitability of hostile conflict, with or without a declaration of war.

A large part of the German press within the last 24 hours has contained one common thought, expressed in practically identical words, to the effect that "if Wilson in this wanton fashion wants war, let him bring it on. We have once for all made an end to negotiations. Blame for having brought about war would fall on him and his Government."

This thought may well be considered to be probably Germany's last word. It may possibly be further construed as the last perfunctory warning to the American Government to keep American ships and American citizens out of the barred zones.

Under the heading, "Wilson and War," the Vossiche Zeitung says:

"From the latest reports regarding Wilson's intention so much appears clearly, namely, that Wilson would only too gladly induce Germany to declare war or that he would at least like to be in the position of shoving the moral blame for the war he wishes upon German shoulders. Since, however, Germany is just mean enough not to declare war without absolutely a compelling occasion and is unwilling to supply Mr. Wilson with the desired moral pretext for bringing about a state of war, one is seeking refuge in Washington, as usual, in all manner of technicalities."

Germans Kept Guessing.

A peculiar feature of the situation at this end is that, despite a surface sentiment unequivocally for war sounding from America, there is just enough pacifist undertone to keep Germans guessing. Such a puzzler is a dispatch from New York via Berne, declaring that according to Washington reports, Wilson is not letting himself be influenced by chauvinists, but sees in the Russian revolution a possibility of realizing his peace league idea, whilst a Washington dispatch via London assures the German public that "Wilson is not letting himself be pushed into a declaration of war, despite all demands," and that he sees in the Russian revolution an optimistic sign for bringing about a conference regarding the future peace of the world.

The Socialist Vorwaerts is sorely puzzled and at least pessimistic about the situation. It headlines this conflicting news, "War winds with peace rustlings," and says: "Hastened calling of Congress is supplemented by a series of reports in which the war breeze once more blows stronger. So far nothing indicates that torpedoing of three American ships has started a hurricane, but undoubtedly the jingoes are exploiting this to the full.

"A result of the activities of the jingoes is recognizable in the tone of the news now coming from America. One talks of being ready for war, but at the same time mixes in peace notes. As yet there has been no material change in the President's attitude, at least not outwardly, and it will probably continue so until Congress meets."

The following moderate and representative German view of the situation is expressed by the Catholic organ, Germania, which sees England making desperate attempts to enlist America's help to stop up the hole in the blockade through which the Moewe was able to slip and says:

Fears Visit From Submarines.

"One may interpret England's efforts in negotiations with North America regarding participation in patrolling oceans in this sense, even though Wilson's driving motive is in first-line fear of submarines and their posible appearance before the coast of the New World. Final decision in these negotiations can, of course, only come when one has finally decided in Washington to go to war against us.

"Mr. Wilson's impatience can apparently not be bridled much longer. This is shown by the calling of Congress for April 2. One can safely be convinced in America, however, that we don't lose our nerves and heads, as other people do.

"The attempts of the English news service to bring home to us the 'seriousness of the situation, as Lansing is supposed to have expressed himself, will just as little cause us to budge from our calm and purpose course which we have taken as will any other warlike decision of the American Government. They know this full well in Washington today.

"If America wants war it must take upon itself the odium of the attacker, which it deserves. If one can believe French press reports, it is Wilson's intention to go before Congress and declare that the situation created by torpedoing of American ships means a state of war with Germany, without declaration of war. To this we say only: 'Wait and see!' Despite the present undecided hesitation, we have now just as little as formerly any hope that common sense and reason will prevail in the Wilson entourage."

Time for Negotiations Over, Cologne Gazette Says.

AMSTERDAM, March 24.—The Cologne Gazette, commenting on the sinking of the American steamer Healdton on the assumption that she was destroyed in the barred zone says:

"President Wilson's advisers know that American ships can enjoy no preferential treatment in the barred zone. It is therefore a wanton game which Mr. Wilson plays. The facts show him that he has no success with us, thereby.

"If President Wilson on that account desires to produce war, let him do so. We have long taken this possibility into account and do not fear it. The time for negotiations in finally over."

CHILD WITNESS AGAINST FATHER

Testifies at Trial of Man Charged With Killing Teacher.

OKLAHOMIA CITY, Ok., March 24.—Mary, the 10-year-old daughter of John M. Couch, on trial here for the murder of Nellie M. Dunn, a school teacher, last January, who was called to the witness stand unexpectedly by the defense late this afternoon, stoutly denied having told her father anything that could have led him to believe improper practices were being carried on in the studio of Rowland C. Williams, when she visited there with Miss Dunn. She had no love for her father, she said, as Couch sobbed.

Mrs. Mary Couch, divorced wife of the defendant, testified her former husband repeatedly had asked her to sue for a divorce and told her that he and Miss Dunn wanted to get married. "I told him if Nellie loved him and wanted to marry him I would agree to a divorce, otherwise I would not," said the witness.

SUFFRAGISTS AID GOVERNMENT

TOPEKA, Kan., March 24.—Declaring that the United States can no longer endure the ruthless conduct of the German Kaiser in sinking American ships and in taking the lives of American citizens, Gov. Arthur Capper, heretofore an ardent pacifist, in a speech today before the Kansas conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, urged Kansans to stand by President Wilson and Congress in a national crisis.

"I have talked against war because I considered it a wrong against the masses," said the Governor. "But the conduct of the Kaiser is unjustifiable, indefensible, so criminal that all patriotic citizens feel our Government can no longer condone it without loss of self-respect. If we would maintain American honor and American traditions, we must defend them and ourselves against these murderous assaults on human life and human rights."

to make yourselves recruiting agents for these camps."

Dean John R. Effinger of the University of Michigan announced that 21 schools and colleges already have agreed to give credits to the students who attend the camps, and that at least eight more schools are considering such a step.

At the morning session, in relating the history of the training camps, Dr. Drinker said:

"I have had many communications from parents whose sons attended these camps, and they stated that they were gratefully appreciative of the immense benefit, physical and moral, resulting to the young men from that experience.

"Nothing can be better for young Americans, our college and high school students, than the subjection, voluntary and self-imposed, to strict military discipline for five or six weeks in the summer vacation period."

Steamer Rochambeau Reaches Bordeaux.

GROCER AND WIFE ARE ARRESTED IN VIVIANO KIDNAPING

Man 'Held for Capital Offense,' It Is Said at Circuit Attorney's Office.

The grand jury investigation into the kidnaping of 8-year-old Frank Viviano of 5855 Waterman avenue resulted yesterday in the arrest of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Angelo Santino of 920 Wash street and the disclosure that Gaetono Viviano, wealthy macaroni manufacturer, paid $5000 for the safe return of his son.

Santino is a grocer. He was taken into custody by order of Assistant Circuit Attorney McCullen and it was said at the Circuit Attorney's office that he was "held for a capital offense." Death is the extreme penalty for kidnaping in Missouri.

Reporters could not see Santino for a statement, but it was stated that he had denied to the police that he had any knowledge of the Viviano kidnaping. Mrs. Santino, in the evening, was released on $2500 bond.

Comparison of Handwriting.

It is known that, in connection with the grand jury investigation, Santino's handwriting has been compared with that in a letter received by Viviano after the kidnaping. This letter demanded $50,000 ransom.

It is also known that, in December, Viviano had trouble with Santino because of the refusal of Viviano's macaroni firm to extend Santino's credit. Threats against Viviano are declared to have been made at that time.

Details of the method through which Viviano brought about the restoration of the boy became known yesterday. On the night of March 11, after the boy had been missing 11 days, Viviano was called on the telephone at his home.

Told Where to Place Money.

A man at the other end of the wire gave him instructions as to how to pay the ransom. On the next night, March 12, Viviano was to go to the designated place on the Clayton road, two miles west of St. Louis, and there he would find a large stone under which he must place the money.

Viviano followed these instructions. No one was in sight when he placed the money under the stone. On the evening of the next day, March 13, the boy was found wandering on the street by the Rev. Father Butler, pastor of St. Lawrence O'Toole's church.

The following day the Viviano boy, accompanying detectives, found the room in which he had been kept prisoner. It was in a two-story tenement in the rear of 1003 High street.

MONSIGNOR PUNISHED FOR AIDING DISCHARGED SOLDIER

LONDON, March 24.—Mgr. Louis Legraive, vicar general to Cardinal Mercier, primate of Belgium, has been sentenced to nine months' imprisonment and deported to Germany for sheltering a discharged French soldier for one night, according to a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam.

The information is confirmed by a Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam which adds that Canon Allaer, spiritual director of the great seminary of Malines, of which Monsignor Legraive was president, has been sentenced to eight months' imprisonment in Germany for giving shelter to another discharged French soldier.

FRANCE TO PROTEST AGAINST DEVASTATION BY THE GERMANS

Government to Address Neutrals on "Acts of Barbarism" by Retiring Troops.

PARIS, March 24.—The French Government gave notice tonight of its intention to address neutral countries in protest against "acts of barbarism and devastation on the part of the Germans in the French territory which they are evacuating."

The official note announcing this says:

"Entire villages have been pillaged, burned and destroyed. The acts of the Germans are not destined to check the operations of the French armies, but have as their object the ruining for many years of one of the most fertile regions of France."

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, March 24.—The rapidity of the German retreat has somewhat diminished. As the French progress continues, the extent to which the countryside has been laid waste increases; not a dwelling remains intact. This is not the result of artillery fire, but specially prepared bombs, which were placed in the buildings as the Germans left. Cottages and farm houses, which once housed nearly 100,000 peasant farmers, have thus been rendered uninhabitable. Every well has been rendered useless and the houseless peopl now must rely on water brought in barrels by the French soldiers.

CHINA ASKS AUSTRIA-HUNGARY FOR STAND ON SUBMARINE WAR

Failure to Receive Satisfactory Reply Probably Will Cause Diplomatic Break.

PEKIN, March 24.—The Chinese Foreign Office has directed the Chinese Minister at Vienna to ask the Austro-Hungarian Government if it approves of the German submarine policy, because of which China has severed diplomatic relations with Germany. Should a satisfactory reply not be forthcoming, diplomatic relations between China and Austria-Hungary probably will be severed.

Admiral Paul von Hintze, the German Minister, and the legation staff left Pekin today for Shanghai, whence they will sail for San Francisco. From San Francisco Admiral von Hintze, who was formerly German Minister to Mexico, will go by railroad to New York, and thence by a neutral steamer to Europe. The Chinese, American, British and French Governments have granted safe conducts for the Minister and his staff

WOMAN TELLS OF HER OUTINGS WITH NOLKER

Witness for Mrs. Nolker Describes Him as a "Good Spender."

Mrs. Gaston H. Serrano, 21 years old of Kansas City, was the principal witness in behalf of Mrs. Pearl Elizabeth Hyman Nolker in yesterday's hearing of Robert E. Nolker's divorce suit in Judge Cave's court. She called Nolker "Bob" and told of outings which she said she had taken with him, describing him as "a good spender."

Yesterday was the sixth day of the hearing, which has already consumed an amount of time unusual in divorce cases here. Testimony will continue tomorrow, but the time of Mrs. Nolker's appearance, as a witness in her own behalf, has not been announced. Her testimony is expected to take a day or more.

Mrs. Serrano said she was separated from her husband, who is a son of Rafael Serrano of 4136 McPherson avenue, former Mexican Consul here. She said she left her husband nearly a year ago, and that he gave her $15 a week. She admitted, in answer to questions by Nolker's counsel, that she was using the name of "Gladys Montgomery" in her present stay at the Majestic Hotel. Her name before her marriage was Gladys Cooper, she said.

Says Nolker Drank Wine.

She said she met Nolker at the Pendleton Club in 1913, when she was at the club with Serrano, before her marriage. She said she and Serrano and Nolker left the club at 9 a. m. and went to the Fauna Flora resort in the county, where they stayed until 7 a. m. Later, she said, she met Nolker frequently, and went to Fauna Flora with him. He was always drinking, she said, "wine mostly."

Once, she said, when they were at Fauna Flora, Nolker thrust $35 or $40 into her blouse, saying it was a present. At another time, she related, he gave her $16. She said he frequently had $100 bills changed while he was with her.

In cross-examining Mrs. Serrano, Nolker's counsel, A. M. Frumberg, tried to show that money had figured in her appearance as a witness against Nolker. She denied having said to a Mrs. Wingo that if Nolker did not "come across" she would testify against him.

She admitted that, in Frumberg's office recently, she told George Little, a lawyer, who is associated with Frumberg in the case, that for $200 she would withhold her testimony. She said Little took some money out of his pocket, but that she did not accept it, as it was not enough.

Tells of Being Jollied.

She declared that Little "jollied" and complimented her, and added, "he kissed me on the cheek. He said he did not have cash enough and would have to get a check and see me later."

Little was permitted to question Mrs. Serrano, who amplified her statement by saying he kissed her twice. "I hope my taste is better than that," he protested, and she replied: "I didn't feel complimented."

She said she was not getting anything for testifying, and that she appeared only because she was sorry for Mrs. Nolker. She admitted having gone to cafes with a private detective, and with Dr. Ralph Niedringhaus, Mrs. Nolker's physician, in connection with the case. To Frumberg's question, "Who pays for your clothes?" she answered, "None of your business."

Little said afterward to reporters that Mrs. Serrano called at his office Thursday evening and asked for money, and that he ordered her out. She waited about, he said, and followed him when he went to a cafe. He said witnesses were ready to deny that he kissed her.

Man Bitten by a Cat.

Philip Wagner of 2216 South Thirteenth street, a superintendent of the Anheuser-Busch brewery, was bitten on the leg Friday by a cat, in the home of Martin Steubenrauch, 4541 Newport avenue. The cat will be kept under observation for 10 days.

TAX RETURN FROM MANY COUNTIES SHOWS REDUCTION

Washing Away of Land by the Missouri Given as Cause in Two Cases.

UP TO STATE BOARD

Equalization Body to Pass on Assessment Pending Naming of Commisssion.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 24.—Pending appointment of a tax commission, attention of practically the entire State is focused on the new State Board of Equalization, that, within the next few weeks, must decide whether it will indorse the present distribution of taxes or compel all counties to assess property at full value.

Under present arrangement, the city of St. Louis pays more than half the taxes of the State, while 96 of the 114 counties draw more money out of the State Treasury every year than they pay into it.

Gov. Gardner was elected on a platform promising to equalize taxation. Nearly all members of the new board agreed that the only way to make an equal distribution of the tax burden is to assess all property at full value. Tax returns for 1917 being received from counties show that assessments in many of them are reduced each year, and are lower this year than for a decade, in spite of prosperity.

County Clerks Explained.

Letters written by Auditor Hackmann to County Clerks to ascertain the cause of reduced assessments have brought a number of replies.

Andy W. Wilcox, County Clerk of Lafayette County, explains the reduced real estate assessment in his county by saying the Missouri River has washed away a lot of land.

T. J. Freeman, Clerk of Shannon County, ascribes reduced land values to the fact that timber has been cut off.

D. B. Kunkel, Clerk of Holt County, explains a reduction of $24,000 in the value of realty by saying the Missouri River has washed the land away.

J. O. Leaver, clerk of Crawford county, writes: "I can advance no cause for decrease in real estate valuation."

Sam H. Bush, assessor of Shelby county, says he can advance no reason why land values should have fallen there.

"May Raise It to 50 Per Cent."

James S. Owen, clerk of Lincoln county, writes that the county court raised the land assessment 30 per cent last year but that the assessor this year has reduced it to the former figure. "The Board of Equalization may possibly raise it again this year to 50 per cent," he says.

J. W. Hollister, clerk of Carroll county, writes: "I can assign no reason why real estate value is lower except that we have three or four township assessors who are in the habit of making their returns too low."

A. T. Bruner, clerk of Hickory county says: "The real estate is about 10 per cent lower in 1917 than in 1916. The assessor said statistics showed land in Hickory county was assessed higher than in adjoining counties."

Fred H. Harris, clerk of Livingston county: "Our county court has called the assessors together each year and urged them to make an accurate assessment, and to increase it at any rate, but each year the books are returned with a small decrease in the amount of the valuation in each township."

Case of Jasper County.

Jasper county, great zinc mining district, with war prices on that product, has reduced its assessment $491,215.

Assessor W. P. Grisham explains this by saying he made a "readjustment" because some mining land was worked out and some mining plants had been moved to other places.

Almost every reason given is duplicated by one or more counties. Several explain the reduction by saying former assessments contained errors, which, when corrected, automatically reduced the valuation.

State Land Assessment.

The entire land assessment for the State, as indicated by assessors' returns, will be increased $27,599,023. Of this amount St. Louis will bear more than one-third. Former Gov. Hadley, when a member of the Board of Equalization, assumed responsibility for an increase in the taxes and offered a resolution to raise all property to an assessment at full value, as the law requires. Judge James Cowgill, State Treasurer, voted with Hadley, but Elliot W. Major, John P. Gordon and Cornelius Roach, who were members of the board, defeated the resolution.

Delegations from St. Louis and Kansas City came here every year demanding an equalization in assessments. The St. Louis delegation last year argued that property there was assessed at 70 per cent. Members of the board found, they said, that property in St. Louis was assessed at less than 50 per cent, and the situation remained unchanged.

There is a feeling on the board now that, if the cities had come with a lawful valuation of 100 per cent, they would have been in position to demand an adjustment. Such an adjustment would increase tax greatly for one year, but the rate then would be lowered to offset the change.

FRENCH TROOPS FIND BODY OF M'CONNELL, AMERICAN FLYER

Fell at Point of Heavy Fighting With Odds Three to One Against Him.

COMPIEGNE, March 24.—The body of Sergt. James McConnell who, as exclusively cabled to the Post-Dispatch Wednesday, was lost in an aerial battle in the Somme sector on March 19, has been found in a small wood near the village of Jussy on the Crozat Canal at a point where the fighting was heaviest a few days ago.

A French cavalry patrol, skirmishing cautiously through the wood, Thursday afternoon came upon a wrecked airplane and beneath it the body of an aviator in the uniform of a Sergeant. The features were unrecognizable and the man's identification papers, evidently taken by the retiring Germans, were missing.

Inquiry then revealed that the biplane, which had fallen from a great height, bore the number of McConnell's machine and was of the same type. The body was pierced by several machine-gun bullets, indicating McConnel had been killed in midair.

Members of the Lafayette Escadrille raced to the front to bring the body back for burial behind the lines at the escadrille headquarters. Whether their mission was successful has not been learned, but the probability is McConnell already has been buried where he fell, in which case the body cannot be shifted until after the war.

It develops that he and Genet, whose wounds have already healed, were engaged by three instead of two German aircraft, each carrying two men, which made the odds against the American three to one.

GOVERNOR CALLS FOR RECRUITS

Idaho Executive Has Power to Draft Men Under New Law.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, March 24.—Gov. Simon Bamberger issued an official proclamation today calling upon all eligible able-bodied men of the State to enlist in the national guard.

While the proclamation merely calls for volunteers, it is issued under the terms of the new State military law, passed by the last Legislature, in conformity with the national defense act, and which empowers the Governor to draft men to fill the guard to its proper war footing. It is understood that if there are not enough volunteers to bring the present units to a war footing the Governor will draft a sufficient number of men to make up the full quota.

Insurance Company Official Says 60,000 Die Annually From Preventable Kidney Disorders

A prominent life insurance company, from abundant statistics, shows that fully 100,000 Americans die annually from kidney diseases. Since fully 60%, or sixty thousand, of these fatalities could be prevented or postponed for years if the presence of kidney disease was discovered in its early stages, it is high time that everyone should take an interest in the health of their kidneys. Now the kidneys work day and night to protect the blood and body from an ever-increasing quantity of poisonous substances. They perform their function of filtration faithfully and persistently, even after they have begun to degenerate from lack of attention. The breaking down of the kidneys often occurs without warning to the individual for whom they toil. This is why the use of a dependable medicine like Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy should be selected for the treatment of kidney disorders. It soothes and benefits these delicate organs, and has a direct action on the circulation. With bitter circulation, the perspiratory glands become active, which eliminates some of the waste products by way of the skin. Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy invariably helps these important organs back to normal action. Its healing and soothing action on the kidneys aids them to do their work of elimination of poisons from the system. That is why it has helped thousands of sufferers from backache, weak kidneys and bladder troubles, and why it is so uniformly successful.

"I wish to say that your remedies have been used in our family for about fifteen years. We are never without a bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy in our home, and it has saved many a doctor's bill. It is a wonderful medicine for all diseases of the kidneys and liver."—Florence E. Schmidt, R. F. D., No. 1, Dunkirk, O.

How Can Genuine Diamonds Be Told From Imitation?

"The diamond is very transparent for Rontgen rays, whereas paste imitations are opaque. It is a good conductor of heat, and therefore feels colder to the touch than glass and imitation stones. The diamond has also a somewhat greasy feel. The specific heat increases rapidly with rising temperature up to 60° C. and then more slowly."

Marks of a Thoroughbred Bulldog

"The bulldog is a small, compact but extremely heavily built animal of great strength, vigor and tenacity. The lower jaw should be strongly protruding, the ears should be small and erect, the forehead deeply wrinkled with an indentation between the eyes, known as the 'stop.' The coat should be thick, short and very silky, the favorite colors being white and white marked brindle."
From 5-page article on Dog, in the Britannica.

Premature Baldness

"Premature baldness, so commonly seen in young men, due to alopecia seborrhoica, is the baldness which steadily advances from the forehead backwards, until only a fringe of hair is left on the head. It is always due to underlying disease seborrhoea, and though it progresses steadily if neglected, is yet very amenable to treatment. The two drugs of greatest value in this trouble are sulphur and salicylic acid, some eighteen grains of each added to an ounce of vaseline making a good application. This should be rubbed well into the scalp daily for a prolonged period."
From article on Baldness, in the Britannica.

When to Prune Apple Trees

"The principal pruning should be performed in summer, the young shoots if crowded being thinned out, and the superabundant laterals shortened by breaking them half through. The general winter pruning of trees may take place any time from the beginning of November to the beginning of March, in open weather."
From 1-page article on Apple, in the Britannica.

Is Aluminum Better Than Copper for Cooking Utensils?

"When aluminum utensils are submitted to the ordinary routine of the kitchen, being used to heat or cook milk, coffee, vegetables, meat and even fruit, and are also cleaned frequently in the usual fashion, no appreciable quantity of metal passes into the food. Moreover, did it do so, the action upon the human system would be infinitely less harmful than similar doses of copper or of lead."
From 5-page article on Aluminum, in the Britannica.

Best Bait in Fishing for Pike

"The pike is a fish of prey, pure and simple. Though it will occasionally take a large fly, a worm or other ground bait, its systematic capture is only essayed with small fish or artificial spinning baits. A live bait is supposed to be the most deadly lure for big pike, probably because it is the method employed by most anglers. But spinning is more artistic and has been found quite successful by those who give it a fair trial."
From 10-page article on Angling, in the Britannica.

What You Need to be a Good Basketball Player

"Basket Ball is an extremely fast game and admits of a high degree of combination or team play. The principal qualifications of a good player are quickness of movement and of judgment, coolness, endurance, accuracy and self-control. Good dodging, throwing, passing and team play are the important requisites of the game."

Producing Honey for Profit

"As a rule it may be said that the man content to start with an apiary of moderate size—say fifty stocks—may realize a fair profit from comb honey only; but so limited a venture would need to be supplemented by some other means before an adequate income could be secured. On the other hand, the owner of one or two hundred colonies would find it more lucrative to work for extracted honey and send it out wholesale in that form. By so doing a far greater weight of surplus per hive may be secured, and extracted honey will keep in good condition for years, while comb honey must be sold before granulation sets in."
From 13-page article on Bee, in the Britannica.

Short-Sighted Children

"Myopia or 'short sight' makes itself apparent in children between the ages of seven and nine. Neglect of a year or two may do serious mischief. Short sight, when not inherited, is produced by looking intently and continuously at near objects. Children should be encouraged to describe objects at a distance, with which they are unacquainted, and parents should choose out-door occupations and amusements for children who show a tendency to short-sightedness."

How to Tell a True Mushroom

"It almost invariably grows in rich, open, breezy pastures, in places where the grass is kept short by the grazing of herds and flocks. It never grows in wet, boggy places, never in woods or on or about stumps of trees. A true mushroom is never large in size; its cap very seldom exceeds 4 or 5 inches in diameter. On being cut or broken the flesh remains pure white; the cap has a frill; the gills are free from the stem; the spores are brown-black or deep purple-black in color, and the stem solid or slightly pithy."
From 3-page article on Mushroom, in the Britannica.

Is Brick Preferable to Stone for House Building?

"Good bricks are less absorbent of moisture than any stone of the same degree of hardness, and are better non-conductors of heat than stone."
From 4-page article on Building, in the Britannica.

How to Broil a Steak

"Broiling is now done over a clear fire extending at least two inches beyond the edges of the gridiron, which should slightly incline towards the cook. It is usual to rub the bars with a piece of suet, to prevent the thing broiled from being marked with the bars of the gridiron. It is necessary thoroughly to warm the gridiron before putting on the meat, or the heat of the fire is conducted away while the juices and flavor of the meat run into the fire."
From 2-page article on Cookery, in the Britannica.

Advantages of Building and Loan Societies

"The purchase of a share binds the shareholder to the necessity of keeping up his dues, and thus secures to him not only the benefits of a savings bank, but the benefit of constantly accruing compound interest. This accomplishes the first feature of the motive of a building and loan association. The second is accomplished by enabling a man to borrow money for building purposes."
From 3-page article on Building Societies, in the Britannica.

Soil for Growing Brussels Sprouts

"Any good garden soil is suitable. For an early crop it may be sown in a warm pit, picked out, hardened in frames and planted out in a warm situation. The main crop should be planted in rows 2 feet asunder, the plants 18 inches apart."
From 2-page article on Cabbage, in the Britannica.

How to Make a Sound-proof Floor

"To stop sound from passing through floors the remedy is to plug them. This consists in using a rough boarding resting on fillets nailed to the sides of the joints, and then filling in on top of the boarding with slag wool usually 3 inches thick."
From 6-page article on Carpentry, in the Britannica.

Do All Oriental Rugs Come from Prince's Palaces?

"For the most part the best of Indian pile carpets have been produced by workers of repute engaged by princes, great nobles and wealthy persons to carry on the craft in their dwellings and palaces. These groups of highly skilled workers, as part of the household staff, were paid fixed salaries, but they were also allowed to execute private orders. During the 19th century the carpet industry was developed in government gaols. Produced in great quantities, the prison-made carpets as a rule are less well turned out, and the competition set up between them and the rugs and carpets of private factories has had a somewhat detrimental effect upon the industry generally."

Nutritive Value of Cocoa

"Cocoa as a beverage has a similar action to tea or coffee, inasmuch as the physiological properties of all three are due to the alkaloids and volatile oils they contain. Tea and coffee both contain the alkaloid caffeine, whilst cocoa contains theobromine. In tea and coffee, however, we only drink an infusion of the leaves or seeds, whilst in cocoa the whole material is taken in a state of very fine suspension and, as analysis indicates, the cocoa bean, even with the fat extracted, is of high nutritive value."
From article on Cocoa, in the Britannica.

Which Heating System is Preferable—Hot Water or Steam?

"Compared with heating by hot water, steam-heating requires less piping, which, further, may be of much smaller diameter to obtain a similar result, because of the high temperature of the heat-yielding surface. A drawback to the use of steam is the fact that the high temperature of the pipes and radiators attracts and spreads a great deal of dust. The apparatus needs constant attention, since neglect in stoking would result in stopping the generation of steam, and the whole system would be almost immediately cool.

"In a hot-water system the heat is given off at a lower temperature and is consequently more agreeable than that yielded by a steam-heating apparatus. The 'minus pressure' steam system, sometimes termed 'atmospheric' or 'vacuum,' is of more recent introduction. It is certainly the most scientific method of steam-heating, and heat can be made to travel a greater distance by its aid than by any other means."
From 5-page article on Heating, in the Britannica.

Chippendale Chair Styles

"The primary characteristic of Chippendale's work is solidity, but it is a solidity which rarely becomes heaviness. Even in his most lightsome efforts, such as the ribbon-backed chair, construction is always the first consideration. It is here perhaps that he differs most materially from his great successor Sheraton, whose ideas of construction were eccentric in the extreme. Chippendale introduced the cabriole leg; the claw and ball foot of ancient Oriental use; the straight, square, uncompromising early Georgian leg; the carved lattice-work Chinese leg; the pseudo-Chinese leg; the fretwork leg; the inelegant rococo leg with the curled or hoofed foot; and even occasionally the spade foot. His chair backs were various. The most attractive feature of Chippendale's most attractive chairs is the back, which speaking generally is the most elegant and pleasing thing that has ever been done in furniture."
From article on Chippendale, in the Britannica.

How to Tell Good Butter

"Well-made butter is firm, not greasy. It possesses a characteristic texture or 'grain' in virtue of which it cuts clean with a knife and breaks with a granular fracture, like that of cast iron. Theoretically, butter should consist of little else than fat, but in practice this degree of perfection is never attained. Usually the fat ranges 83% to 88%, whilst water is present to the extent of 10% to 15%. Streaky butter may be due either to curd left in or imperfect washing or to an uneven distribution of salt."
From 23-page article on Dairy, in the Britannica.

Forming a Corporation

"The acts regulating business corporations generally provide that the persons proposing to form a corporation shall sign and acknowledge an instrument called the articles of association, setting forth the full name of the corporation, the object for which it is to be formed, the principal place of business, the amount of its capital stock, and the number of shares into which it is to be divided, and the duration of its corporate existence. These articles are filed in the office of the secretary of state or in designated courts of record, and a certificate is then issued reciting that the provisions of the act have been complied with, and thereupon the incorporators are vested with corporate existence and the general powers incident thereto. This certificate is the charter of the corporation."

Should a Baby Be Fed on Anything But Milk?

"No food has as yet been found so suitable for babies as their mother's milk. A close imitation of human milk may also be made by the addition to fresh cow's milk of half its bulk of soft water, in each pint of which has been mixed a heaped-up teaspoonful of powdered sugar of milk and a pinch of phosphate of lime. The wholesomest food, however, for the first six months is certainly mother's milk alone.

"A vigorous baby can indeed bear with impunity much rough usage, and often appears none the worse for a certain quantity of farinaceous food; but the majority do not get habituated to it without an exhibition of dislike which indicates rebellion of the bowels. It is only when their teeth are on their way to the front, as shown by dribbling, that the parotid glands secrete an active saliva capable of digesting bread stuffs. Till then anything but milk must be given tentatively and considered in the light of a means of education for its future mode of nutrition."
From article on Food, in the Britannica.

Jersey Cows as Butter-Producers

"As its milk is especially rich in fat (so rich that it requires to be diluted with a little water before it can be safely fed to calves) the Jersey has attained a wide reputation as a butter-producing breed. The best milch cows have a yellowish circle round the eye and the skin at the extremity of the tail is of a deep yellow, almost orange color."
From 3-page article on Cattle, in the Britannica.

Weight That Foundation Soils Will Sustain

"The object of foundations is to distribute the weight of a structure equally over the ground. In the construction of a building the weights are concentrated at given points or piers and columns and so on, and these foundations require to be spread so as to reduce the weight to an average. The New York Building Code provides that where no test of the sustaining power of the soil is made, different soils, excluding mud, at the bottom of the footings shall be deemed to safely sustain the following loads to the superficial foot: Soft clay, 1 ton to the square foot; ordinary soft clay and sand, wet and springy, 2 tons; loam, clay or fine sand, firm and dry, 3 tons; very firm coarse sand, stiff gravel or hard clay, 4 tons."

Nursing as a Vocation

"The period of training is either two or three years. At the Johns Hopkins School, at Baltimore, twelve scholarships of $100 and $120 each are awarded annually; graduate nurses are paid $360 a year. At the Boston City Hospital, graduate nurses receive $420 and at the Indianapolis City Hospital those on private duty are paid $72 a month, with board, lodging, laundry and uniform. The fees charged by trained nurses run from $12 to $25 a week, and even more in special cases."

To Curve a Piece of Iron

"Bending is effected either by the hammer or by the simple exercise of leverage, the heated bar being pulled around a fulcrum. It is always, when practicable, preferable to cutting out a curved or angular shape with a hot sett or to welding. The continuity of the fibre in iron is preserved by bending, and the risk of an imperfect weld is avoided."
From 2-page article on Forging, in the Britannica.

To Make Concrete

"In proportioning the quantities of matrix (cement), it is desirable to use as little of it as is consistent with strength. When natural flint gravel containing both stones and sand is used, it is usual to mix so much gravel with so much cement, the proportions usually run from 3 to 1 for very strong work, down to 12 to 1 for unimportant work. When stones and sand are obtained from different sources, their relative proportions have to be decided upon.

"A common way is first to choose a proportion of sand to cement, which will probably vary from 1 to 1 up to 4 to 1. It then remains to determine what proportion of stones should be added. For this purpose, a large can, whose volume is known, is filled loosely with stones and the volume of the voids between them is determined by measuring how much water the can will hold in addition to the stones. It is then assumed that the quantity of sand and cement should be equal to the voids. Moreover, the volume of sand and cement together is generally assumed to be equal to that of the sand alone, as the cement to a large extent fills up voids in the sand."

Genuine and Spurious Macaroni

"Macaroni is dried by hanging it over wooden rods in stoves or heated apartments through which currents of air are driven. It is only genuine macaroni, rich in gluten, which can be dried in this manner. Spurious fabrications will not bear their own weight and must be laid out flat to be dried. True macaroni can be distinguished by observing the flattened mark of the rod over which it has been dried; it has a soft yellowish color, is rough in texture, elastic and hard, and breaks with a smooth glassy fracture. In boiling it swells up to double its original size without becoming pasty or adhesive."
From article on Macaroni, in the Britannica.

Correct Way to Play a Cornet

"In the cornet mouthpiece there are no angles at the bottom of the cup, which curves into the bore; hence the cornet's loose, coarse quality of tone. The sound is produced by stretching the lips across the mouthpiece and making them act as double reeds, set in vibration by the breath. There are no fixed notes; the musical scale is obtained by means of the power the musical performer possesses—once he has learned how to use it—of producing the notes of the harmonic series by overblowing, i. e., by varying the tension of the lips and the pressure of the breath."
From 3-page article on Cornet, in the Britannica.

Best Soil for Growing Gladioli

"A deep and rather stiff sandy loam is the best soil for the gladiolus, and this should be enriched with decomposed manure, consisting partly of cow dung, the manure being disposed altogether below the corms, a layer, say 9 inches below the surface and another at double that depth."
From [illegible] article on Gladiolus, in the Britannica.

Preservation of Furs

"Furs kept in cold storage are not only immune from the ravages of the larvae of the moth, but all the natural oils of the pelt and fur are conserved, so that its color and life are prolonged, and the natural deterioration is arrested. Sunlight has a tendency to bleach furs and to encourage the development of moth eggs, therefore continued exposure should be avoided. Where a freezing store for furs is not accessible, furs should be well shaken and afterwards packed in linen and kept in a perfectly cool, dry place and examined in the summer at periods of not less than five weeks. Napthalene and the usual malodorous powders are not only very disagreeable, but quite useless."

English Ivy on a House

"In regard to buildings clothed with ivy, there is nothing to be feared so long as the plant does not penetrate the substance of the walls by means of any fissure. Should it thrust its way in, the natural and continuous expansion of its several parts will necessarily hasten the decay of the edifice. But a fair growth of ivy on sound walls that affords no entrance beyond the superficial attachment of the claspers is, without any exception whatever, beneficial."
From article on Ivy, in the Britannica.

Method of Making Pillow-made Lace

"A pattern is first drawn upon a piece of paper or parchment. It is then pricked with holes. This pattern is then fastened to the pillow. Some lace-makers use a circular pad, backed with a flat board, in order that it may be placed upon a table and easily moved. Other lace-makers use a well-stuffed round pillow or short bolster, flattened at two ends, so that they may hold it conveniently on their laps. Figure 34 (illustration) shows the commencement of a double-set of three-thread plaitings."

"Breaking" a Horse

"Systematic breaking begins at about the age of two years, and the method of subduing a colt by 'galvayning' is as good as any. Galvayning is accomplished by bending the horse's neck round at an angle of thirty-five to forty degrees and tying the halter to the tail, so that when he attemps to walk forward he holds himself and turns round and round, almost upon his own ground. The more strenuous the existence, the sooner he yields to the inevitable force applied to himself. A wooden pole, the 'third hand' is then gently applied to all parts of the body until kicking or any form of resistance ceases. 'Biting' or 'mouthing' or the familiarizing of an animal to the bit in his mouth, and to answer to the rein without bending his neck, is still a necessity with the galvayning method of breaking."
From 13-page article on Horse, in the Britannica.

Grafting Dahlias on Roots

"Dahlias may be grafted by inserting young shoots into the neck of one of the fleshy roots—the best method of so doing being to cut a triangular section near the upper end of the root, just long enough to admit the young shoot when slightly pared away on the two sides to give it a similar form."
From 41-page article on Horticulture, in the Britannica.

To Tan Leather in Imitation of Russian

"The willow and the white birch contain respectively 12 to 14% and 3 to 5% of tannin. In combination they are used to produce the famous Russia leather, whose insect-resisting odor is due to the birch bark. In America this leather is imitated with the American black birch bark and also with the oil obtained from its dry distillation."
From 14-page article on Leather, in the Britannica.

Treatment of Mumps

"Mumps is in general a mild disease, and requires little treatment beyond a gentle laxative, the application of warm fomentations to the swollen and painful parts, the use of soft food, and rest."
From article on Mumps, in the Britannica.

Artificial Light for a Room

"In interior lighting one of the great objects to be obtained is uniformity of illumination with avoidance of harsh shadows. This can only be achieved by a proper distribution of the lamps. In the illumination of any room, a great deal depends upon the nature of the reflecting surfaces, such as walls, ceilings, etc. As a rough guide it may be stated that for every 100 square feet of floor surface, one 16 candle power lamp placed 8 feet above the floor will give dull illumination and four will give brilliant illumination."
From 23-page artice on Lighting, in the Britannica.

Proper Lubricants for Clocks and Watches

"For the spindles of small machines such as clocks, watches and other delicate mechanisms, which are only lubricated at long intervals and are often exposed to extremes of temperature, the lubricant must be a fluid oil as free as possible from tendency to gum or thicken by oxidation or to corrode metal, and must have a low freezing point. It must also possess a maximum of 'oiliness.' The lubricants mostly used for such purposes are obtained from porpoise or dolphin jaw oils, bean oil, hazel nut oil, neats foot oil, sperm oil or olive oil."
From article on Lubricants, in the Britannica.

TITANIC BATTLE IN OPEN BELIEVED TO BE GERMANS' AIM

BY LINCOLN EYRE,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.
(Copyright, 1917, by Press Pub. Co.)

PARIS, March 24.—The German Empire is preparing to stake its existence as a military power on a titanic pitched battle in the open country between Arras and Champagne. That is the conclusion I have reached from information reaching me from various sources.

Hindenburg's withdrawal, which, it is understood, is being carried out under the eye of the Field Marshal himself, but under the immediate direction of Ludendorff, may already have come to an end. Its terminus is a battlefield carefully prepared weeks, even months, beforehand, upon which all that remains of Germany's real righting forces—as differentiated from the graybeards and boys with whom she lines her trenches in quiet sectors—will turn against the entente armies in a last formidable attempt to efface the disastrous results of the Marne and Verdun.

The Germans will fall back, not into concrete trenches, but upon fully organized strategic positions, from which they will seek to sweep forward across the open fields upon the French and British hosts cautiously feeling their way toward them.

There will be no lingering for days in underground bombproofs while the artillery paves a road to the enemy's parapets. The action will be begun by airplanes reconnaisances and encounters of cavalry patrols as it was in Belgium and at the Marno, and infantry will clash in charges and counter charges much as they did at Gettysburg or Waterloo.

Diversions Probably Planned.

Simultaneously with the commencement of the grand battle there will be German diversions at Verdun and elsewhere, and possibly a strong offensive by the trench warfare method on the lines in the Ypres salient. The latter move would be undertaken only if the German intelligence department reported a scarcity of British troops in that region, owing to a demand for reinforcements in the center operations along the Somme and Oise valleys. It would, of course, take the form of another drive at Calais.

Thus, the German aims may be said to be twofold. They hope to administer a defeat to the allies as crushing as that at the Marne was to them, and at the same time, or shortly afterward, win through to the coast of the English Channel, whence they can, of course, strike at Great Britain with renewed vigor.

In the event of the collapse of their plans for victory in open fighting, they would retire all along their front from Flanders to the Woevre plain, and establish themselves in prepared trench fortifications on the line of the Meuse in France, and on the line of Ostend, Bruges, Ghent, Brussels and Charleroi in Belgium.

Should they be forced back to this line, their military pre-eminence would be ended, for they would have lost forever the power of initiative on the western front.

The success of the first German scheme implies that their troops outnumber and can outfight the soldiers of Nivelle and Haig, and the second cannot be accomplished unless the pursuit by the French and British forces is amazingly ineffectual in turning the German's long and difficult retreat into a rout.

Forced to Hurry Retreat.

In the operations following upon the present retirement the French, despite Hindenburg's comprehensive and minute preparations, and the difficulty of advancing over territory so thoroughly devastated, at several points pierced the German rear guards in such a manner that the Germans managed to extricate large bodies of troops only by a sharp speeding up of their northward march.

Even now they are, it is believed here, in imminent danger of losing both St. Quentin and La Fere, which was by no means part of their present program. It is also remarkable that the French have been able to move forward not only their light guns, but their ponderous long-range batteries as well, although the German pioneers believed they had utterly destroyed every railroad, including the ties and even the roadbed, main highways and streets in their wake.

In the few days since the withdrawal began, hundreds of miles of new railroad have been laid by tens of thousands of French Military engineers, many of them hastily drafted into the army from the railroad employes previously released from service at the front.

In the same way new roads have sprung into being. There are enormous difficulties, of course, in moving forward adequate supplies of shells into what the Germans are pleased to call the "glacis" they left behind them, but the fact that trains for civilian passengers and freight have already begun to run several miles into the zone of devastation is evidence of the rapidity with which obstacles have been surmounted.

Faith in Open Fighting.

Ludendorf, who is credited in military circles here with being the real author of the new strategy, is supposed to believe that German armies are bound to triumph over the entente in a campaign in the open, because large portions of them have had experience with that kind of warfare, whereas the bulk of the French and British effectives have never known any tactics except those of trench fighting.

Divisions fresh from the victorious advance through Rumania are being held in readiness by the German quartermaster-general to show the allies what the grey-green warriors can do in a war of movement, and most of the other units which will be engaged will doubtless have seen similar fighting in Poland or Servia.

ALL SHOULD STAND AND BE COUNTED, CONNETT DECLARES

German Citizens Not Criticized; "Opponent Good American, So Am I," Says Kiel.

William C. Connett, Democratic nominee for Mayor, in a speech last night at 4404 Natural Bridge avenue, said:

"I have said, and still say, that religion, nationality and race have no part in a political contest. I did criticise the Republican party officials for omitting a declaration on the subject of Americanism. I have not criticised the German citizens of St. Louis because they have not individually and collectively made voluntary announcement that they are good Americans. I do believe, however, inasmuch as there is practically a state of war between this country and Germany, which will be formally declared as soon as Congress meets, that all people, Germans and others, should stand up and be counted, and those who refuse to stand up and be counted should be marked."

This utterance was applauded, as was the statement of W. E. Wheeling, who spoke before Connett's arrival, that "all citizens of foreign birth or extraction should say whether or not they will stand by the President and by the flag. In this election, none but Americans should be placed on guard."

Mayor Kiel, speaking in a hall at Arsenal street and Brannon avenue, said: "My opponent is a good American, and so am I."

Connett, in his discussion of city issues, said the free bridge is not completed and compared the expense of administering the City Counselor's office under Mayor Wells' administration and under the Kiel administration.

This office, under Wells, he said, cost the city $173,889.20 in eight years. Since the adoption of the new charter, the office has taken over the work of the City Attorney's office, and deducting the expense of the City Attorney's office, he declared, the expense of the City Counselor's office under Kiel has been $199,909.08, or $26,019.88 more, in four years, than it cost in eight years under Wells.

Mayor Kiel, in his Arsenal street speech, referred to comparisons made by Connett of the expense of the building department in four years of Kiel and eight years of Wells, and said that in Wells' time St. Louis was only a village. He spoke of unsatisfactory street car service and said he would favor a system of joint public and private owpership, like that in Chicago. He also told of the enlargement of the work of Koch Hospital, and said that, whereas in former times only incurable consumptives went there, the institution is now curing incipient cases. He later addressed a negro meeting in Carondelet and said he would favor employing negro physicians and nurses for negro patients in the city institutions

WHITES PAY TRIBUTE TO NEGRO

The funeral of the Rev. Cassius M. C. Mason, one of the foremost negro clergymen of the Episcopal Church, was conducted by Bishops Tuttle and Johnson yesterday morning at All Saints' Church, Locust street and Garrison avenue. Several white ministers assisted in the service, and numerous white persons were in the gathering which filled the church.

Father Mason, as he was known, founded All Saints' congregation 35 years ago, and had been its pastor ever since. The present building, formerly the Unitarian Church of the Messiah, has been occupied by the congregation about 10 years. The body was taken to Baltimore for burial.

Good Old Home-Made Family Cough Remedy

Much Better Than the Ready-Made Kind—Easily and Cheaply Prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you would hardly have in them all the curative power that lies in this simple "home-made" cough syrup which takes only a few minutes to prepare.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syru. The total cost is about 54 cents and gives you a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment be sure to ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

NEW RUSSIA BENDS ALL ENERGIES TO PROBLEMS OF WAR

Form Which Government Will Take Cannot Be Determined Until They Are Settled.

DUMA IN FULL POWER

New Year's Was Last Possible Date to Prevent Revolt, Rodzianko Says.

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.
(Copyright, 1917, by Press Pub. Co.)

PETROGRAD, March 23.—"The power of the Russian Government is now entirely in the hands of the Duma. The Duma has delegated its power to the Cabinet Ministers it chose, now in power. They are responsible to the Duma," said President Rodzianko of the Duma in response to my question as to the exact status of the Government. He continued:

"The Duma is not in session, but the members are here, and can be called when necessary. This will soon be necessary to make new laws and provide a basic background for calling the constitutional assembly, which will decide the future government of the country.

"However, there is no hurry, as the new ministry is rapidly taking hold of the Government and its members were so well chosen they have already been able to give Russia a mighty impetus forward.

"In response to your question as to what final form the Government may take, I can only say that no one in Russia has yet had time to give that serious question the proper thought.

Main Thought a Victorious War.

"You must understand that this revolution became necessary and was carried out because it became evident that Russia would never be able to finish the war successfully under the old Government. Our thought, in taking advantage of events to overthrow the old dynasty, was primarily to get an effective Government to bring the war to a victorolus finish.

"Our energies being bent in that direction, now, in the first days following the revolution, we are still turning every thought to reorganize and renew our efforts to repel our enemy from our soil. On that Russia is of one mind. The final disposition of the Government is not known yet, and it is not a pressing problem."

When the cable ordering Ambassador Francis formally to recognize the new provisional Government came, a cheer shook the old building which passes for the American embassy. The Ambassador, as well as all other Americans here, had eagerly awaited authority to extend recognition.

The Ambassador called at the Foreign Office at the impossibly early hour, for Petrograd, of 11 in the morning, but Foreign Minister Miliukoff warmly welcomed him. Francis and Prof. Miliukoff had been keeping each other closely informed for several days and Francis had been received unofficially by the members of the Russian Government several days ago.

Prof. Miliukoff immediately arranged to have a formal reception by the whole ministry at the Birinsmy Palace, one of the most splendid of the old regime.

"This Government is one I can greet dressed like a regular American citizen," said Francis. "Ever since I have been in Russian everyone has been urging me to get a court uniform, but I didn't mean to if I could help it, and kept putting it off. Now I'll never need one."

U. S. First to Give Recognition.

The party of the Ambassador, with his 10 secretaries and attaches, made a presentable showing of representatives of America to present its compliments to the new Russia. After the Ambassador's formal words, also expressing his personal satisfaction, Foreign Minister Miliukoff replied, remarking that America was practically the first to recognize the new regime. America is really the first formally to do so. The whole Cabinet nodded in agreement, when Miliukoff said:

"We in free Russia are going to try to follow the highest ideals of freedom in America."

Francis made a quick reply, saying: "Permit me to express the warmest recognition for the success for your united efforts. I am personally delighted by your success and my Government's recognition of it."

WOMAN ENDS LIFE AFTER TELLING LAWYER OF INTENTION

Mrs. Thomas A. Foley, 41 years old, of 3519 Giles avenue, called Friday at the law office of Claude D. Hall, in the Central National Bank Building, and announced that she intended to kill herself. She asked the lawyer to draw up papers disposing of her property. Hall persuaded her to go home, asking that she return to his office the next morning.

When she did not appear at the office yesterday, he telephoned to her mother, Mrs. Minnie Steinman of 3333 North Nineteenth street. Mrs. Steinman, with another daughter, went to the Foley home, and, after forcing a window, found Mrs. Foley unconscious on the floor, with the gas turned on. A physician found that she was also suffering from carbolic acid poisoning. She died in the City Hospital at 2:15 p. m.

Mrs. Foley's relatives said her husband left home Friday. He is employed by the Pullman Car Co. A son, Arthur Foley, is 15 years old.

Thousands Crowd Convention Hall to Acclaim Patriotism; Gardner Sends Message.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 24.—Thousands of persons brought to a climax tonight their observance of "Loyalty day" by crowding into Convention Hall to acclaim their patriotism for the United States. Throughout the day the flag was displayed in the business and residence districts. Every street car and public building was decorated and hundreds of motor cars bore streames and flags. Men, women and children thronged the downtown streets all day carrying small flags or with red, white and blue knot on coat lapels. Parades of State militia organizations and civilians tonight preceded the mass meeting.

Gov. Gardner had been announced as the principal speaker at Convention Hall but he could not come, and sent the following telegram to the National Guard Association:

"Many pressing matters in the executive office have prevented my being present at your meeting tonight. The time has arrived for all loyal Missourians to stand as one man behind the national Government in this impending crisis of our history. To this end your society is doing a great patriotic service in presenting the issues direct to our people. Missouri will be ready and anxious to take her allotted position in the event she shall be called upon for help. The Forty-ninth General Assembly of our State remodeled our national guard law so as to fully articulate with the United States defense act. Furthermore, we have appropriated $265,000 for support of our guard, which is nearly three times its former allowance. Convey to your people my message of best wishes for your labors."

The Convention Hall gathering adopted resolutions expressing support of the President and the nation and approval of plans for universal military training. Speakers reiterated the belief that the city would do its share if the crisis developed to a further break, and the "Star Spangled Banner" was sung.

United States Senator James A. Reed spoke of the country's needs and said:

"It is the business of this audience to let the whole world know that every man, with absolute loyalty, will stand by the Government to the exhaustion of the national resources, in order that whatever policy is adoped may be vindicated. If America is forced into the war, her entrance will absolutely determine the result and the houses of Hohenzollern and Hapsburg will follow the Romanoffs into obscurity."

Reed was interrupted by a man in a balcony who shouted: "Down with Stone."

"My friend, said the Senator," if you were as much of a patriot as the man whose name you spoke, you would enlist right now."

Constipation Makes You Tired, Nervous, Sick

A Wineglassful of Tollo Water Will Quickly Remove Poison From Your Stomach and Bowels and Make You Feel Fine in Half an Hour.

No use being constipated, tired, nervous and sick—Tollo Water from Dawson Springs, Kentucky, is Nature's own system cleanser. Its action is quick and gentle, yet it cleans the system and intestines more thoroughly than can be done by drugs and oils.

Don't allow the waste from your food to lie in your stomach and bowels to poison your system, causing headache, bilious spells, bad breath, pimples, nervousness and indigestion, but get a 15-cent bottle of Tollo Water from the drug store and take a third of a tumblerful in a glass of plain water before breakfast. It will keep your bowels as regular as a clock and make you enjoy your meals as you did when you were a child and got plenty of exercise.

After you have taken it for a few days and thoroughly cleaned the system, an occasional wineglassfull will keep your bowels regular and make you feel good all the time.—ADV.

PLAN TO GIVE $1,000,000,000 TO FRANCE WIDELY APPROVED

NEW YORK, March 24.—Approval of the New York World's proposal that the United States "give $1,000,000,000 to France," came today from new quarters and in new terms of enthusiasm.

Among the editors of the nation the chorus of indorsement continues to become more unanimous.

"We could go even further than the World's proposal,' said former Justice Morgan J. O'Brien. "Let all the nations understand that we have no hostility, hatred or rancor toward any of them, and that when the war is over we stand ready to assist them all.

"Indeed, I am in favor of giving $1,000,000,000 to France and another $1,000,000,000 to Belgium to help rebuild her."

Former Ambassador Lloyd C. Griscom, a member of the American Committee of the French Heroes' Fund, is one of the enthusiasts over the World's proposal.

"It is splendid," he said, "and it is really only paying back a debt. Besides her loans to this country France spent a great deal to help us in other ways. Our friendship was a very expensive luxury for her. France is fighting our fight; we ought to help her."

Thomas Jefferson O'Donnell, an attorney of Denver, telegraphed the World:

"Yes, give France $1,000,000,000. It will not pay the accrued interest on the debt we owe the French people. One flash of the sword of Lafayette was worth the money. French flood watered the tree of liberty; the blessed fruit of the tree is priceless and plenteous. The giving will keep our souls clean, and we need that kind of help now as much as we needed the money and the men of France in 1777.'

NEW ALBANY STORM DEATHS 37; PROPERTY LOSS $1,133,000

NEW ALBANY, Ind., March 24.—Six additional deaths reported today brought the total to 33 in the storm which wrecked portions of the city late yesterday. Of the 100 or more who were injured, fewer than a dozen are in a serious condition.

Citizens of Louisville, led by the Board of Trade, subscribed more than $12,000 and sent food and clothing. Later in the day the Chamber of Commerce issued an appeal to the country for aid, esmitating that $200,000 was needed.

The work of clearing away the wreckage and searching the ruins for bodies is under the supervision of a detachment of State troops. Sixty were on duty today and 15 more are expected tomorrow, when 200 inmates of the Indiana State Reformatory at Jeffersonville, three miles away, will be put to work. Monday an additional 20 men will be used.

A committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce, the New Albany Real Estate Board and Red Cross representatives, after an examination of the devastated districts, placed the property loss at $1,133,000.

BROWNS BOMBARD WACO FOR 14 HITS AND WIN, 12 TO 3

SISLER IS PACE-MAKER

Michigan Marvel Tears Off Two Doubles and a Single for Top Record.

WACO, TEX., March 24.—For the first time this season the Browns looked like a hard-hitting aggregation today when they administered a 12—3 defeat to the Waco Skippers. Of their 14 hits, six were extra bases, Sisler contributing two doubles and a single, while Kenworthy lifted one over the fence and also poled a single. Austin got a triple and two singles. Hale and Groom each inserted two-baggers.

Chief Skipper Ellis Hardy used Donalds, a Brooklyn discard, and (Red) Fagan, a Detroit cast-off, minor league pitchers who star in their own company. Ernie Koob and Bob Groom shared the hurling for the Browns. Koob was nicked for six of the seven alien hits and yielded the three runs. He might have escaped with a shutout in the five innings he worked had it not been for miserable fielding by Tom Stevenson, the Omaha shortstop.

Stevenson Has Off Day.

Tom had a terrible day, booting four chances of the seven that were sent his way. An error seeped into each of the innings in which the Skippers scored.

Sisler and Austin each gave the home fans Ty Cobb thrills. With two doubles already to his credit, George singled in the sixth after two were out. He immediately pilfered second and when Catcher Red Kahn, the ex-White Sox, heaved the ball to center field, Sis didn't stop at third, but scored.

Austin scored from first on an infield out in the seventh. After he had singled, Stevenson grounded to Grubb, the third baseman, who made the throw to first. As Grubb left third uncovered, Jim, after reaching second, dashed for the far corner and beat Kuhn, who ran from behind the plate to make the play at third. Noting home unoccupied, Austin then lit out for the pan and scored. They gave him a cheer.

Mr. Groom Is Ready.

Groom's pitching was better than Koob's. Belleville Bob allowed one hit in four innings. He passed one batter, but fanned eight. He retired the side on strikes in the seventh and in the eighth after Kuhn opened with a double, Bob fanned the next two batters, walked the fourth and fanned the fifth man in the inning. The same teams play tomorrow.

Card Colts Celebrate "Hornsby Day" With a 11-6 Victory at Denison

DENISON, Tex., March 24.—The Cardinal colts celebrated Hornsby day in Denison by handing the Denison railroaders, champions of the Western Association, a drubbing, 11 to 0. The Cards compiled seven runs in the fifth inning. Pitcher Taber issued five successive passes in this round and then gave way to a youngster named Kraft. Stuffy Stewart, the first batter to face Kraft, slammed out a homer. Clyde Defate followed with another homer.

In the sixth Roche led off with a triple. Livingston brought him in with a three-base wallop. Williams walked and Jones drove Livingston across with a single. This ended Kraft's term. He was replaced by a right-hander named Flowers. Gardenier fanned. Long also fanned. As Long struck out Jones took second and Williams went to third on a double steal. Stewart brought in the final pair of tallies with a single.

Gardenier hurled five innings for the Cardinals and was relieved by Niehaus after he filled the bases on two passes and a single in the sixth.

OMAHA, Neb., March 24.—Baseball will be resumed at Creighton University this season, after a lapse of three years. Fifty men are out to make the team. Practice will be held in the gymnasium until outdoor work can be started.

Team Organized Late Last Fall Will Open Campaign for New York Giants

McGraw Has Strengthened Club on Pitching Peak and Also Has Better Catchers Than During 1916 Season.

Infield and Outfield of the Club, Picked to Win Pennant, Rated as Best in the National League.

This is the fifth of a series of articles designed to acquaint Post-Dispatch readers with the conditions under which the various major league clubs will open their 1917 campaigns. Each story will be told by a competent baseball writer who is getting first-hand information at the training grounds.

No. 5.—THE GIANTS.

By Sid Mercer.

MARLIN, Tex., March 24.

JOHN J. McGRAW'S 1917 entry for the National League pennant was organized late last summer and McGraw will therefore make few changes in his lineup. While owners of other clubs and their players were deadlocked over the salary question last winter McGraw was industriously rounding up his stars who were not under contract and as a result he has not been bothered with any "hold-out" of consequence.

The Giants as they will break from the barrier next month are virtually the same team that startled the world by winning 26 consecutive games last fall. Here and there McGraw has added a strengthening touch. He counts on James Middleton to fill in as a first string right-handed pitcher, and in his judgment George Smith has developed the steadiness and control to make him a valuable asset to a pitching staff.

Behind the bat McGraw has McCarty, Rariden and Gibson, where a year ago he had Rariden, Kocher and Wendell. His infield has been completely reorganized with Honus Lobert as an extra third baseman and Joe Wagner to fill in at short or second base. In a pinch McGraw could use George Kelly as a first baseman, so he now has a full line of infield substitutes.

Has Good Substitutes.

Burns, Kauff and Robertson, who have now played together for a season, are recognized as the strongest hitting and best throwing outfield in the National League. This is a young outfield and should endure for several seasons. To augment his outfield, McGraw has brought back Jack Murray, than whom there is no stronger defensive outfielder. George Kelly will undoubtedly be carried as an allround utility man. He can play the outfield or first base, and this spring is being trained as a pitcher.

There are more than 40 players in camp. One was released outright last week, another, Waite Hoyt, has gone to Memphis, and two infielders, Rodriguez and Shepner, are the property of the Rochester club. Perhaps 10 more will be sent to minor league clubs early in April, and a few will be held over after the season begins.

Under a new ruling, National League managers are not compelled to cut their squads to 22 men until May 20. This will give McGraw an opportunity to get a much better line on three or four young fellows before they are planted in high-class minor leagues under optional agreements.

The astute leader of the Giants never announces his complete lineup in advance of the season. This year, however, there is no doubt concerning who will play the outfield and infield. Furthermore, it is possible to name six pitchers who will start the 1917 campaign.

Tesreau Veteran of Staff.

By virtue of his term of service with the team, Jeff Tesreau has succeeded Mathewson as McGraw's premier pitcher. And Tesreau is making a thorough effort to fill Matty's shoes. He was one of the first to arrive in Marlin this spring and there has been no more industrious worker. The same can be said of Rube Benton, who never trained so conscientiously.

New York will be strong in left-handers. Besides Benton, there is the veteran Sallee, who is the Eddie Plank of the National League, and Ferdinand Schupp, the sensational youngster who came with such a rush last fall.

McGraw is not so sure of his right-handers. Perritt was good in spots last year. There is no reason why he should not prosper in 1917. Probably Fred Anderson is the most uncertain prospect. This former Federal Leaguer is a spitball pitcher with unusual control—when he is right. Anderson made a splendid start last season. He won eight straight games during the spring drive of the Giants. After that he met with indifferent success until late in August, when he struck a losing streak, from which he never recovered.

Middleton Is About Ready.

Middleton is that rare athlete—a pitcher who has served eight years in the minors without attaining notable success until last season, when he pitched the Louisville club into a championship. He is 28 years old, well built, intelligent and knows how to pitch.

George Smith, a product of Andy Coakley's school of coaching at Columbia University, is 6 feet 3 inches in height, with arms of proportionate length. He has taken on about 20 pounds since he joined the Giants last June and has profited greatly from his experience with the Giants and expert coaching. Smith resembles Ernie Shore of the Red Sox in build and action.

Aside from the infield, the greatest improvement in the Giants is found behind the bat. There was a time last summer when McGraw did not have a first-string catcher on the job, when Kocher and Rariden were both laid up. A midseason swap gave the Giants Lew McCarty, the best hitting catcher in the National League, and a splendid performer otherwise. McCarty will do most of the catching this year, with Rariden, another hard worker, as alternate.

The new infield has already been sufficiently exploited. Holke, on first base, is a fine target. He is a left-hander and a fine thrower. Zimmerman is still the same old dangerous hitter. He likes McGraw, and is hustling. Herzog has speeded up the play around second base wonderfully. With Herzog, a brainy and resourceful field leader, acting as captain, the Giants feel confident that they will play snappy and intelligent baseball and make good the general prediction that they will win a pennant and probably a world's championship.

1916 LINEUP WILL BE USED BY JOHN M'GRAW

THE same lineup which set a new record by winning 26 straight near the close of the 1916 campaign will start for the Giants in the coming pennant race. The opening day lineup will be as follows:

Robertson, right field.
Zimmerman, third base.
Fletcher, shortstop.
Kauff, center field.
Holke, first base.
McCarty, catcher.
Tesreau, pitcher.

The Giants Roster:

Catchers—McCarty, Rariden and Gibson; Kocher and Krueger will be released.

L. Carter Meets Heitzenroeder in Mat Bout Today

Last Meeting Between Pair Resulted in Victory for Latter After Hard Battle.

Unless indications go astray wrestling enthusiasts who vist the South Broadway Athletic Club this afternoon to watch Herman Heitzenroeder, of the S. B. A. C., and Lloyd Carter, of the Moose Club, will probably witness one of the roughest grappling matches that has been held in St. Louis for a long time. The contest is somewhat of a grudge affair owing to the happenings of their last clash which was March 30, 1915, when Heitzenroeder was the victor after giving Carter such a mauling that he had to be assisted from the ring and was unable to return for the second fall. "Heitz" put Lloyd's shoulders to the mat in one hour and ten minutes.

Heitzenroeder has always been known as a rough wrestler who depends greatly upon his ability to put his opponent "hors de combat" by going the limit in regards to rules governing unfair tactics. He is a powerful man, weighing close to 200 pounds, which is about 25 more than Carter will scale today.

In the last battle between the two, Carter was not in proper condition to wrestle a strenuous match. On the previous Tuesday Carter and Tim McCarthy had engaged in an eight round boxing contest in which Carter was hammered unmercifully by Tim, being knocked down several times, but going the limit. The Irishman battered Lloyd's ribs and face with such pile-driving punches that he was still very sore of body on taking the mat against Hetizenroeder. The Moose boy says it will be different today, though, as he says he is in great shape and is confident of returning some of Herman's rough stuff.

There are two matches on the program for this afternoon. Johnny Witt and Charles "Babe" Meilink will go on the mat at 2:30. In the semi-final it will be two women grapplers, Miss Alice Lee and Miss Bobby LeMar, they to start at 3 o'clock and wrestle to a finish. George Baptiste will referee the main event while Battling Nelson, former world's champion boxer, will handle the preliminaries.

Ball Will Confer With Ban Before Going Into Court

Browns' Owner Leaves Tonight for Chicago to Meet A. L. President.

By W. J. O'Connor.

President Phil Ball of the Browns and his attorneys, Lyon and Swarts, are ominously taciturn about the Rickey case. But Mr. Ball is leaving the city tonight. Ban Johnson will be in Chicago tomorrow. He cut short a hunting trip to Dover Hall, Ga., immediately after Rickey took the hurdle from Sportsman's Park to Robison Field. Now can you guess where Mr. Ball is going?

Chicago, you say? Right-o. And tomorrow before Ban B. finishes his grape fruit or perhaps an alligator pear, he will have had all the harrowing details of the Rickey transaction. And unless Ban casts a dissenting vote, the first shot will be fired in the [illegible]ding legal battle over Rickey's services by the time the courts open here at 10 bells, Monday.

In the meantime preparations are being made for the "Big Rickey Banquet" at the Mercantile Club, Monday evening. This banquet is to be the biggest thing of its kind in years according to W. E. Bilheimer, who is "putting it over." More than 1000 followers of Rickey and the Cardinals are expected to attend, all as the guests of the Organization Committee. Originally it was intended to charge $1.50 a plate. That scheme has been abandoned.

Lots of Speech-Making.

Details of the final plans for raising the $150,000 which will be paid to Mrs. Britton next Friday, will be explained to the diners, but positively no requests for stock subscriptions will be made. Bilheimer will talk. Rickey will talk. So will J. C. Jones. Gus Haenschen will be at the piano. J. C. Reid at the door, and oh, boy, there'll be action!

"This banquet is to be a test of Rickey's popularity and the popularity of the Cardinal club," said Bilheimer yesterday. "We will tell exactly how much stock has been subscribed for and a lot of people will be surprised at the handsome total. We will also explain how we are going to put over the final K. O. punch."

A list of the present stock-holders of the Cardinal club was given out yesterday. It includes 407 names of St. Louisans, many of whom have promised to increase their holdings just as soon as the first $150,000 is raised. In the meantime St. Conservative Louis has adopted a sympathetic "show-me" attitude.

Chicago U. Team Wins Big Nine Indoor Meet; Four Records Smashed

CHICAGO, March 24.—The University of Chicago track team tonight won the seventh annual intercollegiate conference indoor meet at Patten Gymnasium, Northwestern University, by scoring 38 points. University of Illinois finished second with 23 and Wisconsin third with 20. Northwestern scored 11½, Purdue 9½, Minnesota 6, and Indiana 2.

Conference records were broken in the 60-yard high hurdles, mile relay and 440-yard dash. Waldo Ames of Illinois lowered his own mark of eight seconds in the hurdles to 7 4-5 seconds.

Binga Dismond, negro runner of Chicago U. broke the 440-yard mark, defeating Smart of Northwestern, in :50 4-5. The previous record, made by Dismond, was 52 seconds.

The University of Chicago relay team in winning the mile event in 3:32 3-5 clipped 2-5 of a second off the mark made by Illinois in 1913.

Capt. Jerome Fisher of Chicago, was the individual star, scoring 10 points. He won the high jump and the pole vault.

MISS MARY BROWNE WINS FROM MOLLA BJURSTEDT

LONG BEACH, Cal., March 24.—Mary K. Browne defeated Molla Bjurstedt today, 6—4, 6—1, in the women's singles finals in a tennis tournament here. In the mixed doubles finals Mary Browne and Simpson M. Sinsabaugh played Molla Bjurstedt and George M. Church, 6—4 and 1—6, play to be resumed tomorrow.

George Church and Harold A. Throckmorton were defeated by Nat Brown and Harold A. Wayne in the men's doubles, 10—8, 9—7, 3—6 and 6—0.

Ben Millers Play Municipal Soccer Champions Today

Contests at Robison Field Will Wind Up Season for Local Kicking Teams.

St. Louis soccer season will come to a close this afternoon with the contests between the professionals and municipal kickers at Robison Field. The opening clash will be between the Municipal All-Stars, picked by Billy Klosterman and Paul McSweeney, and the Innisfails, while the Ben Millers and Keen Kutters play the second and feature. The first starts at 2 o'clock.

A lot of interest is attached to the two clashes as it will give the local soccer followers a chance to see just how the park kickers compare with the professionals. Five ex-Municipal stars will be in the lineups of the Innisfails and Millers. The former team has Hutchinson and Mitchell and the latter Quinn, Potee and Dunn.

Thirty-minute halves will be played in the first clash, and 45 in the second between the two champions, Millers of the professional circuit, and Keen Kutters of the Municipal. Phil Kavanaugh will referee.

LAVAN AND PRATT MAY NOT OPPOSE CARDS IN SERIES

Shotton, Also, Is a Doubtful Starter and Jones Is Palpably Worried.

FORT WORTH, Tex., March 24.

Beecher lf
J. Smith, cf
Cruise, rf
Miller 1b
Betzel 2b
Hornsby ss
F. Smith 3b
Snyder c
Steele p

WACO, Tex., March 24.—Although the opening of the spring series is scheduled for Saturday, Manager Fielder Jones of the Browns today said that he was still in the dark as to the make-up of his team for the inaugural contest. His inability to definitely name the opening day line-up at this time is due chiefly to the fact that there is doubt about three of the regulars of last season being able to get into the game. These men are Derrill Pratt, Dr. John Lavan and Bert Shotton.

Lavan is positively out of the running so far as the spring series is concerned. He may be ready April 11, when the American League season opens, but Jones will not ask him to play next Saturday.

Shotton is just recovering from an attack of tonsilitis and whether he is able to patrol the beat in left field depends on the progress he makes in the few remaining days in the South.

Pratt Has Bum Knee.

Pratt is bothered with a twisted knee. If rest will enable him to get into the game next Saturday, he will likelyl be at his old job at the middle sack, as he will be permitted to take things easy during the rest of the training period.

Should these three men be forced to remain on the bench in the opening game it is almost a certainty that Ernie Johnson and Bill Kenworthy will be the substitutes for two of the regulars, the Swede going to shortstop and the Pacific Coast League slugger to second base. Just who will be the left fielder in the event that Shotton is not able to play will not be decided probably until next Thursday, when the Browns finish their training campaign in the South. The job is open to Jacobson, Rumler, Sloan and Yardley, all recruits, Manager Jones having retained only the three regular out fielders of his last years's team. While Jacobson would probably have been the choice because of his terrific hitting in the South, there is also a chance that the giant may be unable to play.

He strained a ligament or muscle in his back in taking a healthy swing at a pitched ball in Corpus Christi several days ago and is still complaining of the wrench. The pitcher for the opening tilt also depends on what happens between now and next Saturday. At the present writing, Jones is of the opinion that either Carl eWilman or Bob Groom will be able to hurl and adds also that he may show Tom Rogers, the former Nashville right-hander on opening day.

Following the game here tomorrow the practice program for the Browns during the week includes two sessions in Palestine Monday, games against the Columbus (American Association) team in Pine Bluff, Ark., Tuesday and Wednesday, and a game against the Memphis club Thursday. Jones is depending on these games to enable him to pick his most formidable team.

St. Louis Plays Rocks.

The basketball teams of St. Louis and Rock Springs will fight it out at the Tower Grove Turner Hall this afternoon to decide the championship of the second division of the Turner Basketball League. The regular campaign ended with the pair tied with nine victories and one defeat.

SPORT SALAD

BY L. C. Davis

Military Training.

IN a baseball training camp,
Where the weather's cold and damp,
Every morning I must go upon parade
And I have to watch my step,
When the Sergeant hollers, "hep!"
For, the military rules must be obeyed.

Though I never cared for work,
I am slaving like a Turk,
And, believe me, it is anything but fun;
Still, I have to plug away,
Though I heard my mother say
That she never raised her boy to tote a gun.

Oh, I've had about enough
Of this military stuff
For I find it doesn't help my pitching arm,
It brings muscles into play
That may wreck me any day
And I view the situation with alarm.

When I hear the bugle blow
To my drilling I must go
Like an ordinary soldier in the trench;
But it goes against the grain,
For to me it's very plain
All my soldiering I'll do upon the bench.

CHORUS.
Hep! Hep! Hep! the boys are marching;
Cheer up comrades, here we come.
"Column left!" and "Column right!"
I've been learning how to fight,
But I fear my pitching arm is on the bum.

Municipal Heads Reject Plans to Join the A. A. U.

Federation Also Decides to Restrict Activities This Year to Golf and Tennis.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 24.—Cabot Ward, President of the Board of Park Commissioners of New York City, was elected president of the National Municipal Recreation Federation today at the closing session of the convention here. Dwight F. Davis, St. Louis, the retiring president was chosen second vice president.

The other officers for 1917 are Irwin M. Krohn, Park Commissioner of Cincinnati, first vice president and Nelson Cunliff, Park Commissioner of St. Louis secretary and treasurer.

Dr. William Burdick, head of the local public athletic league; Paul B. Williams of New York, field secretary of the National Lawn Tennis Association; Dr. George J. Fisher, of New York, Dr. William Major, commissioner of parks, Peoria, Ill. and S. Wales Dixon, supervisor of recreation; Hartford, Conn., were chosen delegates at large.

Proposed alliances with the Amateur Athletic Union and United States Football Association were rejected. It was decided to restrict the intercity activities to tennis and golf. The principal change adopted was to abolish the present system of elimination tournaments making all play straight through. Formerly, by winning the national title, the championship city was entitled to enter the finals the next year without competing for the right. An eligibility rule was adopted requiring one year's residence in a city, instead of six months.

Proposal to exclude from competition all members of private clubs, and to limit entries in the sectional and national matches solely to those who are dependent entirely upon the public parks for their recreation was referred to the executive committee.

NEW ORLEANS, March 24.—Bantamweight Champion Pete Herman has called off his scheduled bout with Johnny Coulon, former title holder, because of a severe cold. The crown holder announces he will not fight for two months. He has purchased a saloon in this city.

FT. WORTH FINDS JOB OF BEATING CARDS EASY, 4-1

Weak Hitting Is Responsible for Downfall of Hug's Regulars.

SMITH STEALS A RUN

Fleet Fly-Chaser Bunts, Steals and Scores on an Infield Out.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS, March 24.—The Cardinals couldn't hit the ground with their bats this afternoon and the Fort Worth Panthers took Huggins' Regulars into camp 4 to 1, in a listless game. The St. Louis outfit started well enough by pushing a run over in the first frame, but after that they were helpless before Geist and Countryman.

Jack Smith bunted in the first and got all the way to second when the Panther third sacker tossed wildly to first. He swiped third. Betzel tapped to the pitcher and Smith slid home under the heave, which was wide. Betzel beat his way to second on a delayed steal but died there.

The Piercing of Pierce.

The Panthers made it hot for George Pierce in their half of the first. Stow opened with a base hit. Kircher followed with another one-spot. Crichlow bunted to Pierce, who threw low to first, Stow scoring. A pass to Williams filled the sacks for McIver, who shot the pill to the right fence for a double, Kircher and Crichlow going over.

Cruise returned the ball to Betzel who snapped to F. Smith in time to get the batter going into third. Williams, who had injured an ankle turning third, was also tagged by Smith between third and home as he strove to reach the plate on all fours.

Watson went to the hill for the Cardinals in the sixth. The Panthers touched him for a tally in the seventh when Adams singled and went to second on Thompson's sacrifice. Bernsen singled over second, Adams holding third. Adams scored and Bernsen went to second on a double steal as Countryman fanned. Snyder made a poor throw to Betzel.

This Is "Hornsby Day."

Hornsby, who went to Denison to play with the Yannigans today, will rejoin the Regulars tomorrow in order to be here for "Hornsby Day." This is Hornsby's home. Steele and North are slated to hurl for the Cardinals tomorrow.

DARCY DID MORE THAN HIS SHARE TO AID COUNTRY

Exhibitions Brought $60,000 to Fund to Help Injured Australian Soldiers.

Is Sole Support of Large Family and Would Not Be Accepted for Active Service.

By Robert Edgren.

The truth about Les Darcy hasn't been told. Probably many people have already formed their opinion of the unfortunate Australian by the hasty and ill-considered action of Gov. Whitman, who treated Darcy very much like a common criminal when he ordered that Les should not be allowed to box in New York State.

Darcy is no criminal. He is no "slacker." The Governor's remark that to let Darcy box would be an affront to every New York lad who went to the Mexican border was unconsciously humorous. As a plain fact—every New York lad who went to the border would be delighted to sit in a ringside seat and see Darcy in action. If Darcy had fought, the "Border" would have been well represented, for New York boys have their share of sporting blood.

Let's see if Darcy is a "slacker"—not that it makes much difference, for the Governor hasn't interfered with thousands of others who dodge service in England and make their living in New York. But let us just have the truth about Darcy.

Sole Support of Family.

First, Les Darcy is and for some years has been the sole support of his family. It is a big family. His father is crippled and bed-ridden. His one elder brother is a hopeless cripple. One younger brother, 14 years old, earns a few cents a day in a bakery. The others range in age down to the infant class.

If they had conscription in Australia Darcy, as the sole supporter of this family, would not be accepted for active service. And in Australia conscription was voted down. There is no conscription. Darcy would be under no obligation to serve in any case.

Now what has Darcy done? During the early war rush he tried twice to enlist. Each time he was turned down as he was under age, and his mother refused her consent.

"But," Darcy says, "they never wanted me to enlist and go to war. I could do more good without fighting."

In what way?"

Simple enough.

Darcy was extremely popular. When he boxed there was always money in the house.

So Les gave his time freely to the cause. He travelled around and gave about 60 boxing exhibitions for the benefit of the Austrian wounded fund. In this way he earned between $60,000 and $75,000 for the fund.

Did More Than His Bit.

That was more than one man could do for Australia by marching off with a rifle over his shoulder, wasn't it?

Darcy still thought he'd like to enlist, however. But he had his family of 11 to support. And his ring savings amounted to, at the outside, something like $15,000.

Les knew he could earn double that amount in one fight in America. He was eager to take a six months' trip, fight several bouts and return.

Mr. McIntosh, a professional promoter, offered to take him—McIntosh to get the lion's share. Darcy was willing—but, Mr. McIntosh refusing to post Darcy's guarantee, it was called off.

McIntosh, Darcy says, could get the Government's permission to leave Australia whenever he wanted it.

Along came Jack Kearns, an American promoter, who made a proposition to Darcy and got the Government leave of absence for six months for Darcy.

Did Not Trust Kearns.

But Les didn't trust Kearns. His experience with promoters hadn't been a happy one. The biggest purse he had ever received, popular champion though he was, was £1000—just about $5000. For once Les wanted to get what he was worth. He had a use for the money.

So he tried to get permission to go to America for six months on his own accord.

He was promptly turned down.

Being of a simple mind, Darcy couldn't understand why a promoter could take him to the United States, yet he couldn't go alone.

He Was Not of Age.

He determined that he'd go. He wasn't of age, and had no military responsibility of any kind.

Darcy paid his fare and that of a trainer, O'Sullivan. He'd have been better off if he'd left his rubber behind. Arriving in New York, Darcy called O'Sullivan his "manager," just to prevent a rush of managers eager to handle his affairs. But that first day Darcy explained to me, while O'Sullivan listened and approved, that O'Sullivan wasn't really a manager—only a rubber, and a "friend," and that Darcy would sign all papers in person and make his own matches.

Later O'Sullivan got the money bug, demanded 25 per cent of Darcy, and signed various contracts and accepted one advance payment without Darcy's consent. Darcy "bounced" him, and O'Sullivan spread tales of the Australian champion's "ingratitude." All this hurt Darcy. It may even have put the idea into Gov. Whitman's head—the idea of not allowing Darcy to fight for the $30,000 purse Promoter Browne had agreed to pay him.

There's absolutely nothing in Darcy's record to indicate his bouts in this country would be "brutal." Les, while a speedy, aggressive fighter, never tried to batter and mark his opponent purposely. Both Smith and Chip, who met the great Australian in the ring, emerged without bearing a single mark.

Is Not a Brutal Fighter.

The American boxing world was highly expectant of seeing Darcy perform. So much had been written about the smiling, boyish-looking Australian, his remarkable speed and style, that we on this side of the ocean had come to believe another great ring marvel had sprung up.

And just when the time approached for Darcy to prove these claims came the Governor's unusual "slacker" charge, even though Les had promised to contribute part of his ring earnings to the Australian Government.

Wagner May Be Sheriff.

WAGNER GIVES ADVICE ON BATTING TO ROOKIE

SHREVEPORT, La., March 24.

HANS WAGNER, the veteran shortstop with the Pittsburg Nationals, is a professor of B. A.—batting art. One of the recruits with the Cincinnati Nationals, now in training here, had the nerve to write Hans for a bit of advice on batting. Wagner good-naturedly answered. The secret of his batting style is out. Here it is:

"You say you are a free swinger," the veteran wrote. "Then, whenever you go up, unless under orders to wait it out, decide before you reach the plate just which ball you are going to hit—and stick to your decision.

"If you make up your mind to hit the first ball, do not hesitate, but step right into it. If you have decided to wait for the third ball, do not let even two tempting pitches make you change your mind. When the third one comes over go after it with all your might. This rule is about the best advice I can give to a free-swinging hitter."

Couch Is Well Fixed.

WAXAHACHIE, Tex., March 24.—John Couch, a recruit pitcher with the Detroit Americans, doesn't have to worry about the price of potatoes or whether he makes good in the majors. Couch and his five brothers own a cattle ranch of 16,000 acres in Montana and he is well fixed with the world's goods. He has been playing ball in the summer and going to Leland Stanford University in the winter. Although John doesn't have to toil, he is trying hard to convince Manager Jennings that he is a regular pitcher.

Peoria Pair Sets World's Mark in A. B. C. Pin Meet

Satorius and Holzschuh Grabbed Total of 1346 in Rolling Yesterday.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., March 24.—Contestants in the American Bowling congress tournament celebrated the windup of its third week here today by posting the seventh total that passed all former world's records. Gus Satorius and William Holzschuh rolled wonderful tenpins for their big mark, three errors alone marring their score sheet. Each of them ran past a single pin. The scores were; Satorius, 254, 214, 220—688; Holzchuh, 186, 237, 235—658.

Many 600 counts were made in the individual event, with Frank Grebe of Chicago leading the way with 651. This score put him seventeenth in the event.

The standings:

Two-man teams: Satorius-Holzschuh, Peoria, 1346; McCaughin, Peachey, Indianapolis, 1314; Ben and Nick Budinger, Chicago, 1312; Edwards-West, Buffalo, 1299; Morowski-Lundgren, Chicago, 1290; Ware-Dech, Fargo, 1287; Pfister-Giroux, Detroit, 1280; Snider-Young, Toledo, 1278; Meyer-Waldecker, St. Louis, 1256; Thies-Franz, Cleveland, 1253, Klug-Elwert, Toledo, 1253.

Individuals: Otto Kallusch, Rochester, 696; G. W. May, Fort Wayne, 693; C. Siegler, Detroit, 691; B. Bradshaw, Cleveland, 690; J. Shaw, Chicago, 683; L. Franz, Cleveland, 683; E. Mattak, St. Paul, 680; F. Magan, Detroit, 679; P. Wolf, Chicago, 676; H. Steinmiller, Chicago, 675.

CANNEFAX TO PLAY M'COURT FOR CUE TITLE NEXT MONTH

Local Three-Cushion Star to Battle Recent Conqueror of George Moore.

Charlie McCourt's close call at Cleveland recently when the world's three-cushion champion succeeded in retaining the honors by only four points, 150 to 146, in his match with Horace B. (Jess) Lean, has given hope anew to the followers of Robert L. Cannefax of St. Louis, McCourt's next opponent for the title. The St. Louis fans have yearned for a champion ever since their favorite son, "Banker" John Horgan, held the Jordan Lambert trophy years ago.

They figure that if Lean can hold McCourt to a four-point victory, Cannefax, admittedly a stronger player than Jess, ought to beat the champion. The logic of their argument is obvious, but the Mound City enthusiasts must not forget that the hardest game in the world to dope is three-cushion billiards, and that is very uncertainty is what makes it such a popular game.

Bob, however, has one weakness which may help McCourt, in that he is a harder nut to crack at home than abroad, and as the match will be played in Cleveland, the champion will have an advantage. The official dates for the event have not been set.

National Tennis Body Enforce New Rules on Amateurism This Year

NEW YORK, March 24.—The Executive Committee of the National Lawn Tennis Association announced here today that at a meeting held last night it was decided to enforce certain rulings on amateur status under the authority given the committee by recent changes made in the association's constitution.

In future any club or association directly or indirectly paying expenses, board or lodging of any tennis player must send a memorandum of the same to the Executive Committee. Otherwise, further sanction may be refused to such club or association.

All players engaged in any way with the tennis goods business are requested to supply the committee with a memorandum before June 1, 1917, covering by activity for the past year along the following lines:

"The number of tournaments played in and the actual time absent from business.

"The extent with which the player individually has to do with tennis goods as compared with other goods handled by the firm with which he is connected; and the extent value of goods sold by him, golf, baseball and other goods, as well as tennis.

"A subcommittee is to be appointed to take final action on the information thus assembled and where it appears a player has broken the rule he will be suspended from further tournament play unless he can show he has now ceased to infringe the rule."

100 TEAMS ENTERED IN WEST END PIN TOURNEY

Entries closed last night for the West End handicap ten pin tournament and 100 teams are scheduled to compete. Dennis Sweeney announced that this was ten more than competed in the same tournament last year. The schedule for the opening Wednesday night, follows:

FAR-WEST TRACK STARS MAY MEET MISSOURI U.

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 24.—Arrangements now being made will bring to Columbia the track squads of the University of California and Leland Stanford University for a triangular meet with the University of Missouri athletes in the middle or later parts of May. The Western coast cinder path stars will stop off in Tigertown for the games, while en route to the East, where they will compete in the intercollegiate championships.

Brewer has offered the occidental athletes any date during the weeks ending May 19 and June 2.

Stock to Join Phillies.

MOBILE, Ala., March 24.—Milton Stock, third baseman of the Philadelphia Nationals last season, who has been holding out for a salary increase, left Mobile today for the training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla. Stock said he was called to the camp by Manager Moran.

U. S. WILL STAND ON SPIRIT OF OLD PRUSSIAN TREATIES

Formally Refuses Germany's Protocol Modernizing and Extending Them.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The United States, it was made known today, has formally refused to morednize and extend the Prussian-American treaties of 1799 and 1828, although it was announced that this Government will adhere to the treaties in their original form.

The reply of the State Department to Germany with regard to the old treaties was made through Dr. Paul Ritter, Swiss Minister here, in charge of German interests and it rejected the protocol sent through him to this Government Feb. 10.

The reply states that the United States, considering the treaties in force in their original form, is entirely unwilling to accept Germany's interpretation of them as provided in the protocol which expanded the exemption from seizure of "merchants and their effects," in case of war between the two countries, into a general exemption, including enemy ships in port at the outbreak of war, which the protocol provides must be left free or given safe conduct to their home ports, even through a hostile blockade.

Freedom of Enemy Nationals.

Moreover, all enemy nationals would be free from internment and able to go about their business, without the slightest hindrance, during the whole course of the war and not in the restricted way mentioned in the original treaties. The question left unanswered by the negotiations is the status of the 1,250,000 German citizens in this country.

While the United States has refused to agree to the blanket exemption sought by the German protocol, it nevertheless will follow the spirit of the old treaties and not interfere with Germans here who comply with the law.

The Government will undoubtedly, in case of war, cause Germans to register and possibly restrict their travel, without special permit, to certain limits. General internment is not being considered as yet, as officials maintain that America's only object in the war would be to curb the German Government and not to injure its citizens here. It is assumed on all sides that the great mass of Germans will respect their obligations as guests in this country, but it is known also that some few will make trouble which will react more to the disadvantage of the rest than otherwise.

Favors Canadian Plan.

The War Department has already obtained full details of all the various principles and practices put into effect in other countries and is prepared to carry out any plan that may be ordered. So far the only one that has met with any favor is the Canadian plan which leaves all Germans free as before, subject to restrictions on trave. and obligation to register and intern only those known to be enemies of the State. So far only about 6000 out of 80,000 in Canada have so been held.

The old Prussian treaties have been the cause of much confusion throughout the whole war. Germany first called attention to them voluntarily, rather surprising officials here, as the result was to make her liable for the destruction of the American sailing ship William P. Frye. The United States at the time admitted their applicability, later cited them in the litigation over the German prize ship Appam, and last August proposed a general reaffirmation of them, with an explanatory interpretation of some of the antiquated provisions. To this Germany made no reply, but with the severance of relations she took urgent steps to have them reaffirmed. At the time Ambassador Gerard was leaving Berlin Count Mongelas of the German Foreign Office intimated that if the treaties were not signed the American newspaper men might be held as hostages. Gerard replied that he no longer was Ambassador and could not discuss it. A short time later Germany made another attempt to have the treaties reaffirmed through the Swiss Minister here. The protocol suggested, however, presented so many new features that officials felt it to be practically a new treaty, which would have to be ratified by the Senate.

Missing Chicago Girl Hunted Here.

The police last night were asked to search for Mary McGoorty, 16 years old, daughter of Judge John P. McGoorty of Chicago, who left her home there last Monday. She was stage struck.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

NEW MYSTERY IN MAN'S REPORTED LEAP INTO RIVER

Jump From Eads Bridge Follows That of Woman Who First Threw Child In.

A man jumped into the Mississippi River from Eads bridge about 7 o'clock last evening, according to a report made to the police by the motorman of a bridge car. This added a new mystery to the one created by the leap to death from the bridge Friday evening of a young woman who had just before thrown a child into the river.

The motorman said the man climbed slowly over the railing, toward the east end of the bridge, and leaped as far out as he could. The man appeared to be about 35 years old, of medium height and weight, and wore a dark suit and a soft hat.

Joseph Schilz of 4518 Chouteau avenue, a street car conductor, said yesterday that he believed the woman and child drowned the evening before were his wife, Esther Schilz, 22 years old, and their 5-year-old son, Harold. The two had been missing from home since Friday afternoon, he said. Thursday evening they came home late, and the wife said she had been "down to the bridge looking at the water."

He said the description given of the woman, by persons who saw her leap from the bridge, seemed to fit his wife. The witnesses said she wore a black plush coat, a black hat and slippers, and was of dark complexion. The boy wore a dark suit with white stripes, and round hat to match.

Two switchmen saw the woman holding her boy as he stood on the railing, and warned her that the child's position was dangerous. Another man, who saw her turn away her face and push the child over, was almost near enough to grasp her when she plunged after the child. A purse which she dropped on the bridge disappeared in the confusion following the occurrence.

Upon learning that a woman had jumped into the river after tossing her baby before her, Benjamin Dassman, a tailor of 1725 Wash street, told the police yesterday that his bride of three weeks left his home last Monday after a quarrel. She took along her 2-year-old daughter by a former marriage. Mrs. Dassman is 36 years old.

15-YEAR-OLD BOY ACCUSED OF TRYING TO "BLACK-HAND" BANK

Son of Illinois Farmer Arrested While Searching for Money He Had Ordered Placed for Him.

PANA, Ill., March 24.—Howard Fortner, 15 years old, son of John D. Fortner, a retired farmer of Windsor, was arrested last night when he was found with a searchlight examining a railway culvert where he is alleged to have demanded that $3000 be placed by the cashier of the Commercial State Bank of Windsor, on penalty of the bank being blown up. The bank received the demand and threat in Friday's mail and notified the Sheriff, who stationed a deputy on guard, and the arrest followed.

A few days ago Miss Kittle Scroggins, stenographer at the bank, received a letter believed to have been signed by young Fortner, but with an assumed name, demanding that she leave the rear door of the bank unlocked at noon so he could surprise and hold up the cashier and rob the bank. Detectives had since been guarding the institution and working on the case, but without results.

Fortner is said to have made a confession and is under $3000 bond. He had been reading dime novels, he said.

MAN ACCUSED OF PLACING GIRL BRIDE IN NEGRO RESORT

Salvation Army Member Arrested When He Appears to "Pay My Wife's Fine."

Fred Heinz, 39 years old, of 1333 South Thirteenth street, St. Louis, was arrested in East St. Louis last night on a charge of placing his 15-year-old bride of two months in a resort operated there by negroes.

When arrested Heinz wore a uniform of the Salvation Army, of which he says he is a member. He is a dishwasher in a restaurant. His wife said she met him several months before the marriage at a meeting of the Salvation Army on Seventh street in St. Louis.

The girl was found Thursday in a house at 202 Broadway, occupied by negroes. She told the police that she was taken there Monday by Heinz, who returned Wednesday but left again. Wednesday night, the girl asserted, she was subjected to indignities. Early next day she escaped, but on returning for her clothing was locked in her room. The police found her shortly afterward.

Two negroes and a white woman were arrested at the house and they, with Heinz, are held for the Federal authorities. Heinz, who was being sought, walked into the police station and offered to "pay my wife's fine." He was locked up.

Mrs. Heinz, who formerly was Alberta Murphy, had a marriage license showing that she and Heinz were married Jan. 10 by a Justice of the Peace.

NO OVERT ACT CAUSE FOR U. S. TO GO TO WAR, PACIFISTS SAY

Resolutions Adopted at New York Meeting Urge Arbitration With Germany.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Resolutions declaring that "overt acts, however brutal, do not afford adequate cause for war to a republic whose essential relation to international affairs is summed up in the words 'conciliation, arbitration and democracy,' were adopted at a mass meeting held by the Emergency Peace Federation tonight in Madison Square Garden as a "protest against war."

"This mass meeting," the resolutions said in part, "protests against the proclamation by the metropolitan press that a state of war exists between the United States and Germany.

"We oppose as undemocratic and inimical to moral and political liberty every form of conscription or compulsory military training. In such training we see the effective tool of the militarism now devasting the earth.

"For ourselves we respectfully urge that instead of entering upon the misery, distress and desperation of international warfare, the Government of the United States appoint a joint high commission to meet the Deputies of the Imperial Government and by joint agreement to settle the issues involved.

"Finally, we demand that Congress should in no case issue a declaration of war nor declare the existence of a state of war without first considering the result of a previous advisory referendum."

The principal addresses were made by Dr. David Starr Jordan, Chancellor of Leland Stanford University; Prof. Scott Nearing, Joseph D. Cannon of the Western Federation of Miners, and John E. Milholland, father of the late Mrs. Ines Milholland Boissevain.

WESTERN ROADS EXPECTED TO ASK FOR INCREASE IN RATES

Action Forecast by Request for Conference With Interstate Commission.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Application of western railroads for increase in freight rates because of the higher cost of labor under the Adamson law and of supplies and equipment, was forecast late today by a telegram to the Interstate Commerce Commission, signed by officials of more than 20 roads, asking for a conference to consider steps necessary to meet "a financial situation requiring immedate relief."

Application of the western roads for a conference is in line with the action of eastern roads yesterday in filing a formal petition requesting the commission to suspend its rules so as to permit without delay a general advance in rates. The commission, replying to the telegram, set next Thursday afternoon as the time for the conference.

THREE WORKMEN KILLED BY EXPLOSION OF GASOLINE

Theodore Ames, 19 years old, of 4617 Sacramento avenue; Lee Dudley, 32, 3619 Lafayette avenue, and Douglas Bourne, negro, 18, 2920 Market street, died yesterday at the city hospital from burns received Friday evening when 10 gallons of gasoline exploded in a tank in the rear of the United States Incandescent Lamp Co., Ewing and Clark avenues. Earl Pearson, negro, 3116½ Clark avenue, is at the hospital seriously burned.

The men were pouring gasoline into the tank from a 50-gallon barrel when the explosion occurred. It is supposed that the gasoline fumes were ignited by embers from a fire in the rear of the plant. The explosion caused no damage to the plant.

Editorial
Talk Up St. Louis
It Has Many Advantages Over Any City in the United States

Having just returned from Florida, I could not help but come away deeply impressed with the enthusiasm of the residents about their own towns. No matter what the conversation may be with a Florida man or woman it always ends up by their telling you the immense advantages of their respective towns.

The best talkers of their state and towns that I have ever met are the Florida people; and I think they are justified as they have a wonderful climate and a real estate boom that has never been exceeded anywhere in Oklahoma or the West.

If St. Louisans would have as much enthusiasm and talk up St. Louis and its many wonderful paved streets, good public schools, its pretty residences and its large well-known manufacturing plants, it would grow immensely.

The Prufrock-Litton Store grows because its stocks as well as it employes are constantly improving. It is therefore worthy of the confidence that we ask for it.

CHICKS HATCHED EARLY IN SPRING THRIVE BEST

Drawbacks for the Late-Arriving Young Set Forth by U. S. Department's Poultry Specialists

Contrary to general belief and practice, chicks do not grow or thrive as well during the hot summer days as they do earlier in the spring. Experienced poultrymen realize this fact. The average farmer, however, does not make an effort to hatch early, so that the chicks will have the advantage of a longer and more favorable growing season.

Early hatching not only insures more rapid gains in the growth of chicks, but has a favorable influence on the size of the individuals of the flock. Late-hatched chicks rarely, if ever, attain the size of those hatched early. Early hatching likewise influences early maturity and consequently early egg production.

Given the same food, care and attention, chicks hatched early in March will weigh more when they are four months old than those hatched a month later, say the poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. This likewise holds true with chicks hatched early in April as compared with those hatched a month later. This is due to the fact that the rate of growth of a chick is greater during the first four weeks of its life than at any other time; consequently, the early hatched chick, having the advantage of a more favorable growing season, makes greater gains during the first four weeks of its life than the late-hatched chick. During the early spring months when the temperature is not so varied the growth of chicks is more uniform and constant than it is during the summer.

Millions of chicks die every year as a result of being infested with lice which, under average farm conditions, are oftimes difficult to control. Hen-hatched chicks are not as subject to lice in the early spring as they are during the warmer months, when lice are more prevalent. If for no other reason, chicks should be hatched early, so their growth will not be interrupted by the presence of lice.

Many farmers realize considerable money each spring from the sale of broilers, the price of which is usually governed by their size when sold and the time marketed. Thus it would seem that in order to increase the amount of money from the sale of broilers and fryers early hatching would be employed, so as to have a marketable-sized fowl early in the spring when prices are highest.

New Poultry Book.

The new Ralston Purina Company's (Saint Louis, Missouri) poultry book, fully illustrated, should be in the hands of every one who is interested in raising of poultry. It contains plans of houses, charts, space for keeping daily egg records, and an exhaustive list of recipes for cooking eggs and poultry. Scientific breeding and winter egg production are made practical and understandable for all.

POULTRY PROBLEMS SOLVED

Season for Preserving Eggs.

To settle a controversy among some chicken raisers here, what is the best time to put away eggs for the winter in silicate of soda—W. G., St. Louis, Mo.

I do not wish to be considered as the final authority in this matter, but my personal preference among all months in which to preserve eggs is April. May is almost, if not quite as good. More eggs are laid in April than any other month of the year and usually prices are fewest then. Eggs laid during April and May also seem to be of better quality and apparently are better keepers than those laid later in the season. In other words, they are said to be "stronger."

Unknown Variety.

Will you kindly tell me the name of a hen which I have which until a few days ago I believed to be a Houdan? It is brown and black and has a large black topknot, black legs and is about the size of a Leghorn, although a little longer in body, and it carries its tail down.—L. D. H., St. Charles, Mo.

Our guess would be that this bird is a cross of some kind. It is possible that the bird is a Crevecoeur, a variety belonging to the French class. Its black color would indicate this, although these birds are heavier than Leghorns. It may also be one of the Polish varieties. The three breeds—Houdans, Crevecoeurs and Polish, all have topknots. The varieties of each cover quite a wide field in form, weight, color of plumage, etc., hence the difficulty of telling you definitely which breed or variety your bird belongs to, from the brief description you have given.

Vent Disease.

I have a flock of White Wyandottes that I have been trapnesting, from which to pick my heavy layers for a laying strain. One of these hens had not laid this year and after investigating I discovered it was affected with vent-gleet, which may be of long standing. I have taken this hen away from the rest of the flock. Is there any way to find out whether the male bird may be affected, causing him to spread the disease?—B. T., St. Louis, Mo.

There is no way of telling whether or not the male is affected with this trouble, except, of course, in case other birds in the flock should develop the ailment. There is a possibility, however, that this is not an infectious ailment. It may be due to a broken egg in the oviduct, or some other internal disorder.

I have noticed several articles in your Sunday poultry page on egg records and I hope you will give this a little space. I have 22 single comb white Leghorn pullets hatched April 6, 1916. They began laying Oct. 21 and their record since then is as follows: Oct. 21-Nov. 1, 22 eggs; November, 231 eggs; December, 340 eggs; January, 349 eggs; February, 513 eggs; March 1-11, 233 eggs. Are these birds laying a good average or should they do better? I feed mixed feed, oyster shell, charcoal, ground bone and dry mash, but I am inclined to think there may be something else I could feed to increase their egg yield. Is this a good record or not?—Louis J. Hoffman, St. Louis.

Your pullets are making a far better record than the average flock for this season of the year. The period during which you have kept records is the season in which the average flock lays the fewest eggs, and yet your birds would average more than 100 eggs a year if they should lay no more the rest of the year than they laid during these 140 days of winter. The average hen is said to lay about 80 eggs a year.

Layers Falling Off.

I have 34 hens of mixed breeds and have been getting plenty of eggs until about three weeks ago, when I put them into a pen 50 by 80 feet. Now I am getting less than half the eggs that I received when they ran out. I am feeding poultry feeds. They now stay all grouped up in one corner of the pen most of the time. What can I do to get them to laying again?—G. E. J., Poplar Bluff, Mo.

It is quite evident that your taking this flock off free range and putting them in a small pen is responsible for their falling off in laying. They may not have picked up much feed on range in winter, but they got a little, and besides they received plenty of exercise while roaming about, which kept them in a vigorous, healthy, laying condition. Lack of exercise and lack of variety in the ration are responsible for their not laying better. Green feed is probably their greatest need. This could be furnished by a bed of lettuce, lawn clippings, sprouted oats, cabbages, etc. They also will need mineral and meat foods in some form. Oyster shell will do for the former and beef scrap, bone meal or milk in some form, will do for the latter. After getting used to the smaller quarters they probably will naturally lay more eggs.

Poor Hatch.

I had 46 eggs in an electric incubator. The heat was kept about the same all during the hatch, eggs turned twice daily, morning and evening, and the moisture pan filled on the seventeenth day. When hatching began, on the nineteenth day, only 12 chicks got out. Some had pipped the shell, but never did get out. I broke open some of the eggs and each one had a well-developed chick in it. I am raising Blue Andalusians and have very healthy stock. I have only six hens with my male and he is a very vigorous birds. I would thank you to tell me what the trouble was.—T. J. G., Waco, Tex.

There are numerous causes for poor hatches and it would be difficult to tell you definitely which one is responsible in your case without knowing more about the circumstances. Our first guess would be that you had too much heat and not enough moisture. You do not say how high you kept the temperature, but the fact that the chicks appeared the nineteenth day indicates that the heat was too high, at least part of the time. If you had the machine in a room above ground and fire in the room, you should have supplied moisture long before the seventeenth day. If set in a cellar, this lack of moisture would have been less likely to affect the hatch. Another cause may have been an over-supply of lime in the feed of the hens, causing the egg shells to be too tough.

A PROSPEROUS, long-establishd business in Kansas City is seldom on the market, but this is the exception. Your thorough investigation of the automobile supply business and this one in particular will convince you of the rare opportunity. You are dealing with the owner, who is retiring on account of personal reasons. The business is at its height of prosperity, with possibilities increasing each year, and becoming more permanent, as the number of automobiles in use increases, and for this reason all correspondence must be handled confidentially. For past five years the profits have averaged $20,000 net annually, besides a $6000 salary on a capitalization of $50,000; our credit and reputation is rated at the highest and the stock is complete, having personally attended to the buying, thus eliminating surplus antiquated stock. This is a rare opportunity if you want to get into a busy organization that is showing extraordinary returns on a legitimate established business. Only replies from parties able and desiring a legitimate business are solicited. Will require about $60,000 cash or secured payments. Book accounts need not be included. Will give my personal services up to one year if desired to help buyer get familiar with the business, in which case will guarantee profit. Read this advt. again carefully to fully understand the wonderful opportunity offered. Address B. K. B., 3320 Coleman rd., Kansas City, Mo. (c)

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

WALL STREET STOCKS ARE SHARPLY HIGHER DESPITE THE INTERNATIONAL CRISIS

MONEY MARKET EASY

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 24.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"The action of the American financial markets has made this week in some sense a historic episode of the war. In a conflict whose history has been linked in so remarkable a way with the economic developments that accompanied it, whose early stages were as much a problem of financial expedients and the financial situation as they were of military and naval operations, and whose termination may possibly be a story of economic breakdown by the power which provoked the war, the demonstration of financial confidence in this country, on the eve of our own participation in it, will arrest the attention of all future historians. The complete narrative will provide a chapter quite unprecedented, when all the circumstances are considered, in the history of the world.

"But the chapter is not finished and, therefore, it is advisable that prudent financiers look forward as well as backward. The impulsiveness of financial America—especially its tendency to assume that nothing can alter or impair a position of spectacular prosperity—is a very familiar trait of the national character. We had abundant evidence, in such times of peaceable prosperity as 1901 and 1906, of the extent to which such a disposition sometimes sweeps even experienced financiers off their feet.

"With all the unprecedented economic power which the country possesses today, and with all the just cause for even financial gratification that Germany is being called to account for her conduct, it is at least the dictate of prudence to guard against a similar loss of balance now.

Market Opinion Changed.

"This consideration is brought to mind by the violence with which financial opinion itself has fluctuated. In September, 1914, some of our most prominent financiers appeared to hold the view that the European war meant this country's economic ruin. Suspension of gold payments to foreign creditors was publicly advocated.

"When this had been shown to be a complete misunderstanding of the situation, sentiment rushed, in a year or two, to the opposite extreme, and the seemingly prevalent belief, at the time of last autumn's excited Stock Exchange speculation, was that nothing could stop or check the country's enormous prosperity.

"The menace of a break with Germany caused some moments of apprehension. Now comes the evidence that the financial markets have no fear of this. Our own experience teaches that the state of mind thus created is one to be watched with much circumspection.

"It is certainly not a financial situation with any immediate danger, the underlying economic position is far too strong for that. It is from the disposition to assume that we have a wholly unlimited fund on which to draw, for whatever purposes, that future misgiving might arise. That a reserve fund without attainable limit can exist was never true and is not true today.

"The store of available wealth and capital in this country is beyond all precedent, and it should be drawn upon in full measure to insure early success to our intervention in the war. But it could be used up—as it was, in an astonishingly short time, during the period of financial excess in 1901—if our financiers were suddenly to make up their minds that there is no reason for caution or prudent calculation.

"It is certainly not the less necessary to keep in mind these proper reservations, when warm-hearted Americans, with the best of motives, are proposing immediate projects which would create a European war debt in this country in 12 months, and when, moreover, American capital has ahead of it the stupendous task of providing for Europe's physical and financial reconstruction after war. Meantime, however, the Government has heard from the financial markets, and to a purpose as cheering and reassuring as their response on the eve of the war of 1898.

"Bernhardi, himself, in a moment of unguarded frankness, wrote some years ago that, in the event of a deadlocked military campaign, success in war would fall to the side which could hold out longest financially. Recent signs have indicated that the land campaign is no longer a deadlock; that military Germany is now giving way, as the German Foreign Office did last December. But even if this were not so, a Germany confronted with France, England and the United States, while itself supported by half insolvent Turkey, Bulgaria and Austria, pretty thoroughly fulfills the German General's conditions."

COTTON SCORES NEW HIGH ON MOVEMENT

NEW YORK, March 24.—The cotton market showed renewed strength today, opening at an advance of 14 to 17 points on overnight buying orders and renewed support from spot-house brokers. Nearly all active months made new high ground for the movement, with May selling at 19.09c and October at 18.50c, or 22 to 23 points net higher.

Notwithstanding the Eastern belt forecast for fair and colder weather, active months were 22 to 24 points net higher during the middle of the session on active buying by spot house and Wall street brokers. May sold up to 19.10c and October to 18.51c, but the advance was then checked by realizing and there were reactions of 10 or 12 points from the best. The close was steady, however, and from 9 to 15 points net higher.

Local wheat values advanced violently last week, owing mainly to the railway strike settlement and to reports of severe crop damage in Kansas and Nebraska. Net advances range from 1⅝c to 8c a bushel. Corn gained 4⅝c to 6¼c and oats 1⅝c to 2½c.

Nervousness and irregularity which the wheat market had manifested over the threatened walkout of thousands of railway employes gave way to a quick show of buoyancy as soon as the trade had a chance to take its bearings on the Adamson law decision, and be sure no doubt remained that a nation-wide strike was out of the question.

Profit-making on a big scale was indulged in on Tuesday, by holders, and led to a temporary setback in prices which was emphasized by a bearish construction placed on the retreat of the Germans in France. Peace rumors dominated the market on Wednesday, and more than offset bullish effects of President Wilson's call for Congress to assemble, far ahead of what had previously been the expected time.

Crop Outlook Not Bright.

Disquiet in regard to the wheat crop situation in Kansas and Nebraska first began to be an important bullish factor on Thursday. Simultaneously, assertions that a large fleet of merchant steamships from Holland and elsewhere was on the way to the American seaboard helped to lift prices. The full results of the crop scare, however, were much more evident Friday and yesterday, and in the end carried July wheat to new records for the season. The market finished slightly off from the top.

Corn advanced to new high record prices for the 1916 crop. The strike settlement and scarcity of rural offerings, together with bullish estimates that little or nothing of the Argentine crop would be available for export, had much to do with the rise. Oats advanced with other cereals. Increased demand from the South was a feature.

CHICAGO, March 24.—Big losses in acreage as a result of winter killing did much today to hoist the value of wheat. The market, however, reacted because of profit-taking, and in the end was unsettled, at the same as yesterday's finish to 2⅝c up, with May $1.90¾ to 1.91 and July, $1.63 to $1.63⅜. Corn gained ⅝c to 1⅛c, oats closed ⅛c off to 1⅛c advance and provisions unchanged to 17½c higher.

Reports from 11 leading states indicated that abandonment of winter wheat territory aggregated 4,885,000 acres, the heaviest total ever known, except once. This showing, with a fresh flood of damage reports from west of the Missouri River, led to unusually free buying that carried the market to the topmost prices which the new crop deliveries have attained this season. Prospects of increased co-operation of the United States supplying foodstuffs to the entente nations counted materially as a help to the bull side of the market. In addition, rumors were current that Argentina was about to declare an embargo on the export of all grain.

Anticipations of a good-sized falling off in the United States visible supply total on Monday offset to some extent the influence of heavy realizing sales in the last hour.

Horses and Mules.

The French are taking all classes of horses and the Italians will buy everything in the way of a suitable artillery animal. The inspections were reported very satisfactory. The English are taking artilleries of two classes, paying $170 and $190 per head. There is also a buyer on the market for Cuban riders, 15 to 15¼ hands and 4 to 8 years old. Heavy draft, extra, $150@245; Eastern chunks, $140@180; Southern horses, good, $90@135; Southern horses, plain, $60@80; Southern horses, common, $40@60.

The mule trade is now in good shape to handle all of the stock that comes: 16 to 16¼ hands, $150@270; 15 to 15¾ hands, $125@220; 14 to 14¾ hands, $80@105; 13 to 13¾ hands, $45@90; plugs, $25@65.

—do you discount all your bills?

Do you realize that Manufacturers and wholesalers frequently make 14% to 90% discounting their purchase bills—with our money?

If you don't, couldn't you improve your credit, increase your volume and make more money, by doing so.

Do not those who have big bargains to offer go first to the cash buyer? Isn't a reputation as a cash buyer worth money in other ways, too? And isn't it true that, unless we investigate, we don't always know what we miss?

Manufacturers and Wholesalers sold us $35,001,972.59 accounts in 1916 alone, on our "non-notification to the customer" plan, releasing their capital thus tied up and enabling them to put the ready cash to work at a profit far exceeding our small fixed charge.

The total cost now is only 1/30 of 1% for each day (1% a month, figured to the exact day) on the net face of accounts from date of our purchase until paid, provided you sell us $100,000 of accounts within a year—otherwise there is an additional charge of $5 per $1000. No commission, no interest.

It will involve no obligation on your part to write for details, or have our nearest representative call and explain our Non-notification System.

TO INVESTORS

Let's Use the Natural Canal—The Largest in the World

St. Louis will be the big Inland Port, the Mississippi River the outlet.

The ECONOMIC PROPELLER makes it possible to carry heavy loads via River Boats on water from 4 to 6 feet in channel.

Merchandise can be cheaply carried clear through to the Panama Canal without shifting cargo.

This new scientific low water propeller will increase steamboat efficiency 50%. Also more speed and less power required.

Best business men in St. Louis now stockholders. First boat under construction. Endorsed by many well-known rivermen.

Stock will go to par value in short time. Limited amount sold below par to finish boat now being built. Working models and full demonstration at room 442 Pierce Building.

CATTLE PRICES SOAR TO NEW RECORD LEVELS

Local Market Is 25c Higher on the Week's Trading; Hogs Firm.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by the National Livestock Commission Co., National Stockyards, Ill., March 25.

Livestock receipts were light the first two days of last week, because the railroads would not accept stock for shipment on account of the pending strike. After Tuesday, however, the market on cattle, hogs and sheep showed a good undertone.

Record cattle prices still show prevalent and the first two days of the week recorded an advance of 25c to 50c over the previous week. With more liberal runs on Wednesday and Thursday a decline of about 25c was noticed, which still placed this trade on a steady to 25c higher basis than the week prior.

Choice to prime beef steers were quoted at $11.50 to $12.50; good to choice, $10.50 to $11.50; medium to good, $10 to $10.50; common to medium, $9 to $9.75; common and off-colored light killing steers, $8 to $8.75; good to choice stockers and feeders, $8 to $9; medium to good, $7.85 to $8.15; common to medium, $6.75 to $7.85; good to choice stock cows, $7.15 to $7.35; common to fair, $6.50 to $7; good to choice light stock heifers, $7.50 to $8.25; choice to prime fat yearling butcher cattle, $10.50 to $11.50; good to choice, $9.50 to $10.50; common to medium, $7.50 to $9; choice to fancy heavy beef cows, $9.25 to $10; good to choice, $8.50 to $9.50; medium to good, $7.50 to $8.50; cutters, $7 to $7.50; canners, $5.75 to $6.50; good fat beef bulls, $9 to $9.75; heavy sausage bulls, $7.75 to $8.50; light sausage bulls, $6.75 to 7.50.

Owing to the strike situation the hog market the first two days of last week was inflated, but after the strike was settled normal conditions were resumed and the market closed the week on a satisfactory basis, with best hogs, 150 pounds up, selling at $14.90 to $15.10; mixed hogs, 160 pounds up, $14.50 to $14.80; 120 to 150 pound pigs, $13.25 to $14; lighter pigs, $9 to $11.50; best rough hogs, $14 to $14.25; half fat roughs, $10 to $12.25.

The sheep trade was active throughout, and closed 25c to 40c higher, with good to choice fat wool lambs selling at $15 to $15.40; medium kinds, $14.25 to $14.75; good to choice clipped lambs, $12 to $12.50; common to best cull lambs, $10.50 to $13.50; good to choice fat sheep, $11.50 to $12.25; medium kinds, $10 to $11; choppers, $7.50 to $9.50; canners, $5.50 to $7; bucks, $10.50 to $11. Choice Angora kid goats 10.50 to $11.50; choice Angora aged goats, $9.50 to $10; choice straight-haired kid goats, $9 to $10; choice straight-haired aged goats, $8.50 to $9.

MOTOR SALES CO. LEASES BUILDING ON CHESTNUT ST.

Realty Firm Finds Demand for Quarters on That Thoroughfare a Marked Feature.

The most noteworthy feature of the realty week was the demand for locations on Chestnut street, both east and west of Twelfth street. As reflected by leases effected by Rutledge & Kilpatrick, George F. Heffernan, Barngrove & Specht and Martin-Breitt. The section of that thoroughfare between Twelfth and Eighteenth streets is exciting attention of automobile interests, and the section east of Twelfth street that of light manufacturing concerns.

Rutledge & Kilpatrick announce having leased to the Ames Ton Motor Sales Co. a building recently erected by a client of that real estate agency at 1315-17 Chestnut street. This is a fireproof structure, on a lot 40x109 feet. It was built for the automobile business, of which this thoroughfare, especially the section between Twelfth and Eighteenth streets, obviously is destined.

The Ames Ton Motor Sales Co., of which Charles W. and Alex Hoevel are the principal owners, makes a specialty of converting Ford automobiles into a½-ton commercial trucks. Although the Ames company was only recently launched, it already has orders to the extent of its capacity.

Chestnut Street Quarters in Demand.

According to Rutledge & Kilpatrick, there is a pronounced demand for quarters on Chestnut street between Twelfth and Eighteenth streets on behalf of automobile interests, both pleasure vehicles and trucks.

"As a center for automobile traffic Chestnut street," said Robert Rutledge, president of the real estate concern, "is only second to Locust, and sooner or later, say in five years, the former will begin to loom as the rival of the latter in this connection. Accordingly, we are advising owners of ancient structures in this section of Chestnut street to replace them with modern buildings available for automobile purposes."

Chestnut street received its initial recognition from the automobile interests two years ago when the Republic Truck Co. of Michigan, one of the best known concerns of its kind in the United States, leased a new building embracing a quarter of a block at the southwest corner of Sixteenth and Chestnut streets, which is now occupied with its sales department. The location, according to the Mercantile Trust Co., which effected the lease, has more than met the expectations of the truck company.

The Musick's Plating Works has closed, through George F. Heffernan, a 10-year lease with the Lucas estate for a factory building to be erected for it at 915-19 Chestnut street. The structure will be strictly modern, embraced in one floor, with plenty of skylight and windows. The Musick's Plating Works is the largest and oldest job plating concern in this part of the country. Its slogan: "We plate any metal any finish," explains the business of the concern.

Many new factory ideas and equipment will be introduced in this building, which will be most sanitary. The plating works, which has been located in the vicinity of Eighth and Market streets for 35 years, will remove to its new building about May 15.

Both interests in the deal were represented by George F. Heffernan of 705 Chestnut street, W. C. Tieman arranging all the details.

Calumet Building Lease.

Barngrove & Specht, in connection with the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co., have effected a lease of the fourth floor of the Calumet Building, at the northeast corner of Seventh and Chestnut streets, to the Central Engraving Co., at present located at 325 Olive street, from which it will remove April 1. The lease is for 10 years. The realty firm reports an active demand for offices in this building.

12 BUNGALOWS PLANNED IN NORTH ST. LOUIS HEIGHTS

F. H. Wenneker Buys an Entire Block as a Site From Broadway Savings Trust Co.

As a site for 12 modern bungalows, F. H. Wenneker yesterday purchased through the Broadway Savings Trust Co. a block of ground in North St. Louis Heights, facing Queens avenue and King's highway.

The bungalows will have hot-water heat, hardwood floors, Dutch dining rooms, brick mantels, large living rooms, modern bathrooms and all the latest conveniences. The buildings will comprise five, six and seven rooms each, and will be built on lots of 30, 40 and 50 feet frontage. This lends itself well to buildings of this character, all the lots being high and rolling, having three-foot terraces and ranging in depth from 172 to 180 feet. About 25 buildings of this type have already been built and sold in this tract.

The new bungalows will be built under the supervision of the Broadway Savings Trust Co., which will have the agency for their sale. This deal, which was engineered by Charles de Largy, real estate officer of the trust company, will represent a total investment of about $60,000.

KOPLAR LEASES SEVERAL OF HIS BERLIN AVENUE APARTMENTS

Many of the apartments in the new five and six family buildings erected by the Sam Koplar Real Estate Co. on the north side of Berlin avenue, west of Belt avenue, have been leased.

How to Have Red Lips!

The girl with red lips and pink cheeks may be thankful, for both denote health—vigorous, forceful, magnetic health, and while it may be impossible for some to attain owing to morbid states of health, yet a vast majority of seemingly healthy young women and men are almost colorless, because of a lack of red blood corpuscles. When the blood is improved and enriched with these red corpuscles, the weight increases and a beautiful tint appears on the cheeks, while the lips assume a healthy red color. Many physicians and beauty doctors prescribe three-grain hyponuclane tablets, which are said to invariably increase the red blood corpuscles after a course of treatment lasting several months. The nervous system and general health also improve rapidly. The best physicians and apothecary shops supply this tablet in sealed packages.—ADVERTISEMENT.

($5000.00) Five Thousand Dollars Deposited in the International Bank as a Guarantee to Anyone Legally Disproving My Statements

St. Louis, Mo., March 24, 1917.

It has come to my notice that remarks have been circulated to the effect that Mr. Thomas A. Edison has no direct connection with the manufacture of the New Edison Phonograph, that he merely allows the use of his name for the purpose of exploiting same.

I have deposited Five Thousand Dollars in the International Bank of St. Louis as a reward to anyone who can legally disprove the following statements, viz:—

1st. That Thomas A. Edison practically owns, controls and directs the entire Edison Organization at Orange, New Jersey.

2nd. That Mr. Edison manufactures all mechanical parts of the New Edison in his own laboratories.

3rd. That Mr. Edison, until he was recently employed by the government to perfect inventions for national defense, personally passed upon all artists and censored the original master records.

Signed. Mark Silverstone

MRS. H. RIETMANN AND LAURA ERFMANN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear beloved husband, Daniel Vallimont, who departed this life March 27, 1916.

One year has passed, my heart still sore,
And as time goes on I miss you more;
Your loving smile, your welcome face,
None can fill your vacant place.

Sadly missed by
MRS. ADELE VALLIMONT.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear son, Fred Cassel, who departed this life March 24, 1916.

Sad and sudden was the call
For my dear son loved by all;
You were so good, so kind and true,
But God, who loved you better,
Has found a home for you.

Sadly missed by
MOTHER, BROTHER, WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear brother, Frederick Gillmann, who met death on the F-4, March 25, 1915.

Two years have passed,
Our hearts still sore,
As time goes on we miss you more.
Your loving smile, your welcome face,
None can fill the vacant place.

Sadly missed by
SISTER, BROTHERS AND WIFE.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear daughter, Anna Anderson, who passed away one year ago, March 20, 1916.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice beloved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
And while she lies in peaceful sleep
Her memory we shall always keep.

Sadly missed by
PARENTS, BROTHERS AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mary Beatrice Carmody Meehan, on March 21, 1915.

'Twas Passion Sunday
And the first day of spring;
When the clock struck 10.
Then the half hour 1.
Oh, mother, we knew then
That the hour had come.
Just two years ago today
Since our dear mother passed away;
A loving mother, true and kind;
No friend like her on earth we'll find.
For all of us she did her best.
May God grant her eternal rest.

Sadly missed by her HUSBAND, DAUGHTERS, SONS AND BROTHER.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our son and brother, Henry C. Gerwiner, died suddenly March 22, 1914.

Memories of our son, who has left this world of care,
Deep down within my heart, I always keep his childish voice,
Which now, alas, no more will charm my ears with sweetest sounds,
For death has closed the door;
But long as life my heart shall hold thy memory ever dear,
And o'er thy grave in lonely grief
Shall fall the silent tear.

Sadly missed by parents and little sister,
MR. AND MRS. GERWINER.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear wife, Theresa Nicolay, who departed this life one year ago March 16, 1916,

Loving wife, mother and grandmother,
True and kind, no friend like her on earth we'll find.
God called her home, it was His will,
But in our hearts she lingers still.
For all of us she did her best,
May God grant her eternal rest.

Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND FAMILY. (c)

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear father and husband, Edward Le Roy, who went to eternal rest March 29, 1916.

Not gone from memory, not gone from love,
But gone to a fatherly home above,
And while you rest in peaceful sleep
Your memory we shall always keep
The depth of our sorrow we cannot tell.
At the loss of our dear father and husband we loved so well.
Day by day we sadly miss you;
They may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the grief
That within our heart's concealed.
You shall never be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade.
Our loving hearts will always linger
Around the grave where you are laid.
Sad and painful was our parting,
But I hope we'll meet some day.

Sadly missed by his wife and daughter,
NORMA LE ROY, EDNA LE ROY.

ADVERTISING

AGENCY REPRESENTATIVE WTD

In St. Louis there is somewhere a man for whom a mighty good job is ready. This job needs that man, and that man wants this job. Here's the kind of job it is. A definite salary to start on—with the way wide open to as big a salary as he's got it in him to earn. The more his employers have to increase his salary, the better they will like him. But he'll never be paid a single dollar that he doesn't earn—so lazy men, this isn't for you! The work of the man in this job is to create in business firms a lively ambition to increase their profits; and to convince them that he represents an organization which "delivers the goods" in the profit-producing line. For that's what his organization does. Advertising is simply a means to increase profits. And when any business has in it the possibility of making more money by advertising, but isn't yet ready for that forward step—then this organization takes hold of that business from basement to roof and develops it into a condition of readiness to make profits through advertising. How should you like to become a part of such an organization—an organization of trained men who know the principles, the methods, and the practices of successful business; an organization that is in daily actual contact with the practical problems of factory, office, and selling force; an organization built on the experineces of many years and of hundreds of individual businesses; how should you like to be a respresentative of this organization—the representative of its established reputation and of its continuous growth and progress? The man who gets this job will be this sort of man. Probably between 26 and 33 years of age—though no one is barred on the score of youth or maturity. Alive with energy every minute of the day—with a keen scent for new customers. He'll be getting customers for an organization that a mighty high percentage of the firms in St. Louis need connection with—for an organization that now has customers among the prospering firms in St. Louis. And this salesman will know thoroughly and believe confidently in what he is selling, with enthusiasm in and loyalty to his job. He is that type of man who goes after and gets the business that the merit of his goods entitles him to. The man for this job is first of all a genuine salesman—in what line his selling experience has been gained is not so important—though of course the more he knows about advertising and the successful results of advertising, the better he'll be fitted to start in on his new job. We have thought that possibly this man may now be representing some publication—selling advertising space for one of the great magazines or for a group of leading newspapers, work that has brought him into contact with the advertising world and caused him to crave a greater share in its activities. We'll give him the chance to get ample activity of mind and body—for this job goes to a thinker and a worker. How are we going to select you? In the first place, by the degree of intelligence and good personality that you show—then by your capacity to understand business-getting problems, to grasp the purposes of our organization, to realize what your own work with us will be and what opportunities it offers you—and finally by your own salesmanship in selling yourself to us. We shall not judge you by the salary you ask. We have seen "thousand-dollar-a-month" men fall flat when they tackled the wrong jobs—and we've seen thousand-dollar-a-year men grow quick to great worth when they got their right opportunities. We shall favor the man who knows he is "coming," rather than the man who thinks he has "arrived." For if so far you hove come only a little way, but are really a "comer"—then you'll come the rest of the way with us. Tell us, in confidence, all that we need to know about you. Box E-201, Post-Dispatch.

CANADA offers 160 acres free to farm hands. Bonus of Western Canada land to men assisting in maintaining needed grain production. The demand for farm labor in Canada is great. As an inducement to secure the necessary help at once, Canada will give 160 acres of land free as a homestead and allow the time the farm laborer, who has filled on the land to apply as residence duties, the same as if he actually had lived on it. Another special concession is the reduction of one year in the time to complete duties. Two years instead of three as heretofore, but only to men working on the farms for at least six months in 1917. This appeal for farm help is in no way connected with enlistment for military service, but solely to increase agricultural output. A wonderful opportunity to secure a farm and draw good wages at the same time. Canadian Government will pay all fare over 1 cent per mile from St. Paul and Duluth to Canadian destinations. Information as to low railway rates may be had on application to C. J. Broughton, 112 W. Adams st., Chicago, Ill., Canadian Government Agent. (c99)

THE CAR THE PRICE THE TERMS

All guaranteed by us and if you do not know our honest methods, permit us to refer you to hundreds of satisfied Oldsmobile users here in St. Louis.

These cars have been traded in for 1917 model Oldsmobiles, because it is larger, and by people who have taken a sacrifice, while we have overhauled, repainted and otherwise put these cars in such condition that we say

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR YOUR MONEY REFUNDED.

The prices on these 1916 model "4-cylinder" and "8-cylinder" Oldsmobiles range from $775 to $950. Some have only been driven a few thousand miles. We have accumulated a few of them for our spring opening, and you cannot afford to miss seeing and trying these cars. They look and run like new cars.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THESE SALES.

If you have not all the ready cash we will accept terms. Should you not want the car now we will store it until you are ready.

Don't buy until you have tried the car, and remember our guarantee is good for 90 days after delivery. Open Sunday.

EDISON

Is the inventor of the first and only successful intensifier; this new spark plug is known as the LONG DISTANCE and is destined to revolutionize the industry; has intensifier built in vacuum static head and knife edge electrode; it fires a concentrated blaze (not a faint spark) that will ignite any mixture and make starting easy; it produces perfect combustion and gives more power on less gas; it will fire perfectly submerged in oil or grease and is proof against every fault; it will not miss and will prevent fouling, skipping, choking and jumping; it has been adopted by the United States Government, the Standard Oil Co., 52 different cities and thousands of individuals; it is the plug you will eventually buy if you demand 100 per cent efficiency; put a set in your car and try them 30 days; if not entirely satisfactory return them and get your money. Phone for our demonstrator, who will call and show you its many features and superiority.

Price, $1 each for next 30 days.

The Unspoken Question—

"Suppose we have war?" There may be a man in St. Louis who is letting this question enter into his calculations about buying a home in Ames Place.

That man is just the fellow who ought to buy and buy now. This is the cautious man's opportunity. No war can affect his need for a home and if he owns a home no disturbance can affect that part of his life.

If he buys a home to-day—he makes capital of the other man's uncertainty. His own uncertainty will vanish in the light of the solid excellence of

MISCELLANEOUS

Choice Colonization Tract

Gulf Coast Highlands
Alabama and Mississippi

7000 acres of choice farming and grazing land, located about 40 miles north and northwest of Mobile, the great sea port of the South. Land on both sides of the main line of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad.

There are towns, stores, schools, churches, postoffices convenient to this land, and wagon roads leading through the tract. Many improved farms in cultivation on adjoining lands.

TIMBER.
This tract of land is cutover timber land. Some of the timber having been cut about 10 or 15 years, there is now some second-growth timber suitable for fencing, building and other domestic purposes.

TOPOGRAPHY.
About 75 per cent of the land is level, the rest gently rolling, none of it too hilly to be plowed uphill. All of it suitable for agricultural purposes.

SOIL.
The land is classed as Norfolk sandy loam, orangeburg sandy loam, with a clay subsoil. This land is exceedingly productive of general farm products, and is also especially adapted to fruits of great variety.

PRODUCTS.
Adjoining and intervening this land are a number of farms, upon which are grown cotton, corn, oats, small grain, hay and many varieties of fruits in abundance. Satsuma oranges, figs and paper-shell pecans offer wonderful opportunities. On account of the long growing season, great quantities of forage crops are raised. Beef and pork can be produced cheaply and marketed at tremendous profits. There is a good local market in Mobile, where a packing plant was recently built.

HEALTH.
The locality is one of the most healthful in the United States. The elevation is high, about 300 feet above the gulf. Citronelle, the famous health resort, is located within two miles of this tract.

STOCK RAISING.
The land is well set with native grasses and will readily sod to Bermuda and Lespedeza. The tract is exceedingly well watered, there being flowing springs on almost every 40 acres over the whole tract.

Price and terms on request.

TITLE.
Good merchantable title guaranteed.

INSPECTION.
I shall be pleased, by appointment, to go with bona fide interested parties to make an inspection of any portion of this tract.

FARM—For sale; an ideal chicken and vegetable ranch, 20 acres on the Manchester road, of the finest ground in that section of the country, 20 miles from St. Louis. A good 4-room house, with all the necessary barns and outbuildings, nice family orchard of miscellaneous fruit, and plenty of water from cisterns and pond. This is without question one of the best poultry farms in St. Louis County, and at the price it can be bought it is a bargain. For price and terms, etc., see
BENJAMIN F. THOMAS,
713 Wainwright Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

THE greatest bargain I have ever offered and by all odds the best buy in Southeast Missouri, of which I have knowledge; authorities agree that better land does not exist than is found in Stoddard County, Southeast Missouri, between Little River and Castor River, in the Little River Drainage District. I own and offer an exceptionally well located tract of 7000 acres, 1000 acres in cultivation, 2000 acres deadened; 18 sets of improvements; 2 railroad shipping points and town sites, Peta and Tupertown, on the land; price, for prompt acceptance, $215,000; terms; no trades. Griff Glover, 5070 Waterman av., St. Louis. (c99)

FARMS FOR SALE

MISSOURI

YOUR LAST CHANCE

I believe unimproved land in the Little River Drainage District, now selling from $40 to $75, will not be obtainable below $125 before the close of 1918. I and my correspondents have listed over 20,000 acres of cut-over unimproved land, which we will sell at $45 to $60. Some of this land is as fine as there is in the entire district, and is today well worth double what we are selling it for; terms, one-fourth to one-half cash, balance to suit. Box A-13, Post-Dispatch. (c99)

A Good Farm at $10 An Acre

Bargain in Missouri Corn Land

I can show you clear profit of $15,000 in three years if you have $7840 cash to invest in 700 acres fertile drained corn land in famous Little River district of Southeast Missouri. Forty acres in cultivation, balance can be developed and sold so no further cash payments will be necessary. Big profit by clean-up in third year, or buyer can divide tract into four farms, sell three of them and retain fourth. All eyes are now turned toward Little River country. Note other ads and prices in this column. My price is $40 acre, and I furnish plan of development that is safe and sure. New frame house, two miles wire fencing, etc. Finished ditches and county roads on two sides of place. Railroad station 1½ miles distant. Box M-229, Post-Dispatch.

SMALL FERTILE MISSOURI FARM,
TOTAL INVESTMENT ONLY $25,
Payable $2.50 Monthly, Without Interest.

Highly productive land, capable in instances of producing $100 to $500 per acre in fruits, vegetables, etc. Within 3 miles of good town and railroad; close to 3 big markets. Oil seeping out in a dozen places throughout our tract; lead has been found pure enough to run into bullets; other valuable minerals in evidence. Well-known and successful Kansas City geologist predicts oil will be found in paying quantities in our district.

For every 1000 acres sold $10,000 will be deposited in Kansas City's largest national bank, every cent to be used in drilling a deep test well for oil, gas and minerals. The well and everything discovered will be owned exclusively by the small farm purchasers. We will be repaid by increase in value of our remaining lands. One of these small farms means a home and a competence for you. Discovery of an oil pool may mean a fortune. Our land has been inspected and accepted by several states, under their "Blue Sky laws." Send today for photographs, full information and letters from 36 well-pleased purchasers, who have made a careful personal inspection, and our bank references. Willis R. Munger, H-124, N. Y. Life Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

Bargains Direct From Owner

Farm—21 acres of smooth land on a gravel road, 1½ miles from town; 7 acres in cultivation, remainder in timber; improved with a 2-room loghouse, a log stable, 4 good frame poultry houses, a large frame brooder house with a cellar, and a cistern; price $750; $250 cash.

Farm—30 acres; a prettily located tract, part upland and part valley, 2½ miles from town, on rural delivery and within 200 yards of a public school; 25 acres in cultivation; 5 acres in timber; improved with a 3-room frame house, a medium-sized frame barn, a cistern, a few fruit trees and a large number of strawberry plants; price $1300; $550 cash.

Farm—90 acres, on a State highway now being made into a cross-state gravel road; also fronts the Frisco R. R. and has a freight point and flag stop at the farm; 50 acres in cultivation, of which about 15 acres is valley land, the remaining 40 acres is in timber; improved with a 5-room frame house, a log barn, a frame shed, smokehouse, cellar, cistern, stock pond, family orchard and other improvements; very cheap at $2700; $1200 cash.

Farm—90 acres of valley and bench land bordering on Boone's Creek for ½ mile; one of the best small farms in Franklin County; 80 acres in cultivation, the remaining 10 acres is heavily timbered; in a prosperous German-American neighborhood, 8 miles from Sullivan and 3 miles from a small inland town, on rural delivery, has telephone, and is within ½ mile of a public school; the improvements are practically new and consist of a 4-room frame house, a good medium-sized frame barn and several outbuildings; has a family orchard, a never-failing well near the door and a spring within 50 yards of the house; price $4000; $2000 cash.

In addition to the above, I have for sale a 208-acre farm on the Bourboise River and an adjoining river bottom farm of 257 acres that I shall be glad to describe upon request; all descriptions are guaranteed correct.
J. H. BENNETT, Sullivan, Mo.

DO NOT BUY STOCK
IN OIL DEVELOPMENT COMPANIES.

A few hundred or a few thousand shares, bought at 1 cent to $1 per share, gives you such an indescribably small share in the huge capitalization of the average company that your profits would amount to little or nothing even though a gusher is struck. Then there must not be forgotten the old familiar program so dear to the heart of the promoter and so well known to the American public of "freezing out" the minority stockholders before "the melon is cut."

Buy the land. Own it and everything under it. Profit by the enhancement which surrounding development brings. Drill on it, lease it to a big operating company, build on it, live on it, grow strawberries, grapes, fruit, vegetables, poultry. Do whatever you please with it. Let it be yours without any reservations, restrictions or assessments.

Oil is seeping out in a dozen places throughout my tract; lead has been found in chunks weighing 19 pounds and pure enough to run into bullets. Other valuable minerals are in evidence. Well known and successful Kansas City geologist predicts oil will be found in paying quantities.

For only $25, payable $2.50 monthly, you can buy a one-acre tract within 3 miles of good railroad town, (oil seepage in adjoining section) and a pro rata interest in 10 2000-foot well to be drilled. Acre-tract owners will own all of the wells and everything produced by them. You cannot possibly lose a cent. You are buying the land at its present actual value. One lucky strike among the 10 wells means a fortune. Land has been inspected and approved by authorities of several states, under their "Blue Sky laws."

Full information, bank references and letters from dozens of satisfied purchasers, who inspected, free. Send today. Willis R. Munger, H-106, N. Y. Life Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

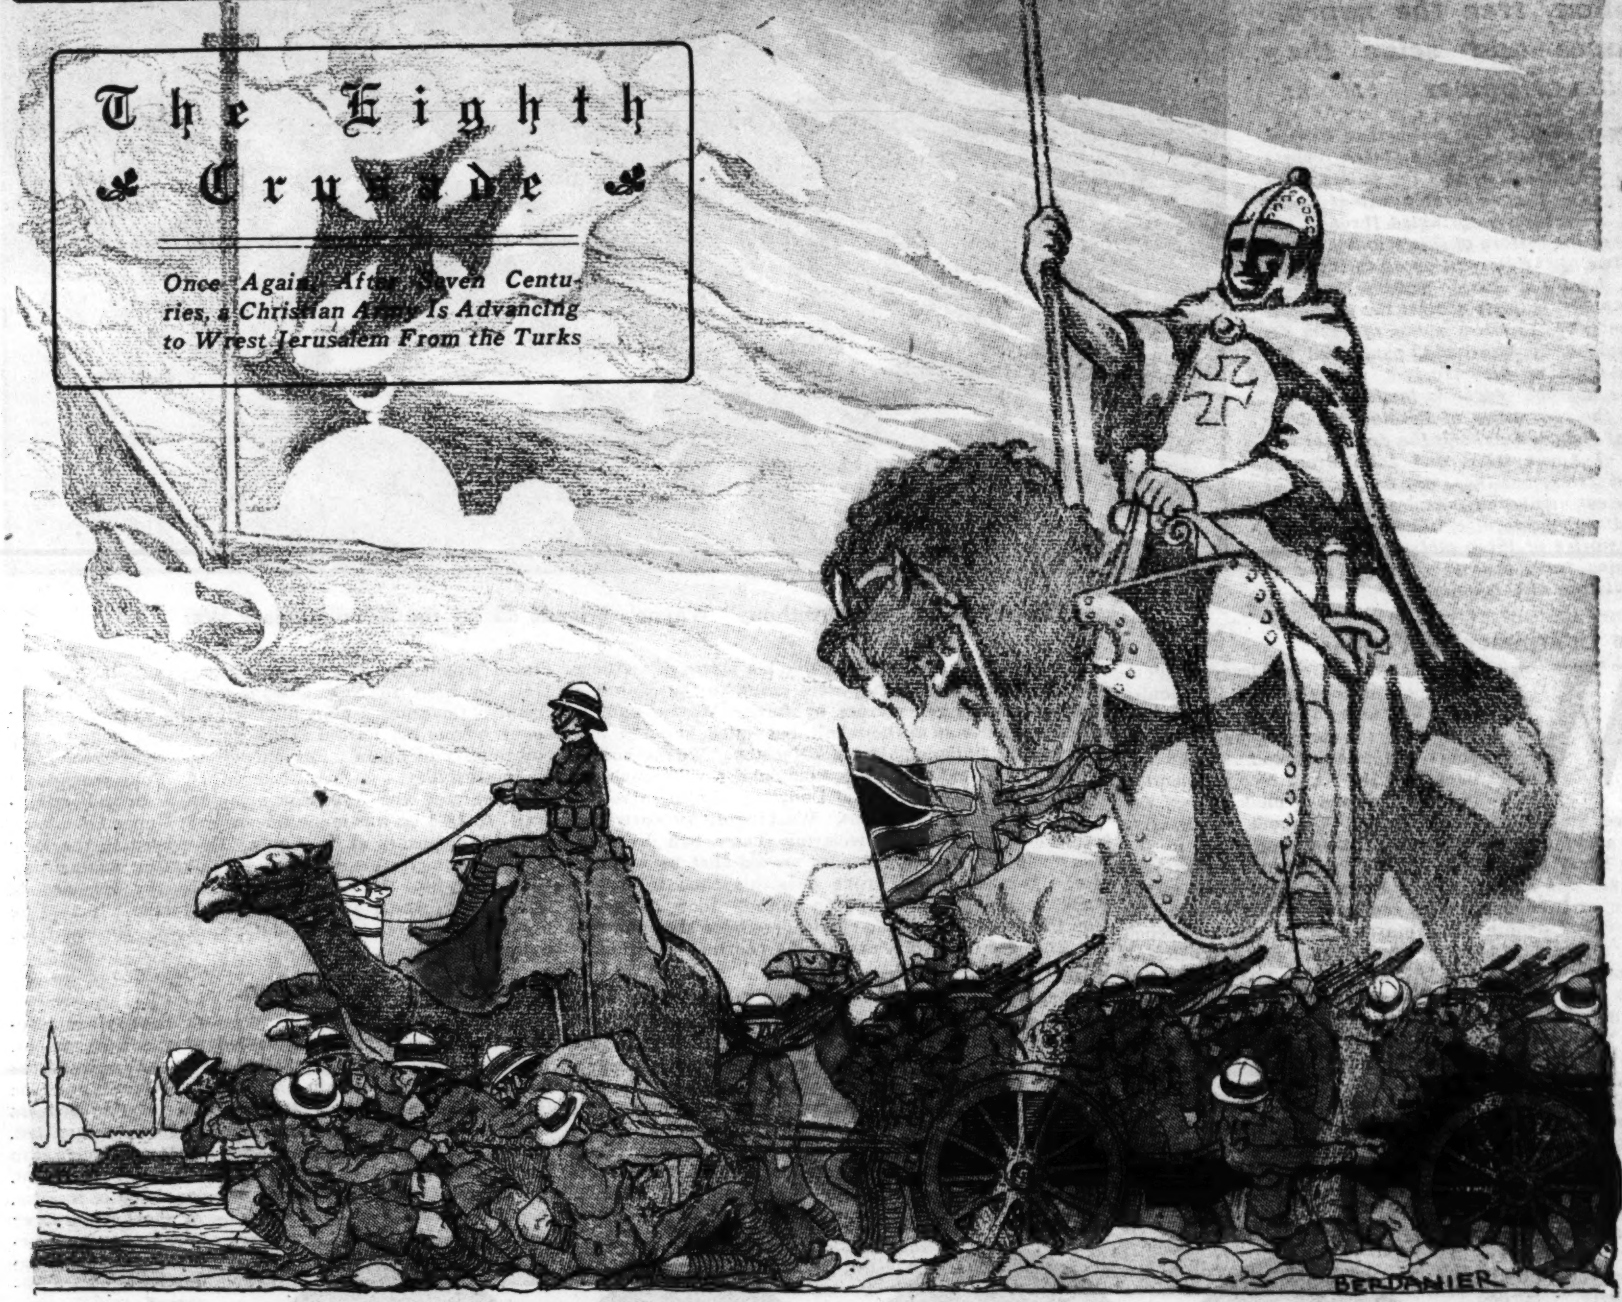
The Eighth Crusade

Once Again, After Seven Centuries, a Christian Army Is Advancing to Wrest Jerusalem From the Turks



British force from Egypt, composed largely of Australians and New Zealanders, pushing its way to the Holy City, fighting over ground where Saladin and Richard the Lion-Hearted crossed lances

THE feet of the Crusaders are once again resounding under the walls of Jerusalem. Once again, after a lapse of 700 years, a Christian army is advancing on the metropolis of Palestine and once again the Moslems are fighting desperately to retain the hallowed spot.

This time it is not a holy war, led by plumed and armored knights, nor is it an hysterical campaign of women and children driven onward by religious fervor and sustained by little else. The force now moving on Jerusalem is a well-organized, khaki-clad army of British "Anzacs," Australian and New Zealand veterans of the brilliant Gallipoli debacle.

How the world has changed since the last holy crusade, in 1219! At that time Australia and New Zealand were several hundred years from being discovered by Europe and Jerusalem was already several centuries old. Then the plumed knight and the Saracen fought hand to hand with mace and ax; today the youth of the New World is advancing on the octogenarian of cities preceded by aeroplanes scattering death from on high and accompanied by guns that kill accurately much further than a man can see, and other weapons that spout death to hundreds at a time.

It is generally assumed that the Moslems will not give up Jerusalem without the greatest sacrifices. The loss of this place would be almost as disastrous blow to Turkish prestige. With Bagdad in the hands of the British and Medina and Mecca, the other holy cities, occupied by the revolting Arabs, the capture of the last of the holy places may well be a death knell to Mohammedan sway in Asia.

The purpose of the British expedition toward Jerusalem has never been made clear. Of course, the further the Turks are driven away from the Suez Canal the safer will be the British route to India and the African colonies. The blow at Turkish prestige is also doubtless one of the considerations. Experts, however, believe that the Palestine offensive is but a portion of an extensive campaign involving a dash across Syria and a junction with the British in Mesopotamia and the Russians in Armenia, with the eventual purpose of moving on a solid front toward Constantinople from the south.

The great importance attached to the development of this extensive plan cannot be exaggerated. Its successful consummation might be the cause of winning the war for the allies. A few months ago it appeared as if the Russian and British efforts in Turkish Asia would come to naught. The British had suffered a great setback near Bagdad and the Slavs had used up so much effort in clearing Armenia of the Moslems that Turkey was enabled to reoccupy 30,000 square miles of Persia, a Russian sphere of influence. At one time it appeared as if Teheran would be lost to the Turks, which would have been a fatal blow to all of the Czar's aspirations in Persia.

Then energetic measures were taken by the entente. The peril was much greater than the world at large understood. Germany's dream of a middle Europe was about to be realized and Great Britain and Russia saw with dismay a wedge being driven through their spheres of influence in Asia Minor. Even the Persian Gulf, the source of Britain's oil supply, was threatened.

A great British force was sent into Persia to restore confidence, another large army was sent to relieve the disaster at Bagdad and the Russians started toward Kermanshah. All three moves have been successful to date. Should that Syrian expedition meet with success the entente will have little to fear from the central Powers below the Bosphorus and the corridor through Bulgaria which Germany built with human bodies will be in vain, for it will lead nowhere.

This eighth crusade—the present British drive toward the holiest of all holy cities—has come as a great surprise to Turkey as well as to the entente and neutral countries. For two years the English had been keeping a great army in Egypt for the defense of the Suez Canal, and it has been the general opinion that under no circumstances would the high command permit the moving of this force. From time to time there have been rumors of large German-led Turkish armies advancing toward the canal and every demand of strategy has insisted that

CONSPIRACIES AND ACTS OF TREASON OF OTHER DAYS IN THE UNITED STATES

American history replete with plots against the peace and security of the country — Several abortive attempts made to dismember the Union, free the negro slaves and seize the reins of power :: ::

CONSPIRACIES and acts of treason against the United States, reports of which occupy the public mind to a considerable extent these days, are liberally sprinkled through the pages of the history of this country. From the time of the Revolution up to the Civil War, hardly a decade passed that was not marked by plots against the peace and security of America, many of them accompanied by bloodshed, panic and the destruction of property.

The average reader is familiar enough with the conspiracy of Pontiac, the treason of Benedict Arnold, the dream of empire of Aaron Burr, and John Brown's insurrection, but these are only a few of the great number of conspiracies aimed at the dismemberment of the United States. The stories of these plots and their suppression form a most romantic part of the history of this country.

The Conspiracy of Pontiac.

WHILE the famous conspiracy of Pontiac took place when the 13 colonies were still under the rule of England, it was so far reaching and comprehensive and so threatened the existence of the white race in America, that no accounts of plots against the United States would be complete without it. Pontiac was a chief of the Ottawa Indians, who lived in the Ohio River Valley. During the French and Indian War Pontiac was an ally of the French and assisted in the defeat of Braddock. With the surrender of Montreal in 1760 Great Britain came into control of all the French forts along the Ohio and Mississippi. The English and colonial troops in the Ottawa country treated the Indians with a contempt that aroused the ire of Pontiac. During 1761-62 local plots to destroy the forts at Detroit and at Pittsburg failed, but in the following year Pontiac formed a coalition of most of the tribes from the Canadian boundary to the Gulf of Mexico. A second attack on the post at Detroit failed, but the garrisons at Sandusky, St. Joseph, Miami, Mackinac and a score of other forts were overwhelmed and massacred. During this time a reign of terror existed all along the Western frontier. Expedition after expedition was sent after the Indians in vain. Hundreds of pioneer families were massacred, their property burned and devastated and for a time it appeared as if all the whites beyond the Alleghenies would be lost.

In 1765 several of the tribes in the Pontiac coalition revolted from his domineering leadership. British and colonial punitive forces began making headway against him and on the advice of the French, who had secretly encouraged him, Pontiac agreed to a peace. In April, 1760, Pontiac was killed in a drunken fight at Cahokia, Ill., and his body was buried in St. Louis.

John Brown.

Benedict Arnold's Treason.

The story of Benedict Arnold's treason is well known. After serving with distinction and courage as a General of colonial forces in the Revolution he became angered at a rebuke administered to him by George Washington. Filled with a sense of wrong and longing for revenge, Arnold, in 1780, entered into treasonable negotiations with the British. He obtained command from Washington of the important post at West Point and offered to betray it into the hands of Gen. Clinton, the British commander at New York. The plot was discovered Sept. 23, through the capture of Maj. Andre, who had been sent by Clinton to confer with Arnold. Arnold, informed of the capture of the messenger, hastened to New York, where he received as a reward for his perfidy about $30,000 and a commission as Brigadier-General in the British army. He commanded the forces which burned New London, Conn., and led a pillaging expedition into Virginia. He went to England in 1781 and lived there the rest of his life, an object of contempt and the victim of extreme melancholia.

The Revolt of the Pennsylvania Brigade.

The winter of 1780-81 was one of great depression to the revolutionary forces. The soldiers had not been paid and there was distress on all sides. The Pennsylvania brigade of "Mad Anthony" Wayne was in winter quarters in Morristown, N. J., without shelter, ragged and most of the time without food. A spirit of insubordination arose among the men and spread rapidly. On Jan. 1, 1781, the men rushed from their huts, seized ammunition and arms and secured six pieces of artillery. They announced that they were going to the capital at Philadelphia to get redress by force. Wayne and his officers tried to stem the revolt, but failed, and 1300 men marched on Philadelphia via Princeton. Wayne accompanied them, but not as a commander. Through his good offices the Continental Congress agreed to relieve conditions among the troops. Washington violently protested against the step, declaring that a bad precedent was being established. Events proved that he was correct. Another revolt broke out, this time in a New Jersey regiment. Washington himself took the situation in hand. Two of the ringleaders were shot and that was the last of revolts among the continental troops.

The "State of Franklin."

Lying on the western slope of the Alleghenies, in North Carolina, is a section of country, "a world in itself," surrounded on three sides by the Appalachian range. Thus isolated, the settlers had, prior to the Revolution, established a Government of their own called the "Wautaga Government." In 1777 the territory was made into three counties by North Carolina—Washington, Greene and Sullivan. It is now in Eastern Tennessee. North Carolina exercised merely nominal control, but in 1785 even this became irksome and the inhabitants revolted. A Government with a Senate and House of Commons was organized, with John Sevier as Governor. A new commonwealth was christened the "State of Franklin." North Carolina resorted to force. Sevier tried to form an alliance with Georgia and other states, but failed. Sevier was finally arrested and arraigned for high treason. While on trial he was seized by partisans and taken back to "Franklin." Peaceful negotiations were entered into and the revolt came to an end. Sevier was elected to the Legislature and later to Congress. All marriages and other acts performed by the State of Franklin were validated.

Shays' Rebellion.

Shays' Rebellion was an uprising in Western Massachusetts, caused by the economic distress that followed the Revolutionary War. In August, 1786, delegates from 36 Massachusetts towns met in Worcester and protested against the unjust and heavy taxation levied by the State. A little later the Court of Pleas at Northampton was intimidated and prevented from issuing citations against debtors. Daniel Shays of Pelham was the leader of this agitation against law and order. In September the rioters prevented the sitting of the Supreme Court at Springfield, though a large force of militia had been called out. In January the next year Shays led a force of 1200 against the arsenal at Springfield and was badly defeated. Many of those who took part in the rebellion were excuted for treason. A little later the Legislature redressed most of the grievances that had been responsible for Shays' revolt.

The Conspiracy of Wilkinson.

James Wilkinson was a General who had served with distinction in the Revolutionary War. In 1784 he emigrated from Maryland to Lexington, Ky. On Aug. 22, 1787, he went to New Orleans and presented to the Spanish Governor a plan for taking the Transallegheny country from the United States and placing it under the sovereignty of Spain. For himself he received valuable trading privileges in Spanish territory. Four years later he re-entered the American army as a Brigadier-General. In 1805 he was made Governor of Upper Louisiana, with headquarters at St. Louis. He served in the War of 1812, but all this time he was plotting against the United States. He had entered into the schemes of Aaron Burr, whom he betrayed to Jefferson. In 1811 he had been tried for treason, but acquitted. He spent his declining years in Mexico.

The Whisky Insurrection.

In 1794 the inhabitants of Western Pennsylvania refused to pay an excise tax levied by the Government. Through lack of transportation their grain could be taken to market only in the form of whisky and the Government tax destroyed the profit. Excise officers were slain and other depredations were committed. Finally President Washington sent 15,000 militiamen into the district and the leaders of the insurrection fled. Several hundred were tried and two convicted of treason. A short while later the troops were removed, but no further violence followed.

The Conspiracy of Burr.

Aaron Burr, army commander, statesman and Vice President of the United States, is one of the most remarkable figures in American history. In 1804 Burr killed Alexander Hamilton in a duel. Sentiment against him was so greatly aroused that he went to the rapidly - growing West. There he fomented a conspiracy to unite the Mississippi Valley to the Spanish possessions in the Southwest and Mexico into one great empire, over which he was to rule. In the midst of his preparations he was arrested for treason, and, after a dramatic trial, acquitted. He then went to Europe and tried to interest England and then Napoleon in his dream of empire, but failed. He returned to New York and lived there in seclusion until his death, in 1836.

Slave Insurrections.

Of the many insurrections planned by the slaves in the South, the two most important were those led by Denmark Vesey and Nat Turner. In 1822 Vesey worked out a detailed plan for the occupation of Charleston and eventually all of the South. On a Sunday night all the whites were to be massacred, men, women and children. On the Saturday before, the officials of Charleston got an inkling of the plot. Practically all the negroes in the city were arrested and a confession was obtained. Vesey and six others were hanged.

Nat Turner's plot, also known as the Southhampton insurrection, occurred in August, 1831. Turner, a Virginia slave, believed that he had been divinely ordained to lead the slaves to freedom. The militia was called out, but before the insurrection had been suppressed more than 50 whites had been slain. Turner and several of the leaders of the revolt were excuted.

The Patriot War.

In 1837 French Canadians started a revolt against their British rulers. One Rensselaer, a New Yorker, organized a troop of "patriots" and crossed the Niagara River into Canada. In order to head off reinforcements the British crossed into American territory and seized cruisers have not yet been announced, but it is said they will be about 38,000 tons displacement, 850 feet in length and capable of attaining a speed of about 35 knots. The cost of each of them will be $21,983,531. In the case of the United States the limit in size of its ships has been fixed for all time, owing to the size of the Panama Canal, which cannot accommodate a vessel of more than 950 feet in length, 100 feet in width and drawing more than 36 feet of water.

The New American Navy in the Making

Contracts for five of the battle cruisers and six of the cruisers were let by the Navy Department just the other day. The total of the awards was $136,000,000. One of the battle cruisers is to be built at Quincy, Mass.; one at Camden, N. J.; two at Newport News and the fifth at a navy yard not yet designated, but probably at Philadelphia.

A further idea of the vast expenditures Uncle Sam is making towards building up his navy also can be gleaned from the fact that each of the new battleships is to cost $18,713,431, each of the new scout cruisers, $6,071,900; a destroyer, $1,525,314; fleet submarines, $1,685,525; coast submarine of the 800-ton type, $1,306,302; smaller type submarine, $806,302. In addition to the total expenditure of $544,666,113 for building alone, the ammunition for the 156 vessels contracted for will cost $43,834,775.

A dispute recently has arisen between the Navy Department and the editors of a technical magazine over what the latter term a grave defect in the designs for our battle cruisers. They point out that one-half of the boiler plant will be above the water line, or protective deck, and therefore liable to be shot away in battle. The department has been urged to substitute a geared drive for an electric drive, which would admit all the boilers being placed below the water line.

Naval men view with satisfaction that part of the building program which is to add to the American navy fast undersea craft of wide cruising radius. Up to the present none of our submarines have met these requirements. Those below the K type are primitive in many ways. They have insufficient sleeping and cooking accommodations for the crews, and there is no provision for re-purifying the air, with the result that life aboard one of them is vastly uncomfortable. None of them is equipped with deck guns. The subwater defenders of the Panama Canal are declared to be so slow as to be able to do little except lie in wait for a chance shot at a foe.

Submarine warfare developed a new type of vessel, which the United States, in common with other countries, has adopted with alacrity, and that is the submarine chaser—swift, armed patrol boats, large enough to engage a submarine on even terms when the latter is employing its deck gun, but too small for the undersea craft to use torpedoes against it effectively. Many of them now are under construction in this country, some for the navy and others for private individuals, who have announced that they shall turn the boats over to the Navy Department in time of need. The following description is given of how the United States navy would employ these little craft against submarines in time of war:

"We have developed the squadron of 12 boats as our unit. For ease of control each squadron is separated into two divisions of six boats, under the command of a division officer.

"The squadrons work in conjunction with agencies of detection afloat and ashore. When word is received at a base that an enemy craft has been detected passing into a certain zone, steps are at once taken to make sure the safety of adjacent harbors. While these harbor defense measures are being executed, a squadron of patrols is sent out, backed by one or two larger craft in reserve. The latter take up a position determined by the lay-out of the area, while the patrols spread out and sweep the zone until the enemy passes out of it or rises to the surface. If he passes out of the zone without showing himself, the patrols pursue into the new area as soon as they receive notice that he has crossed the boundary. There the sweeping is resumed. If the hostile rises and is within range he is sunk or forced to submerge. If he is not within range and has time to man his guns, a guard-ring is formed around him until the larger craft, which occupy successively pre-determined posts, come up and engage him upon satisfactory terms.

"Bases are established in positions convenient to the guarded sections and from these reliefs start out upon the expiration of the tour of duty of a squadron, so that during the presence of a raider the watch is unceasing."

The United States navy also has learned, among other things taught by the war, to appreciate the value of aircraft. While both the American army and navy are now lamentably weak in this branch of the service, sufficient appropriations recently have been made to enlarge it considerably. One naval writer recently pointed out that little Bulgaria, with an area somewhat larger than Maine and a population somewhat less than Massachusetts, has more than 300 aeroplanes and more than 100 aviators, while the United States army and navy together have fewer than 100 aeroplanes and could hardly muster 50 aviators in an emergency.

Rear Admiral Peary recently declared that for coastal defense purposes the United States should have a minimum of no fewer than 2000 seaplanes ready for duty on the Atlantic coast and an equal number on the Pacific, and that 5000 on each coast would be better. He proposed an aerial coast patrol which calls for a series of seaplane stations 100 miles or less apart along our entire coast, from Eastport to Brownsville and from San Diego to Cape Flattery. In peace times the seaplanes would be engaged in training; in the practice of spotting submarines and mines, dropping bombs, recognizing ships, scouting for ships in distress, derelicts or any other accident of sea or shore. In time of war they would form a continuous flying cordon around the country, to detect and warn of the approach of any kind of craft, with an inner line scouring the sea continuously for submarines and mines. In short, they would provide a national "burglar alarm."

It has been estimated by Rear Admiral Peary that 1000 seaplanes along the Atlantic coast would double the efficiency of the naval defense and increase the value of our coast protection 200 to 300 per cent.

Many of the important devices of modern warfare are of American invention. It was America which gave birth to the submarine, and it was in America that the first armor-clad fighting ship with revolving turret was built, the revolving turret of the old iron-clad Monitor still being used in principle on the great fighting ships of today. An American invented the aeroplane and the torpedo, and more recently it was an American naval officer who evolved the scheme of utilizing smoke screens from destroyers to hide the main fleet from the enemy in battle. It is a lamentable fact that here, in the home of these inventions, we should be so far behind in under-water navigation, in aeronautics and in other things which go to make up preparedness, but the people, speaking through Congress, seem to have taken the stand that we shall trail behind other nations no longer.

When England Tried to Blockade America

THE last blockade conducted by the British Fleet was during the American War in 1812. The United States possessed a navy which the Kaiser would have regarded as "contemptible," it was, indeed, very small, whereas the British Fleet was exceedingly large. British men-of-war were able to blockade the American coast in overwhelming force and cut off commerce. But England suffered sadly from the privateers which the Americans fitted out; these commerce destroyers broke out of port, crossed the Atlantic, and took heavy toll of British shipping off British and Irish ports. "Wherever on the ocean the British merchantman sailed, thither the American privateers followed." The losses of vessels soon began to mount up, and then, indeed, the British people took to asking: "What is the Navy Doing?" Colonel Roosevelt has told the story of the war on British commerce by these fast-sailing and formidable American vessels.

The Irish Sea and the Irish Channel were among their favorite cruising grounds; they circled Scotland & Ireland; one of them ransomed a Scottish town. The Chasseur, of Baltimore, commanded by Thomas Boyle, cruised for three months off the coast of England, taking prize after prize, and in derision sent in, to be posted at Lloyd's, a proclamation of blockade of the coast of the United Kingdom.

In September, 1814, the merchants of Glasgow, Liverpool, and Bristol held meetings and complained bitterly to the British Government of the damages inflicted on them. The Liverpool meeting recited that some ports, particularly Milford, were under actual blockade. . . The rates of insurance rose to an unprecedented height. . . . The Secretary of the Admiralty, Mr. Croker, was forced to admit the havoc wrought even in the Irish and Bristol channels, and could only respond that if the merchantmen would never sail except under convoy of a sufficient number of men-of-war (on which the Admiralty tried to insist), they would be safe. Such a statement was equivalent to admission that no unguarded ship could safely go from one British port to another, and it sufficed to explain why the rate of insurance on vessels had gradually risen to double the rate which had prevailed during the great war with France.

The success of these frigates was achieved when this country had on blockade duty on the American coast a force relatively much greater, in proportion to the opposing fleet, than we possess today. The British Fleet was at the zenith of its reputation; it had had about twenty years' experience in dealing with commerce raiders; and yet week by week the toll of losses rose. The depredations continued down to the end of the war. In those days the enemy had not the advantage of steam. It was suggested in pre-war days that the modern commerce destroyer would soon be driven by want of coal and food to abandon her career, and that steam was therefore no benefit to an enemy bent on commerce destruction. That theory has been exploded by the Emden and other German ships.

a steamer belonging to the patriots. The incident caused complications between the United States and England that required several months to straighten out. Rensselaer was later arrested by United States authorities, and a month later English troops suppressed the revolt in Canada.

Dorr's Rebellion.

In 1833 Thomas W. Dorr, an attorney of Providence, R. I., attempted to have a law passed in the State extending the franchise to other than property owners. The proposal was defeated, by fraudulent means, Dorr declared. He ordered an election held and was chosen Governor by his partisans. On May 3 Dorr attempted to organize his government and was resisted by State troops. The State was put under martial law and Federal troops were called in. Dorr fled from the State, but later returned and was convicted of treason. Several years later he was pardoned.

Conspiracy of John Brown.

The famous plot of John Brown is so well known that little need be said about it. In [illegible]58 the Kansan conceived the idea of seizing a strong position in the mountains of Virginia, whence slave-liberation forays could be made into the surrounding territory. On Oct. 16, 1859, with 19 followers, nine of whom were negroes, Brown seized the arsenal at Harper's Ferry. Two days later he was wounded and captured. He was tried for high treason, convicted and hanged on Dec. 2, at Charleston, W. Va.

"Those Terrible Ear Noises Have Stopped"

"Those terrible Noises have stopped" is what hundreds of letters are telling me. You remember that on Feb. 25 I offered 300 Treatments for Head Noises free, to St. Louis Post-Dispatch readers, and this is the happy result.

Head Noises! What a picture of intolerable suffering these words bring to mind. Reader, if you have Head Noises, I know well that no words of mine can describe the weary misery. But you are the one to appreciate the blessed relief in the words "My Head Noises have stopped," and these are the words which every day's mail brings me.

The joy and gratitude of the people who received the 300 free treatments offered in this paper last month has been so great and their appeals for friends so urgent that I am going to offer again

200 Treatments Free

Think what it would mean to no longer suffer with these intolerable, roaring noises—the whistling—the escaping steam—the hum of insects—the buzzing—all the weary catalogue of sounds, which at times make you feel that they must stop, or you will go insane. Perhaps, too, you hearing is beginning to fail, but whether it has or not, you know in your heart of hearts that it will go and the voice of science warns you in unmistakable terms. If you have Head Noises, sooner or later, you will be deaf.

Here is your opportunity. Send for one of my Free Treatments and see my method which has cured hundreds in just your condition. Just drop me a note or a post card giving your full name and address. You will never regret it.

This offer and talk is for YOU. Perhaps you have tried other things and become discouraged. Perhaps you have been told there is no help. Perhaps you are carelessly neglecting your case from day to day, thinking it will get well of itself.

Make just this small effort. Send for one of my free treatments. It won't cost you a penny. See this successful new treatment and the method which has cured many, many people with Head Noises just like yours.

To End Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness and head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can be successfully treated at home by an internal remedy that in many instances has effected a complete cure after all else has failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear a watch tick have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear.

Therefore, if you know some one who is troubled with head noises or catarrh, or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them, and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home, and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength), about 75c worth. Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 ozs. of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

The first dose should begin to relieve the distressing head noises, headache, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., while the hearing rapidly returns as the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell and mucus dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison, and which are often entirely overcome by this efficacious treatment. Nearly ninety per cent of all ear troubles are said to be directly caused by catarrh, therefore there must be many people whose hearing can be restored by this simple home treatment.

Every person who is troubled with head noises, catarrhal deafness or catarrh in any form should give this prescription a trial.

Rheumatism
A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

The American Experiences of Count Zeppelin ✤ His Part in the Civil War and the Birth of the Dirigible Idea

First balloon ascension made by young German in St. Paul, Minn., gave him the idea for the modern air liner—Told in reminiscences printed three years ago of his meeting with Lincoln and other notable figures and his many daring adventures while in the United States :: :: ::

AN interesting phase of the life of the late Count Zeppelin has to do with his American experiences. Three years ago the famous inventor of the rigid dirigible published in Der Greif, a magazine in Berlin, a series of the reminiscences of his youth, a large part of which was devoted to his connection with the Union army in the Civil War as German military observer.

But the war experiences of the Count in the United States are probably of no greater interest than his early attempts at flying, which he undertook in this country. The first flight ever made by him was undertaken in St. Paul, Minn. Writing of this experience, he said:

"I made my first balloon ascension in St. Paul, and not on the Civil War firing line, as has been frequently stated. A Major of the Union army, whose name I have forgotten, was there and had a captive balloon. I wanted a real sensation and arranged for the use of the bag. He was to cut the ropes and let me make a long flight after I had got to the limit.

"I bought all the spare gas the St. Paul gas works would let me have and was able to go up several hundred feet, but the gas was of so poor a quality that I was unable to make a long flight. YET WHILE I WAS ABOVE ST. PAUL I HAD MY FIRST IDEA OF AERIAL NAVIGATION IMPRESSED UPON ME AND IT WAS THERE THAT THE FIRST IDEA OF MY ZEPPELINS CAME TO ME."

This was in 1865, when the Count was only 29 years old. In his reminiscences Zeppelin told in a graphic style, not untouched by humor, of his experiences with the army of the Potomac, his visit to President Lincoln and his contact with other notable figures in that period of American history. Of his call on Abraham Lincoln he wrote:

"Through the good offices of the Prussian Minister an audience with the President was arranged. I solemnly donned my frock coat and high hat, but found no special pomp attached to the ceremony. At the White House I was taken to the room where the President worked. From behind the writing table a tall, lean form rose, with a large head, long, unkempt hair and beard and strikingly projecting cheek bones, but shrewd, kindly eyes. During my short talk with the President, his secretary, Reed, sat on the writing table, swinging his feet rhythmically to and fro—they stuck far out of his trouser legs and were incased in a pair of shoes resembling moccasins.

"President Lincoln expressed himself as much pleased at my coming and in my plans and wished me success in the studies I wished to make. Before the audience had been granted the President had instituted inquiries concerning me. Through the kindness of the Prussian Minister I am in possession of a valuable autograph communication from Lincoln to the Secretary of State and Secretary of War Stanton, asking whether the inquiries set on foot concerning me justified the granting of a pass. Later I received this pass, which gave me the privilege of movement within all the lines of the Union army. During the course of the war a similar privilege was extended to only three other men—the Duke of Joinville, the Duke of Chatres and the Count of Paris."

After the audience with the President, Zeppelin proceeded to the headquarters of the Union army at Falmouth with a letter of introduction to Gen. Hooker. He found great difficulty in getting the Federal officers to understand his imperfect English, but finally he found a Swedish attache who acted as an interpreter. On the first day after his arrival there was heard the roar of cannon from the Rapahannock and he rode in that direction. In a short time he was in the midst of shell fire—his first baptism of fire.

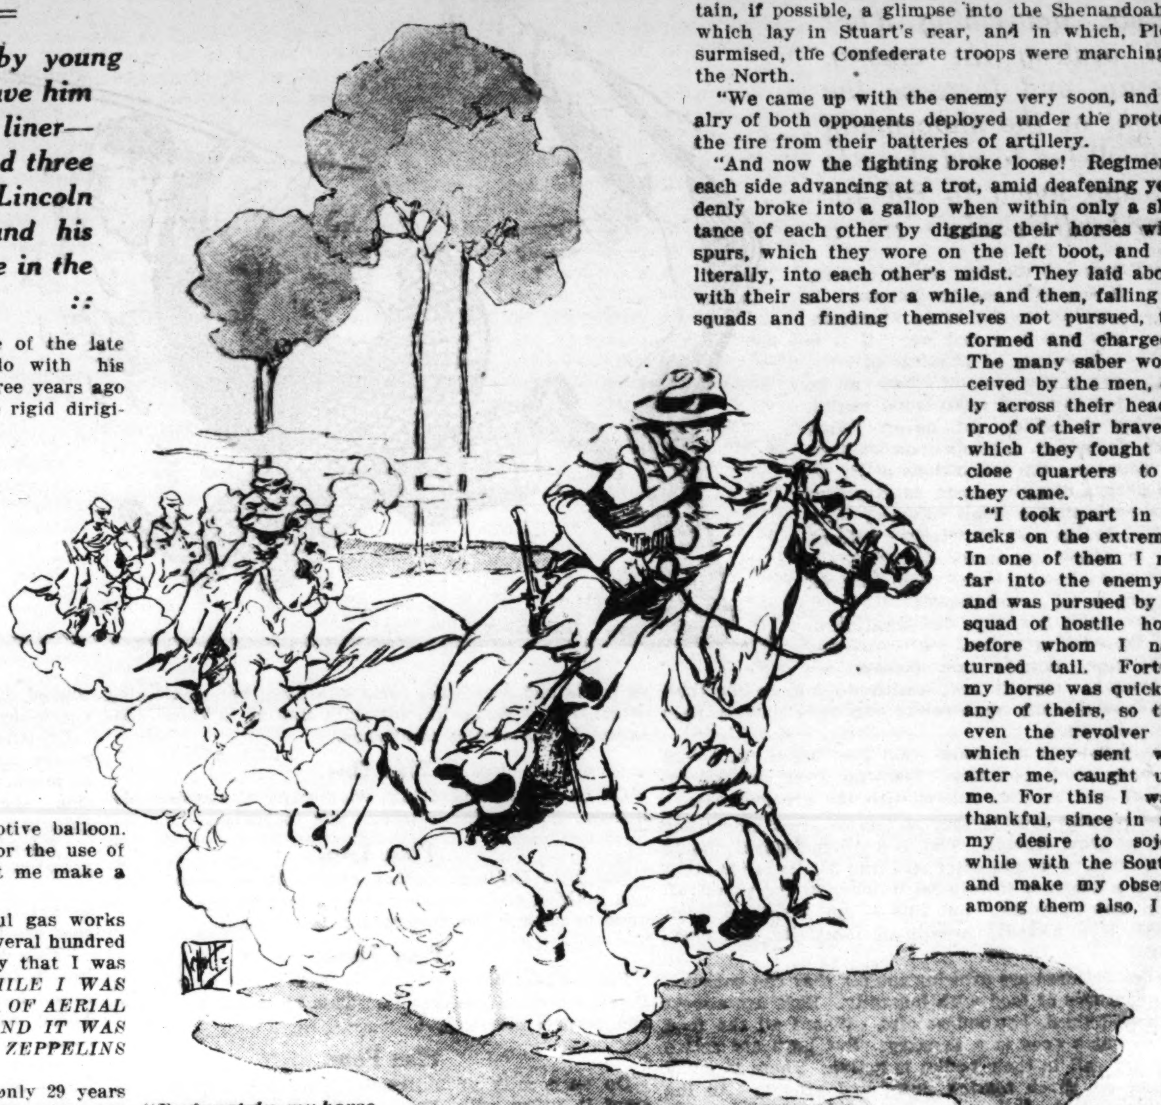
"After a stiff march we arrived next afternoon at Fairfax Courthouse, where we learned that the enemy was already at Manassas Gap, to the northwest, and that instructions were to be given to Gen. Pleasanton of the cavalry, who was about 20 miles away, at Aldie, to undertake a reconnaissance in force in order to obtain more exact information concerning the Confederates. The officer to whom the transmission of this command to Pleasanton was intrusted received as escort a squad of cavalry under another officer. I asked permission to accompany them, and it was granted.

"We did not leave until todard evening. Darkness soon overtook us. As we threaded our way through the dense forest, along a scarcely perceptible trail, we could not even see our hands before our eyes. We were obliged to leave our horses to pick a way through the blackness, and it was not long before we realized that they were perfectly well able to do it.

"After riding a short distance we came to a very difficult place. Twigs slapped us in the face, we went stumbling along over trunks torn up by the roots, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that our horses could keep going.

"When we returned the same way two days later we found out what had been the matter. In the darkness we had come upon a barricade thrown squarely across the road by the enemy. So elaborate was it that had we run against it in the daytime we should never have deemed it possible to scramble through it on horseback. In fact, when we came upon it on our return, we rode around it.



"Fortunately, my horse was quicker than any of theirs, so that not even the revolver shots which they sent whizzing after me, caught up with me."

"About 3 o'clock in the morning we reached Aldie, which was strongly occupied by the forces of Gen. Pleasanton. The officer who was bringing over the order to that General could not find an Adjutant for several hours. At last he found one lying asleep, booted and spurred, on a bed with another officer. Both then went to the General, and I threw myself down on the bed where the Adjutant had lain and slept until about 4 o'clock, when Pleasanton's troops, which had been aroused immediately after the receipt of the order, started off.

"He informed me that he was in touch with the enemy's cavalry under the command of Gen. Stuart, formerly in the service of Austria, who had become famous for his long and perilous raids. Stuart, I learned, was occupyinug Ashby's Gap, and Pleasanton added that he meant to attack the Southern leader in order to obtain, if possible, a glimpse into the Shenandoah Valley, which lay in Stuart's rear, and in which, Pleasanton surmised, the Confederate troops were marching toward the North.

COUNT FERDINAND ZEPPELIN.

"We came up with the enemy very soon, and the cavalry of both opponents deployed under the protection of the fire from their batteries of artillery.

"And now the fighting broke loose! Regiments from each side advancing at a trot, amid deafening yells, suddenly broke into a gallop when within only a short distance of each other by digging their horses with their spurs, which they wore on the left boot, and charged, literally, into each other's midst. They laid about them with their sabers for a while, and then, falling back in squads and finding themselves not pursued, they reformed and charged again. The many saber wounds received by the men, especially across their heads, were proof of their bravery, with which they fought and the close quarters to which they came.

"I took part in the attacks on the extreme right. In one of them I rode too far into the enemy's lines and was pursued by a whole squad of hostile horsemen, before whom I naturally turned tail. Fortunately, my horse was quicker than any of theirs, so that not even the revolver bullets, which they sent whizzing after me, caught up with me. For this I was duly thankful, since in spite of my desire to sojourn a while with the Southerners and make my observations among them also, I thought it probable that my pursuers, if they captured me, would shoot me on the spot or string me up to a tree, in spite of the fact that I had not drawn by saber against them and carried secretly in my pocket a cordial letter of introduction to Gen. Lee from his charming niece, whom I had met in Philadelphia.

"Gen. Pleasanton, with his staff, rode out to a depression parallel to the position in question in order to reconnoiter and pick out a good place for fording the river. He had sent away some of his officers with various messages and now, when he wished to send another down the river in order to find a ford, those remaining by his side were keeping themselves somewhat in the background. Noticing his predicament, I took it upon myself to carry out his wish. This was another instance of my unfortunate lack of control over my lust for adventure and the military ardor which had been awakened in me by my experience while with the Federal army."

Zeppelin met many pleasant and efficient officers. They had little to say about army operations, but they had a stock of personal experiences and witty stories. One of these stories impressed the Count so that after a lapse of 50 years he included it in his reminiscences:

> Two spies had been captured on the banks of the Rapahannock. One was a Yankee and the other a German. They were condemned to be hanged to the branch of a tree protruding out over the river, since such a death would save their executioners the trouble of burying them, it being merely necessary to saw away the branch and let the two bodies flop into the water.
> The Yankee's turn came first. In his pocket he still had a $5 bill, and he pressed this into the hangman's hand with the whispered words: "For God's sake take a bad rope!"
> The hangman did so. As soon as the Yankee was strung up the rotten rope broke, the condemned man fell into the water, and, as he was a good swimmer, he managed to reach the opposite bank, which was occupied by his comrades, the enemy.
> But the German, when he saw what had happened, turned to the hangman and begged him to use a strong rope.
> "I can't swim," he explained.

Zeppelin's war experiences apparently only served to whet his appetite for adventure. He swam across the Niagara River below the American falls to get a full view of the circle of the rainbow of the mist.

At Buffalo a German family gave him a jug of beer.

"It was heavy stuff. I wasn't accustomed to it, and it made my knees so wobbly that I had to sit down on a sofa to rest," he said. "An American observing my condition, laughed in my face, and then impudently walked off with my umbrella.

"I made a trip over the lakes and flirted with some beautiful American girls, who were as anxious to get acquainted with me as I was with them. They finally broke the ice my flipping apple seeds into my face, and then we had a jolly talk. I made a brief stay at Pere Marquette, and incidentally the city of Superior, Wis., might have been named for me, as some of the people suggested changing it in my honor.

"I suffered great hardships for 21 days, making my way through the dense woods from Superior to St. Paul, accompanied by two Russians and an Indian halfbreed. On the way I passed a camp where the Chippewas were engaged in a war dance in honor of a victorious fight with the Sioux."

The Honors of Defeat

manded. "He is growing perfectly worthless."

It was Julia's opinion that her mother exhibited a deplorable weakness in handling Jimmy. His stubborn indolence was being indulged and fostered. It was all very well for her mother to say that the constant struggle of wills tired her, that she had rather do things herself than bring it about. But the boy would become exactly like his father—and to Julia's mind there was no worse comparison.

Her conception of its full import might have been enhanced had she been present to hear what passed between Mr. Stanton and his wife that night.

There was no immediate need for settling the matter. But by the time evening had come, she had decided that anticipation was a useless prolonging of her dread. So, when the two children had gone to bed, and she and her husband were in their room together, she ventured what she had to say.

Once, long ago, when she had intervened to save Jimmy from a punishment altogether disproportionate to any offense a 4-year-old baby could be capable of, there had been a scene almost equal to this one. She had conquered then, and she did so now. Yet, when it was over, when her husband had fallen into the heavy sleep following the exhaustion of anger, she lay awake until sunrise, dizzy with fatigue, quivering with nervousness, heartsick with recognition of the days and years before her. She crept out of bed at the first light and went about preparing breakfast.

Julia cast anxious looks at her father's face as he came to the table and ate in grim silence. "What did he say?" she asked of her mother as soon as they were alone. Mrs. Stanton spared her the whole truth—which she herself was loath to recall.

"I think he will let you do it," she answered.

The girl's uneasy face lighted with satisfaction. "I am so glad," she exclaimed. "You are the greatest one for managing things." She threw her arms about her mother's neck and kissed the hollow cheek with facile gratitude. "Was he fearfully cross?"

"Yes," said her mother. "He was." The very lightness of the thanks told her how little her ordeal had really been appreciated. And it seemed only fair that the girl should realize something of what had been met for her sake.

"Poor mother! I wish you hadn't had to do it. But father isn't so bad, at heart."

"Then why didn't you go to him and save me?" came the abrupt demand. Julia stared back at her in surprise over a peevishness she felt to be unjustified.

"It seems to me you are cross, too," she said reprovingly.

Mrs. Stanton turned away and put down her dust cloth. "You can finish the work today," she said. And before her daughter had quite grasped what was happening, she had gone from the kitchen and locked herself into her room.

It was a room directly under the roof, and the sun beat down upon the shingles, making it insufferably hot. But all through the day she lay there where she had thrown herself upon the bed, unaware of the stifling atmosphere, of anything save the struggle going on within her own soul. At first there came to her frantic ideas that she would endure it no longer, that she would end it all by going away—going anywhere; back to her own people, perhaps. She had not seen them since the marriage she had made so much against their wishes. But she would return to them, confessing her mistake. Her husband could do quite as well without her. He could have a stronger woman for the work and be better satisfied. As for Julia and the boy—she was nothing to them, except when they wanted something done. She had made a miserable, heart-breaking failure of everything. There were no tears in the eyes that stared at the patchwork quilt across the foot of the bed. They were wide open, hot and vacant.

But gradually the violence of rebellion began to pass away, and the sense of duty which had always impelled and sustained her, came in its stead. Toward her husband she was conscious of no obligation. Years since she had given him manifold more than he deserved. She could have left him today with no pang of any sort save a memory of the hopes he had once represented. And the boy? He, too, was fast becoming the self-sufficing, self-centered male. She recognized that he had little need of her, though the maternal instinct still persisted and gave that very fact the power to hurt her cruelly.

But Julia—she was a woman, requiring the help and protection which only another woman could give. And she was sincerely fond of her mother. Selfish, perhaps, she was. But what young creature was not selfish? Mrs. Stanton had a dim perception that it was part of the law of self-preservation, of race preservation. The young must make use of the old. They could not have them clinging to them, hampering their development, their actions. The unconscious attitude which was Julia's now had once been her own toward her parents. She had neither gift nor training for philosophy—other than of that dull, unreasoned sort which enabled her to bear the burdens of the day. Yet she felt that the girl was fully entitled to her chance and to all that a mother could do to further it. Responsibility for her future lay with those who had brought her into the world; and it was for them, at almost any cost, to help her obtain the better things she desired.

But the years ahead! She covered her eyes with her hands as if to hide the vision of them that came upon her. It was not that from henceforth she must take upon herself a larger share than ever of the already too heavy work. It was the loneliness, the isolation. And more terrible even than this, the knowledge that she would be parting forever from the daughter, who, from babyhood until now, had always been so close.

For though Julia might perhaps return—though she might not find work and a home of her own elsewhere, as she frankly hoped to do—there was none the less the certainty that she could never again see her mother as she saw her now. She would have new standards and criterions, she would be educated so far above her parents that to look down upon them would be inevitable. However real her intentions of faithfulness, she would be alienated, estranged. Her affection would be tinged with pity and condescension at the best. The pain of the thought seemed almost unendurable; yet gradually Mrs. Stanton brought herself to accept it with the silent fortitude in which countless mothers have made the same unrecognized, unglorified sacrifice.

At the noon hour Julia came to the door and tried to open it.

"Dinner is ready, mother. Are you coming down?" she asked.

"No—I won't be down," Mrs. Stanton answered. She felt that she must have more time to make certain of her self-mastery.

"You are not sick, are you?" It was a voice of anxiety and a shade of self-reproach.

"I've a headache," she said, quite truthfully.

"Can't I do something for it?"

"No—it will be better after a while."

Mr. Stanton called peremptorily from the foot of the stairs and Julia went with reluctance. It was the first time she had known such a thing to happen, and it disturbed her. Her mother had always gone on with the work, hiding as best she could that anything was wrong. She had a sudden unpleasant perception of what the home would be if both her parents were to indulge their humors unrestrained.

And when Mrs. Stanton came downstairs toward evening the girl was so much more than ordinarily kind and thoughtful that her attentions brought tears, once or twice, where neglect could no longer do so.

"I suppose you feel very badly because I want to go away," Julia said wistfully, as they sat together that night. Mrs. Stanton made no useless pretense of denying it.

"But I think you ought to go," she answered—"that you have the right."

"I think I have, too," the girl spoke in deep earnestness. "Why should I be obliged to stay here and always live such a life as this, just because you once married father?" It was the substance of the reasoning upon which her mother had based her own decision. And the logic was irrefutable, relentless and unpitying though it might be, as all the logic of youth.

For the time being Julia had even less affection for her father than heretofore.

But gradually, as the summer went on, there came a change. Her mother watched it with a gnawing jealousy and sense of injustice. Yet she resolutely made no sign.

Not long after the day when she had obtained his more than unwilling consent to their daughter's plans, it had begun to be observable that he was not only reconciling himself to them, but taking a certain amount of interest. Though he still held his wife in marked disfavor because of her intervention and the braving of his opinion that it had entailed, he was unusually amiable with the girl herself. And to the neighbors he spoke with pride of the fact that he was going to send his daughter to college. It raised him to a plane above the men about him who kept their children at home upon the farms. It gave him importance in the community. The idea might have been his own from the outset, so entirely did he arrogate to himself all credit.

"Father has really been very good about it, has he not?" she said to her mother, who was bending over the sewing machine making the dress in which her daughter was to go from her. That the assent was quite without warmth brought a mild reproach. "Don't you think, mother dear, that you are sometimes a little hard on father?" she propounded. "I am afraid you don't understand him altogether."

"It was I who got you your wish," came the reminder in a tone that was hard with suppressed pain, though the words were, in truth, a plea for appreciation.

"I know you did, of course," Julia conceded readily, trying to be impartial. "And I am grateful, very grateful. But I can't help thinking that father deserves some credit, too."

Mrs. Stanton did not point out that no single real hardship would fall upon her husband, no single real sacrifice have to be made by him, that all must be met by herself alone. Julia would only think her complaining and unfair. And above everything else she wished to keep the girl's good opinion. For the day was coming near that was to take her out into a world where love of her mother might prove a safeguard and defense.

And when at last it arrived, Julia and her father drove to the railroad station by themselves. There was only the buggy and two of them, with the satchels, filled it so completely that there was no room for another.

Mrs. Stanton said good-by at the gate. Into her parting words she put all the lingering born of a knowledge that she might never see her child again—or that, if she did, it would be as one who was almost a stranger, who would be removed from her to a distance she could not hope to make less. And the girl clung to her neck, sobbing. But in a moment more she had taken her seat beside her father. She leaned out for a last kiss, smiling bravely to give courage to the commonplace, faded little woman from whom radiated none of her own sense of adventure and romance.

"I feel like a heroine," she said, "leaving you all and going out alone into life."

The light of the future was in her eyes. And into her mother's eyes, too, came an answering light—that of the fires of the soul in which self has been burned quite away.

Then she turned and went back to her work.

Newsboy at 14, Head of $25,000,000 Corporation at 41

MATTHEW C. BRUSH, recently elected president of the Boston Elevated Railroad, a $25,000,000 corporation, at the age of 41, with a salary of $36,000 a year, was a newsboy when he was 14 years old. He was born in Stillwater, Minn., and by the time he was 22 had worked his way though the Armour Institute and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, selling papers, working as an office boy and clerking on Great Lakes steamers in the summer time.

It was while he was acting as purser on the lakes that John D. Rockefeller recommended him to James J. Hill for a job. As Mr. Brush tells the story, he was standing behind the purser's window one day when an elderly man asked some questions—some rather impertinent ones about the company, the boats, his duties, his family and himself.

"I just smiled at the old gentleman, didn't lose my temper, and answered everything I felt it proper to answer. In fact, I treated him as I thought every passenger should be treated by an officer of the boat. Some time afterward I received a letter from James J. Hill offering me a position. I had been recommended to him by John D. Rockefeller—who was the old gentleman who had questioned me. I hadn't, of course, recognized him."

Brush went to work for the Union Pacific as an apprentice in the shops at 20 cents an hour. Soon he became roundhouse foreman and a little later general foreman of the shops. Later he went to the Rock Island system and was placed in charge of all their shops and roundhouses in Western Kansas.

Brush came East in 1904 as assistant to the president of the Boston Suburban Electric Co., which at that time controlled nine electric traction companies, a gas company and two amusement parks. Within eight months he became general manager of the corporation and a short while later was elected vice president. Under his management the company was placed on a sound financial basis.

In 1909 he resigned to become manager of the Buffalo Street Railway Co., which had 202 miles of interurban trolleys, 50 miles of steam road and 14 steamers plying on the Great Lakes. After a short time he returned to New England as assistant to the vice president of the Boston Elevated. Soon he became chairman of the Efficiency Committee, second vice president, then vice president and finally, after seven years' service with the company, president.

There is nothing reserved or dignified about Brush. He meets section hands with the same cordiality that he extends to bank presidents. It is said that he makes a friend of every person he comes in contact with.

He talks in a straightforward, man to man fashion. In this way he squelched an impending strike among the street car employes some years ago simply by arguing the question to a finish with W. D. Mahon, head of the National Carmen's Union—just the two of them in his office, in a session that lasted 18 1-2 consecutive hours. Says Brush:

"I said to Mahon, 'We're here, locked in my office. There is no stenographer concealed anywhere. No dictagraph. Nobody to listen. Curtains are drawn. Now, before we do anything, I've got to know you and you've got to know me. You tell me all about yourself and I'll tell you all about myself.'

"I found out that he was square; he found out that I am. He was on the level to the very end, when the difficulties were adjusted to the satisfaction of all. That settled the strike—just being on the level."

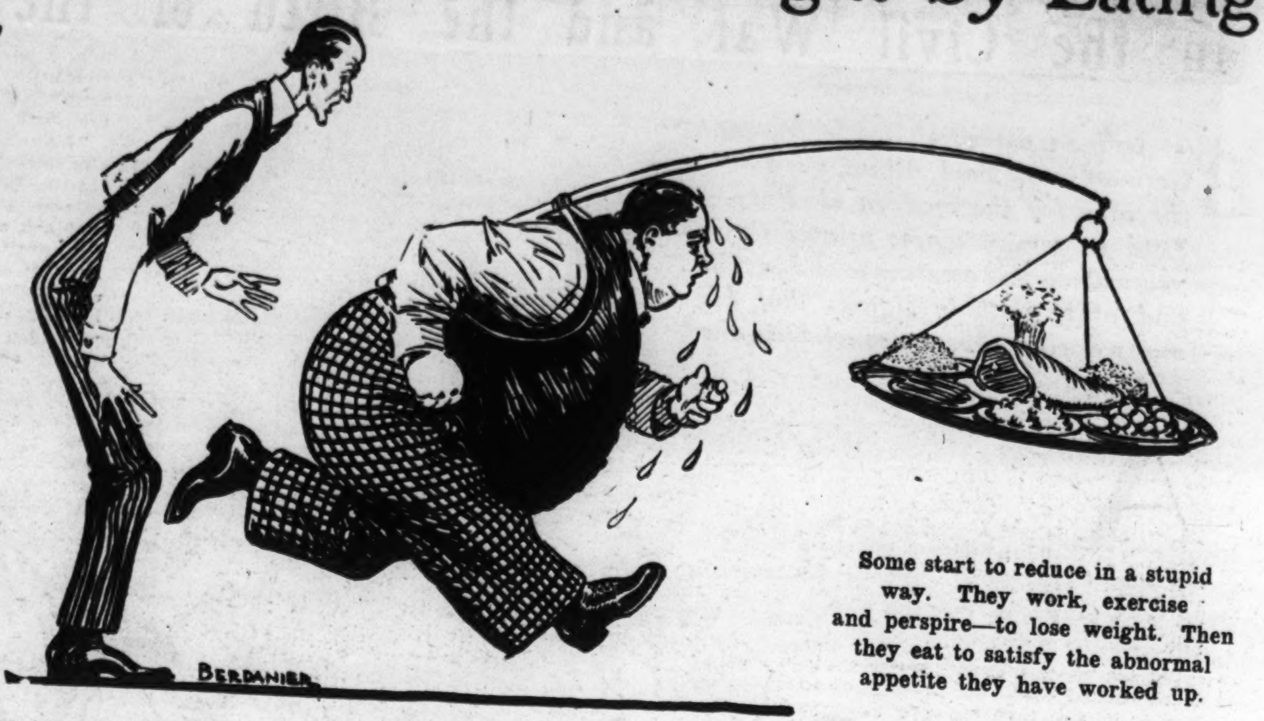
"To my mind," he says, "one of the tremendously important factors in the development of young men in the right direction is in the choice of proper associates outside the family circle. The selection of friends cannot begin too early in life.

"It is, of course, natural for a young man to enjoy being in company, where, either through his ability or through family connections, he is a leader, but the moment a youth becomes leader of his particular group of associates, he should reach out for still other friends among whom he will not be leader, in order that his wits may be kept constantly sharpened.

"Many young men fail to realize that the ties they make with men of their own age are the strongest ties they ever will make. The friends acquired at school or college are closer and more vital than those made in later years."

How to Decrease or Increase Weight by Eating

Food expert shows how simple, nourishing diet will destroy the enemy, obesity, and increase the weight of the abnormally thin—What to eat, how to eat and when to eat for your health's sake :: ::



Some start to reduce in a stupid way. They work, exercise and perspire—to lose weight. Then they eat to satisfy the abnormal appetite they have worked up.

IF you are too fat, eat to reduce; if too thin, eat to increase. If surplus weight is an obsession, you are in a bad way; if it is a handicap to physical activity, you invite disaster. You can be too thin and enjoy good health, but being excessively fat, never. What we are, physically, depends upon what we eat. These are the conclusions of Dr. R. L. Alsaker, a dietetic expert, as expressed in his book of five small volumes, "Eating for Health and Efficiency" (Morrison), in which the doctor discusses virtually every known phase of dieting for all types, in all circumstances.

"A fat adult is always degenerating or sick," Dr. Alsaker writes. "After passing middle age, fatness and disease are synonymous. Obesity and health do not go together. Fat individuals die more easily and more quickly than the slender ones.

"Fat people do not know what real health is, unless they have good memories. They die from pneumonia, apoplexy and arteriosclerosis with the greatest ease.

"The general idea is that as people grow older they ought to grow stouter. The average individual should not increase in weight after reaching 30. It is true that there is a tendency toward fat deposits as the years roll on—in many persons. But this is not a natural tendency—it is a measure usually of inactivity and overeating.

"When children are growing rapidly they can consume vast quantities of food with impunity. Boys are almost like open-topped, bottomless pits. Where all the food they consume goes is a mystery. But boys are active and every cell in their bodies is active. There is much building up, much tearing down and growth. As the years pass the body becomes more stable and is unable to use so much food, for the cells cannot receive so much nourishment, and the body is not attuned to rid itself of so much waste.

"This means that, weight for weight, the food intake must be reduced, if health is to remain. Those who persist in eating as they did during their growing years will either grow fat or else they will develop some form of hardening, or some kind of disease with deposits, or they will get a catarrhal trouble and the digestion will become deranged. Many grow thin because they eat so much that they ruin their digestion and assimilation. Then they become thin and sour, no matter how much they eat. In these circumstances, the more they eat the thinner they grow.

"It is no longer stylish to be fat, and it is decidedly unwise and unsafe. * * * It is unwise to use medicines to reduce. They are frequently injurious. Besides, such reduction is seldom permanent.

"The only safe, sure and sane way to reduce weight is to learn to live properly and practice it. Diet is the most important part of reduction. By living properly for a while, eating sparingly of fattening foods, one can lose weight. By living right thereafter, the weight will remain normal. Fasting is the quickest way to reduce, but it is not necessary to fast."

The doctor holds that there is no fixed weight standard that can be applied to all, and states that the weight figures given in the past as ideal were too high. He reproduces a table, prepared by life insurance actuaries, based on ages 29 to 34, to show what people should weigh, at different heights, to be in fine physical trim. This table follows:

Ages 29 to 34 Years.

Feet.	Inches.	Women.	Men.
4	11	117	...
5	0	119	128
5	1	121	129
5	2	123	131
5	3	127	134
5	4	130	138
5	5	135	141
5	6	137	145
5	7	143	150
5	8	147	154
5	9	151	159
5	10	155	164
5	11	...	169
6	0	...	175
6	1	...	181
6	2	...	188

There are many ways to reduce weight safely and surely, he points out, but the main point, of course, is to persist until results are obtained.

"The hardest part about reducing is to make up the mind fully to do it. Some start to reduce in a stupid way. They work and exercise and perspire—to lose weight. Then they overeat to satsify the abnormal appetite they have worked up—and gain weight. Activity is necessary to health, but it is just as stupid to be overactive as it is to be lazy. One can reduce weight and be ordinarily active. It is easier to control the weight by diet than in any other way."

Six plans, beginning with the severest and working up to the easiest, and several menus for "stouts" are prescribed by the doctor for those who would reduce. The plans, as follows, may be varied from time to time, as fruits and vegetables come in season, by substituting other fresh foods with nutrients similar to those contained in the edibles mentioned.

Plan One.

Plan Two.

Eat juicy fruits or melons, two or three times a day, and nothing else. Drink water in moderation. This is good to cleanse the system and lose weight.

Plan Three.

Plan Four.

Go on a milk or buttermilk diet, but employ judgment in using milk. You may be told by "experts" to drink milk by the gallon. Don't do it. Always be moderate. Milk is a nourishing food and should be treated so. Six glasses of milk or buttermilk a day are sufficient for those who wish to reduce on a milk diet. Sip the milk slowly and enjoy it. Clabbered milk is as good as sweet milk or buttermilk. Overeating of milk will cause congestion as easily as overindulgence in the heavier foods.

Plan Five.

Plan Six.

Starch, fat and sugar maintain the weight, but it is not necessary to omit them from the diet entirely. Eat very little sugar, starch and fat, but once a day. Protein in moderation will not hinder loss of weight.

Adhering to mixed diet, like the following, the doctor writes, will cause loss of weight:

No. 1.

1. Baked apple and glass of milk.
2. Two slices of toast. Glass of buttermilk.
3. Two eggs. Cooked carrots and cabbage. Dish of gelatin.

No. 2.

1. Watermelon or cantaloupe.
3. Lamb chops. Cooked chard or other greens. Young peas. Sliced tomatoes.

No. 3.

1. Grapefruit or orange.
2. Corn on cob, with small amount of butter. Cooked turnips. Cup custard.
3. Macaroni and cheese. Beets or other greens. Okra or other succulent vegetables, cooked. Celery or dish of chopped cabbage.

No. 4.

1. Biscuits (not more than four thin ones). Glass of milk.
2. Vegetable soup. String beans. Dish of ice cream or fruit gelatin.
3. Pecan nut meats. Corn on cob. Carrots or other cooked succulent vegetables. Salad of either fruits or vegetables.

Dr. Alsaker writes that potatoes are not so fattening as the same amount of toast. He advocates avoidance of much starchy foods, sugars and fats while reducing. One should drink only when the system demands moisture.

"Those who are naturally thin ought not attempt to grow heavy, for it nearly always injures the body to try to gain weight in this manner; that is, to force weight to come. Thinness is not an indication of disease or physical disorder when a person is feeling well.

"Thin individuals have the best chance to live to old age in health and comfort. Fat persons are carrying so much excess baggage that it wears them out. * * * Those who are thin rarely appreciate their blessed state. By all means stop worrying about being thin, if you feel well. If you are thin and ill, that is a different proposition. Find out what you are doing that is disagreeing with you and correct the fault.

"There is no one way of gaining weight. It requires good, common sense. Sometimes thin people have to get even thinner before they can begin to put on flesh. One might think that the way to grow fat is to eat and drink more. * * * Sometimes an addition to food intake results in shrinking weight. Sometimes eating less causes addition to the weight.

"Stop overeating. Stop lunching. Stop taking eggs and milk and olive oil between meals. Eat three meals a day and no more.

"When this suggestion is carried out, the chances are that a few additional precious pounds will take flight, but that is all right, for the loss will be only temporary. This loss consists of the poisons and waste that have accumulated through overeating. It is a good riddance."

For thin persons who overeat, Dr. Alsaker forbids eating between meals, rapid eating, which means undermastication; eating too much milk, eggs and fats, making complex food mixtures, poor cooking and injudicious selection of nourishment, worrying and fretting and the abuse of coffee, tea and tobacco.

The chief trouble being dietetic, the doctor prescribes plain, fresh foods, thorough mastication, limiting the number of dishes at each meal to three at most and a cheerful state of mind.

"Remember: No matter how much you eat, if you do not digest it, it is not going to clothe your bones. Food undigested is not only useless, but positively harmful. It is better to eat little and digest it well than to turn the stomach and bowels into a receptacle for a foul, putrifying mass that will poison the body. By eating within digestive capacity the digestive powers are strengthened and the organs will be able to handle the food necessary to keep the body in physical balance.

"Those who are very thin and in an acid state need less of the staples and more of the fresh foods. Instead of taking iron from a bottle they should get it from spinach, cabbage, lettuce and other vegetables, as well as from the fruits, eating sparingly of acid fruits, for these have a tendency to decrease weight and create nervousness in the thin person."

The main points for the slender person who would increase weight to bear in mind, according to Dr. Alsaker, are: Don't gorge the body with food selected without care and eaten at irregular intervals; eat more of the fresh foods and abide the result with cheerful patience.

HOW LONG WILL EASTER EGGS KEEP?

IN the spring of 1916 the Prefect of Paris requested Leon Lindet, a member of the Conseil d' Hygiene, to investigate the question of how long hard-boiled eggs remain edible, and to report upon the question to the above-mentioned body, the report to serve as a basis for legislation governing the sale of Easter eggs subsequent to the holiday. The result of his investigations, which were very extensive, were laid before the Council of Hygiene in October last. While much of the information gathered concerns chiefly dealers and Boards of Health, especially as regards the use of moldy or spotted eggs, there are certain conclusions of general interest.

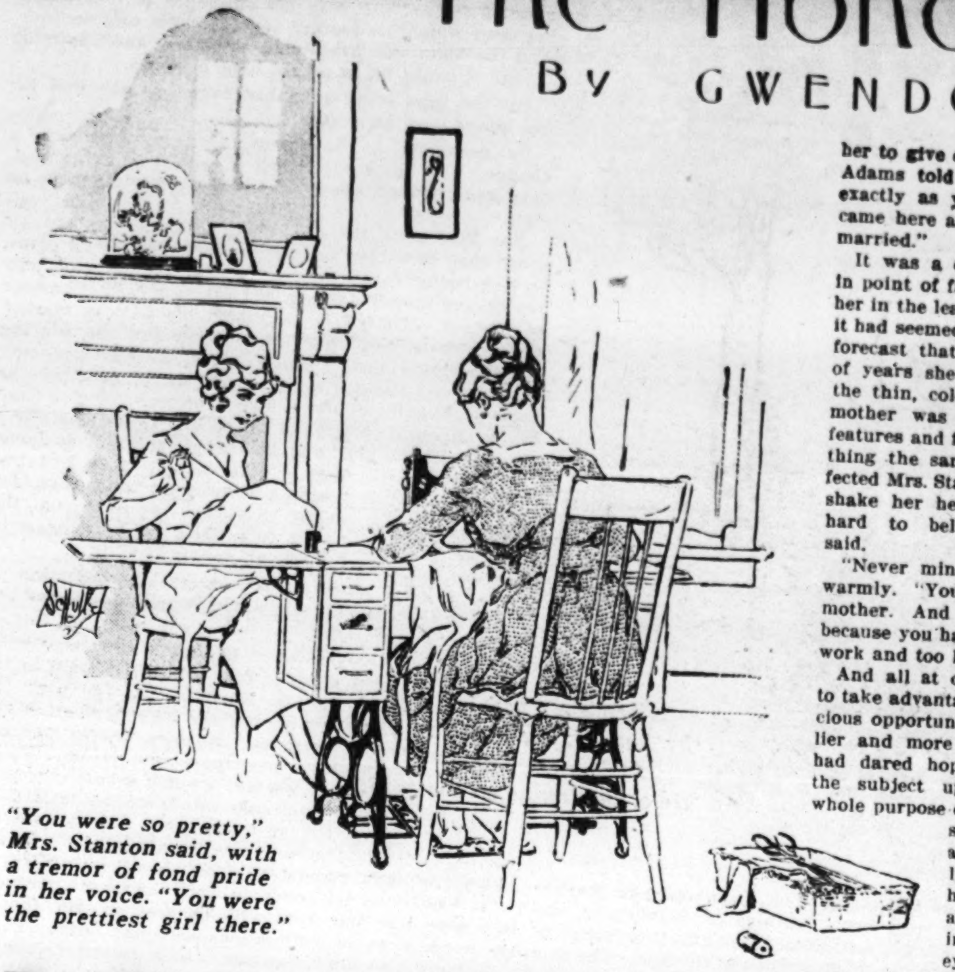
It was found that the keeping qualities of raw eggs were much superior to those of cooked eggs, even though these retain their shell. This is of special interest to housewives, since, as a general thing, cooking helps to keep things edible, partly because of the sterilization by heat, partly perhaps because of chemical alterations due to the process of cooking. An interesting example is cited of the experience of some French soldiers held prisoner in Germany. Their families sought to add to their comfort by contributions of food, including eggs. But those prudent housewives who boiled the eggs before sending learned with dismay that they had arrived unfit to eat, while the eggs which had been sent raw remained fresh for weeks.

Mr. Lindet and his associates undertook to verify this teaching of experience by detailed scientific experiment, and their findings should be borne in mind at Easter time particularly.

Of the number of new-laid eggs chosen for this purpose half were left raw and the rest boiled for a quarter of an hour; they were then kept at a temperature of 28-30 degrees C. for 50 days, samples being taken out for testing at intervals, to determine the amount of ammoniacal nitrogen present, this being a measure of progressive deterioration. Eggs tested immediately after being laid have an average of 10 milligrams of ammonia per 100 grams of eggs, with extreme variations of 6 and 14 milligrams. The percentage of ammonia in these eggs rose in 50 days from 10 milligrams to 26 milligrams for the raw eggs and to 107 milligrams for the cooked eggs; that is, the deterioration. This increase was a minimum and in other experiments it was much augmented.

The Honors of Defeat

By GWENDOLINE OVERTON



"You were so pretty," Mrs. Stanton said, with a tremor of fond pride in her voice. "You were the prettiest girl there."

MRS. STANTON sat upon the porch in the shade of the morning-glory vines. She was sewing; and now and then she raised her eyes to look out into the garden, which showed so plainly the need of attention she had no time to give.

For many years she had been planning that the following season should see it as she wished, with annuals in orderly, well-digged beds, with strings for the climbers, and with all the weeds pulled up from the hard, unturned, unwatered soil that did not discourage them. Yet summer after summer found the same conditions. There was a short period of beauty when the bloom of lilacs hid all defects; but that having faded away, nothing remained save rose bushes full of blighted flowers and dead wood, the stunted sweet peas which had sowed themselves and the persistent four-o'clocks and larkspur.

Sometimes she wondered if there might not have been a way to arrange her work more advantageously, giving herself opportunity for that care of the flowers which would have been so keen a pleasure. An hour a day would have accomplished much. But if by any chance there was a rare interval of leisure, it found her too tired for exertion. She had never been strong enough for the life of the farm. The responsibilities it put upon her were too heavy. Nor were they even lightened, rendered easier by any sense of sympathy and companionship. She was too much occupied to keep up friendly and intimate relations among the wives of the neighboring farmers.

Long since she had ceased expecting understanding or affection from her husband. And there had been no time to take real satisfaction from her two children—who were, moreover, absent at school for the greater part of each day. So, after a period of heartsick inward rebellion, she had brought herself to ask nothing of the present beyond the strength to finish her work, and that peace in the family which her husband's humors seldom allowed to remain unbroken.

But since hope of some sort was needful to give her courage for her task, she had allowed herself to look forward to the future, to the time when Julia should have finished her education and when she would be at home for more than a few hurried hours out of the 24.

The anticipation was one which held so much happiness that she made it the solace of her loneliness, dwelling continually upon the thought of how she and her daughter would sew together and talk together and perhaps even go off together upon little merrymakings—just the two of them.

On the evening before, Julia's schooling had reached its end in the great occasion of the graduation exercises, for which the whole countryside had come forth. Yet fulfillment of her mother's wish had been destined to a little further postponement. For at breakfast Julia announced, with an air of some reticence and mystery, that she must go into town to see Miss Ballard, her teacher. And directly the meal was over she had taken the horse and buggy and driven off.

But it was she who was turning at present into the private road that led to the barn. Before long she came around from the side of the house and stopped upon the upper step.

"The sun is so hot, mother," she said, fanning herself with a little green pamphlet she held. "You look cool there in the shade. I'll take off my hat and be back in a moment to help you."

She went into the house, but presently returned, and taking a piece of sewing from the always overflowing basket, fell to folding down a hem.

The first of the happy hours had begun.

Mrs. Stanton could hardly keep her eyes upon her own work, so often did she look over at the bright face bent above the piece of blue checked cotton which was in process of becoming an apron. Their conversation turned at once upon that culminating event of many months and years—the ceremonies of the previous night.

"You were so pretty," Mrs. Stanton said, with a tremor of fond pride in her voice. "You were the prettiest girl there."

Julia's red lips tried not to smile with undue satisfaction. "It was the dress you made me," she sought to be modest. But pleasure in the compliment inspired her to give on in return. "Mrs. Adams told me that I looked exactly as you did when you came here after you were first married."

It was a comparison which, in point of fact, had not suited her in the least at the time; for it had seemed to hold a chilling forecast that in another score of years she herself might be the thin, colorless woman her mother was now, the peaked features and faded eyes. Something the same view of it affected Mrs. Stanton, making her shake her head sadly. "It is hard to believe today," she said.

"Never mind," the girl said warmly. "You are a dear, good mother. And I love you. It is because you have had too much work and too little play."

And all at once she decided to take advantage of this auspicious opportunity—coming earlier and more aptly than she had dared hope—to introduce the subject upon which the whole purpose of her mind was set. Yet she went about it indirectly, bending her head closer above the sewing, that her eyes might not meet her mothers.

"Mother," she began in a low tone, "what do you suppose? It seems too ridiculous to tell you—when I'm so young, but," her face flushed a charming pink and her lashes dropped shyly, "but Will Adams thinks he wants to marry me."

A hand of ice was laid upon the mother's heart, stilling its beating. Through all the years she had resolutely kept her thought from dwelling upon that inevitable day when the girl would marry and go altogether from her life, leaving her desolate, more lonely than before. She had always said to herself that there would be at least a little time during which they could have each other undisturbed. And what must follow thereafter she would wait to bear when it should be laid upon her. But that it should be at once—and in the first moments of her realized dream——

She heard her own voice asking, "Do you care for him, dear?"

In the interest of the minute the girl forgot her sewing and let it drop unheeded into her lap. "Yes, I do care for him," she came out earnestly. "I care for him a good deal. But, mother, I don't want to marry him."

Mrs. Stanton drew a sharp breath. Then she put another question. "Why do you not?" she said.

The answer was given promptly, impetuously. "Because—because when I am 37 I don't want to be like you!"

It was an unintentional cruelty, inflicted in thoughtless sincerity. The thrust, however, was so true, the stab so keen that the older woman could not even cry out under it. Her faded skin grew more ashen, but Julia was far too intent upon herself to observe it, to be aware of what she had said.

"He is a farmer," she went on. "He always means to be one. He isn't ambitious at all. If I married him I would have to go and live with his folks. I'd have to wash and sweep and cook and sew from morning to night, besides taking care of children. You know how it would be. I've done so well in school; and that would all be wasted. I suppose I oughtn't to feel so about it, that it's selfish. But I can't help seeing things. And it seems dreadful to think about, when I am so young and strong and pretty." Tears of sympathy for her own imaginary lot had come into the eyes that were well able to discern the core of reality in the sweet fruit of romance. "Of course," she added contemplatively, "Will would never be as unkind to me as father is to you."

On Mrs. Stanton's lips, harrowed by long repression of hopes and desires, of sorrows and complaints, came a pathetic, yet half-humorous smile. Julia read in it an unflattering doubt of her lover's real devotion—and objected to it.

"No he wouldn't," she insisted. "He is very fond of me."

Mrs. Stanton let it pass without seeking to make clear by her own example the fate to which such faiths were liable.

There fell a silence. And it was she who broke it. "If you feel like that," she ventured, "it doesn't seem to me that you ought to take him. She was trying to keep her judgment wholly for her daughter's welfare, unaffected by any wishes of her own.

"I will if I stay here, though, I know I will," came the convinced reply. "I'll keep seeing him around, and he'll keep asking me, and some day I'll say yes."

Mrs. Stanton smiled again. "But you are so young, dear—only 17. Not one girl in hundreds marries the first boy that makes love to her. In a year or two you'll both have forgotten all about it."

The prospect of such infidelity, at least upon the part of young Adams, was not agreeable to Julia.

"You don't know how long it has lasted already. I never told you, but it's ever since I was a tiny bit of a thing. Supposing, though, that we did forget each other," she admitted the possibility for the sake of argument, "there would only be someone else—some farmer."

"There are the men in town," Mrs. Stanton suggested.

Julia set it promptly aside. "They are just as poor and just as unambitious. I'd rather have a farmer, anyway, than a clerk or a storekeeper."

"People come here sometimes—and you might go visiting."

"And I might grow to be an old maid, I suppose." The tone swept aside all three possibilities as unworthy of consideration. "No, mother dear—what I ought really to do is to go away."

Mrs. Stanton sat looking at her with dazed, blank eyes. "Go away?" she repeated dully.

"To college," the girl brought out the truth at length. "Mother, you don't need to look so miserable about it! Of course, if you mind as much as that I will stay at home." Julia was beside her, sitting on the arm of the chair, drawing against her shoulder the head with its thin, gray-streaked hair.

Mrs. Stanton let it rest there for a few minutes in a great weariness from which to rouse herself seemed not worth while. But presently she moved away. Julia went back to her own chair. She took up her sewing with a gesture eloquent of resignation to her lot, of pursuing indefinitely and hopelessly these dull tasks.

"If it's going to make you so dreadfully unhappy, I'll give it up," she said. There was surrender in the words, but in the voice was covert tenacity and opposition. She felt herself ill-used. Mrs. Stanton did not answer at once.

"It seems hard, though," Julia went on, hemming assiduously. "I've done so well in school, and I ought to have a finished education. Miss Ballard says I ought. It's a pity for me to stay around here, never doing anything interesting. If I went off to college, I could get a good position somewhere, and very likely I'd marry well and wouldn't have to work at all. I should think you'd want me to do it." The tears had come into her blue eyes once more, and they began to roll slowly down her cheeks, falling on the checked cotton apron.

Mrs. Stanton forgot all else at once. "Don't cry, Judy, dear, don't. I can't bear to see it. Of course, if you want to go I want you to.

"You certainly don't go about making it very easy for me," Julia reproached unsteadily. "I should think you'd be glad. I should think you'd like me to be smart and ambitious," she recurred to the word which had so prominent a place in her vocabulary.

"I do, dear, really I do," her mother pleaded. "Only it was the thought of losing you."

"Yes," there came an involuntary sigh, which Mrs. Stanton tried guiltily to check. "Yes, I suppose it is."

Julia rested upon the point gained.

What college did you think of going to?" her mother asked presently. The girl told her. Her choice was not even in favor of one near at hand, within a distance which would make it possible to return for holidays and vacations. "But I'm not ready for it yet," she explained. "I'd have to be prepared for at least a year."

"And how long would it be after that?" Mrs. Stanton's ideas of university matters were vague, but the rising inflection of her voice held a timid anxiety.

"Four years—if I get through."

"Five or six years, then, in all." It was as if she were saying the term for which she had received a sentence.

"Yes; but that isn't really so long." The girl looked at it from the viewpoint of one who has time for hopes. "I'd be only 23. I'll get you the book about it and you can see. Miss Ballard sent for it. That was what I went after this morning."

She ran into the house and came back with the pamphlet. Together they looked over it, the girl explaining, full of the excitement of exhibiting newly acquired knowledge. Her enthusiasm threw a faint reflection of itself upon the blankness of her mother's soul, so that at last, feeling she had awakened a reciprocal interest, Julia made her plea.

"You will help me to do it, won't you mother?" she besought. "You don't want me to stay on here and lead a life like yours? I ought to have a fair chance."

"I don't know what your father will say," Mrs. Stanton transferred the likelihood of difficulties. "You must choose the right time to talk to him." Julia's eyes grew wide with anticipated fright.

"Goodness! I don't want to talk to him," she protested. "I'd be so afraid of him that I wouldn't know what I was saying. I thought you'd probably do it."

"But he is fond of you, and proud of you," urged her mother. Then she added—"in his way."

The girl laughed incredulously. "I'd rather run away than suggest college to him," she stated definitely. "I can see him when he hears what it will cost—though he's perfectly able to afford it. I'm certain he is. Everybody says he has plenty of money—enough to give you a hired girl, too, if he wanted to. No, I'm not going to talk to him," she reiterated. "But you know how to manage him, mother."

Mrs. Stanton thought of the price at which she had learned it and of the trepidation with which she exercised her knowledge upon the few occasions when necessity or duty drove her to it.

But this was surely duty now. Julia was right; she ought not to stay on here, wasting the promise of her youth, settling down unwillingly to marry young Adams, or another like him; doing hard work, losing her freshness and her strength. There were women who lived the life of the farm contentedly enough, but it would not be so with Julia.

Yet it would be no easy matter to make her husband look at it in the same way—he who had always been so impatient with her own inability to endure the strain. He would say that it was she who had been putting notions into Julia's head, spoiling her. And it would be the expense which, above all else, would rouse his wrathful protests. Always, for weeks in advance, she shrank from the ordeal of asking him for enough money to buy herself and the children clothing—to get some necessity for the household. Yet, as Julia had said, he was well-to-do above the majority of his neighbors. Sheer terror at the prospect began to possess her, until at length she had to put down her sewing.

"I must shell the peas for supper," she said. It could be done with hands which shook too much to hold a needle.

The IVORY CHILD

By H. Rider Haggard

CHAPTER XV (Continued).

BUT—this was another thought—if by any chance Lady Ragnall were still alive and a prisoner upon that mountain, what they had seen was no ghost, but a shadow or simulacrum of a living person projected consciously or unconsciously by that person for some unknown purpose. What could that purpose be? As it chanced, the answer was not difficult, and to it the words she was reported to have uttered gave a clue. Only a few hours ago, just before we turned in, indeed, as I have said, we had been discussing matters. What I have not said is that in the end we arrived at the conclusion that our quest here was wild and useless and that we should do well to try to escape from the place before we became involved in a war of extermination between two branches of an obscure tribe, one of which was quite and the other semi-savage.

Indeed, although Ragnall still hung back a little, it had been arranged that I should try to purchase camels, in exchange for guns, unless I could get them for nothing, which might be less suspicious, and that we should attempt such an escape under cover of an expedition to kill the elephant Jana.

Supposing such a vision to be possible, then might it not have come, or been sent, to deter us from this plan? It would seem so.

Thus reflecting I went to sleep, worn out with useless wonderment, and did not wake again till breakfast time. That morning, when we were alone together, Ragnall said to me:

"I have been thinking over what happened, or seemed to happen, last night. I am not at all a superstitious man, or one given to vain imaginings, but I am sure that Savage and I really did see and hear the spirit or the shadow of my wife. Her body it could not have been as you will admit, though how she could utter, or seem to utter, audible speech without one is more than I can tell. Also, I am sure that she is captive upon yonder mountain and came to call me to rescue her. Under these circumstances I feel that it is my duty, as well as my desire, to give up any idea of leaving the country and to try to find out the truth."

"And how will you do that," I asked, "seeing that no one will tell us anything?"

"By going to see for myself."

"It is impossible, Ragnall. I am too lame at present to walk half a mile, much less to climb precipices."

"I know, and that is one of the reasons why I did not suggest that you should accompany me. The other is that there is no object in all of us risking our lives. I wished to face the thing alone, but that good fellow Savage says that he will go where I go, leaving you and Hans here to make further attempts if we do not return. Our plan is to slip out of the town during the night, wearing white dresses like the Kendah, of which I have bought some for tobacco, and make the best of our way up the slope by starlight that is very bright now. When dawn comes we will try to find the road through that precipice, or over it, and for the rest trust to Providence."

Dismayed at this intelligence, I did all I could to dissuade him from such a mad venture, but quite without avail, for never did I know a more determined or more fearless man than Lord Ragnall. He had made up his mind and there was an end of the matter. Afterwards I talked with Savage, pointing out to him all the perils involved in the attempt, but likewise without avail. He was more depressed than usual, apparently on the ground that "having seen the ghost of her ladyship" he was sure he had not long to live. Still, he declared that where his master went he would go, as he preferred to die with him rather than alone.

So I was obliged to give in and with a melancholy heart to do what I could to help in the simple preparations for this crazy undertaking, realizing all the while that the only real help must come from above, since in such a case man was powerless. I should add that after consultation, Ragnall gave up the idea of adopting a Kendah disguise, which was certain to be discovered; also of starting at night, when the town was guarded. That very afternoon they went, going out of the town quite openly on the pretext of shooting partridges and small buck on the lower slopes of the mountain, where both were numerous, as Harut had informed us we were quite at liberty to do. The farewell was somewhat sad, especially with Savage, who gave me a letter he had written for his old mother in England, requesting me to post it if ever again I came to a civilized land.

I did my best to put a better spirit in him, but without avail. He only wrung my hand warmly, said that it was a pleasure to have known such a "real gentleman" as myself, and expressed a hope that I might get out of this hell and live to a green old age amongst Christians. Then he wiped away a tear with the cuff of his coat, touched his hat in the orthodox fashion and departed. Their outfit, I should add, was very simple: Some food in bags, a flask of spirits, two double-barrel guns that would shoot either shot or ball, a bull's eye lantern, matches and their pistols.

Hans walked with them a little way and, leaving them outside the town, returned.

"Why do you look so gloomy, Hans?" I asked.

"Because, Baas," he answered, twiddling his hat, "I had grown very fond of the white man, Bena, who was always very kind to me and did not treat me like dirt, as low-born whites are apt to do. Also, he cooked well, and now I shall have to do that work which I do not like."

"What do you mean, Hans? The man isn't dead, is he?"

"No, Baas, but soon he will be, for the shadow of death is in his eyes."

"Then how about Lord Ragnall?"

"I saw no shadow in his eyes; I think that he will live, Baas."

I tried to get some explanation of these dark sayings out of the Hottentot, but he would add nothing to his words.

All the following night I lay awake filled with heavy fears, which deepened as the hours went on. Just before dawn we heard a knocking on our door and Ragnall's voice whispering to us to open. Hans did so while I lit a candle, of which we had a good supply. As it burned up Ragnall entered, and from his face I saw at once that something terrible had happened. He went to the jar where we kept our water and drank three pannikins full, one after the other. Then without waiting to be asked, he said:

"Savage is dead," and paused a while as though some awful recollection overcame him. "Listen," he went on presently. "We worked up the hillside without firing, although we saw plenty of partridges and one buck, till just as twilight was closing in, we came to the cliff face. Here we perceived a track that ran to the mouth of a narrow cave or tunnel in the lava rock of the precipice, which looked quit unclimbable. While we were wondering what to do, eight or ten white-robed men appeared out of the shadows and seized us before we could make any resistance. After talking together for a little while they took away our guns and pistols, with which some of them disappeared. Then their leader, with many bows, indicated that we were at liberty to proceed by pointing first to the mouth of the cave, and next to the top of the precipice, saying something about 'ingane,' which, I believe, means a little child, does it not?"

I nodded, and he went on:

"After this they all departed down the hill, smiling in a fashion that disturbed me. We stood for a while, irresolute, until it became quite dark. I asked Savage what he thought we had better do, expecting that he would say, 'Return to the town.' To my surprise, he answered:

"'Go on, of course, my Lord. Don't let those brutes say that we white men daren't walk a step without our guns. Indeed, in any case I mean to go on, even if your lordship won't.'

"Whilst he spoke he took a bull's-eye lantern from his food bag, which had not been interfered with by the Kendah, and lit it. I stared at him amazed, for the man seemed to be animated by some tremendous purpose. Or rather it was as though a force from without had got hold of his will and was pushing him on to an unknown end. Indeed, his next words showed that this was so, for he exclaimed:

"'There is something drawing me into that cave, my Lord. It may be death; I think it is death, but whatever it be, go I must. Perhaps you would do well to stop outside till I have seen.'

"I stepped forward to catch hold of the man who I thought had gone mad, as perhaps was the case. Before I could lay my hands on him he had run rapidly to the mouth of the cave. Of course, I followed, but when I reached its entrance the star of light thrown forward by the bull's-eye lantern showed me that he was already about eight yards down the tunnel. Then I heard a terrible hissing noise and Savage exclaiming: 'Oh, My God!' twice over. As he spoke the lantern fell from his hand, but did not go out, because, as you know, it is made to burn in any position. I leapt forward and picked it from the ground, and while I was doing so became aware that Savage was running still further into the depths of the cave. I lifted the lantern above my head and looked.

"This was what I saw: About 10 paces from me was Savage, with his arms outstretched and dancing—yes, dancing—first to the right and then to the left, with a kind of horrible grace and to the tune of a hideous hissing music. I held the lantern higher and perceived that beyond him, lifted eight or nine feet into the air, nearly to the roof of the tunnel in fact, was the head of the hugest snake of which I have ever heard. It was a broad as the bottom of a wheelbarrow—were it cut off I think it would fill a large wheelbarrow—while the neck upon which it was supported was quite as thick as my middle, and the undulating body behind it, which stretched far away into the darkness, was of the size of an 18-gallon cask and glittered green and gray, lined and splashed with silver and with gold.

"It hissed and swayed its great head to the right, holding Savage with cold eyes that yet seemed to be on fire, whereon he danced to the right. It hissed again and swayed its head to the left, whereon he danced to the left. Then suddenly it reared its head right to the top of the cave and so remained for a few seconds, whereon Savage stood still, bending a little forward, as though he were bowing to the reptile. Next instant, like a flash it struck, for I saw its white fangs bury themselves in the back of Savage, who, with a kind of sigh fell forward on to his face. Then there was a convulsion of those shining folds, followed by a sound as of bones being ground up in a steam-driven mortar.

"I staggered against the wall of the cave for a moment, for I felt faint. When I opened them again it was to see something flat, misshapen, elongated like a reflection in a spoon, something that had been Savage, lying on the floor, and stretched out over it the huge serpent studying me with its steely eyes. Then I ran; I am not ashamed to say I ran out of that horrible hole and far into the night."

"Small blame to you," I said, adding: "Hans, give me some square-face neat." For I felt as queer as though I also had been in that cave with its guardian.

"There is very little more to tell," went on Ragnall after I had drunk the hollands. "I lost my way on the mountain side and wandered for many hours, till at last I blundered up against one of the outermost houses of the town, after which things were easy. Perhaps I should add that wherever I went on my way down the mountain it seemed to me that I heard people laughing at me in an unnatural kind of voice. That's all."

After this we sat silent for a long time, till at length Hans said in his unmoved tone:

"The light has come, Baas. Shall I blow out the candle, which it is a pity to waste? Also, does the Baas wish me to cook the breakfast, now that the snake devil is making his off Bena, as I hope to make mine off him before all is done. Snakes are very good to eat, Baas, if you know how to dress them in the Hottentot way."

CHAPTER XVI.

Hans Steals the Keys.

A FEW hours later some of the White Kendah arrived at the house and very politely delivered to us Ragnall's and poor Savage's guns and pistols, which they said they had found lying in the grass on the mountain side, and with them the bull's-eye lantern that Ragnall had thrown away in his flight; all of which articles I accepted without comment. That evening also Harut called and, after salutations, asked where Bena was, as he did not see him. Then my indignation broke out:

"Oh, white-bearded father of liars," I said, "you know well that he is in the belly of the serpent which lives in the cave of the mountain."

"What, Lord!" exclaimed Harut, addressing Ragnall in his peculiar English, "have you been for walk up to hole in hill? Suppose Bena want see big snake. He always very fond of snake, you know, and they very fond of him. You 'member how they come out of his pocket in your house in England? Well, he know all about snake now."

"You villain!" exclaimed Ragnall, "you murderer! I have a mind to kill you where you are."

"Why you choke me, Lord, because snake choke your man? Poor snake, he only want dinner. If you go where lion live, lion kill you. If you go where snake live, snake kill you. I tell you not go. You take no notice. Now I tell you all—go if you wish, no one stop you. Perhaps you kill snake, who know? Only you no take gun there, please. That not allowed. When you tired of this town, go see snake. Only, 'member, that not right way to House of Child. There another way which you never find."

"Look here," said Ragnall, "what is the use of all this foolery? You know very well why we are in your devilish country. It is because I believe you have stolen my wife to make her the priestess of your evil religion, whatever it may be, and I want her back."

"All this great mistake," replied Harut blandly. "We no steal beautiful lady you marry because we find she not right priestess. Also Macumazana here not to look for lady but to kill elephant Jana and get pay in ivory, like good business man. You, Lord, come with him as friend, though we no ask you, that all. Then you try find temple of our god and snake which watch door kill your servant. Why we not kill you, eh?"

"Because you are afraid to," answered Ragnall boldly. "Kill me if you can and take the consequences. I am ready."

Harut studied him not without admiration

"You very brave man," he said, "and we no wish kill you and p'raps after all everything come right in end. Only Child know about that. Also you help us fight Black Kendah by and by. So, Lord, you quite safe unless you big fool and go call on snake in cave. He very hungry snake and soon want more dinner. You hear, Light-in-Darkness, Lord-of-the-Fire," he added, suddenly turning on Hans, who was squatted near by twiddling his hat, with a face that for absolute impassiveness resembled a deal board. "You hear, he very hungry snake, and you make nice tea for him."

Hans rolled his little yellow eyes without even turning his head until they rested on the stately countenance of Harut, and answered in Bantu:

"I hear, Liar-with-the-White-Beard, but what have I to do with this matter? Jana is my enemy, who would have killed Macumazana, my master, not your dirty snake. What is the good of this snake of yours? If it were any good, why does it not kill Jana whom you hate? And if it is no good, why do you not take a stick and knock it on the head? If you are afraid I will do so for you if you pay me. That for your snake," and very energetically he spat upon the floor.

"All right," said Harut, still speaking in English, "you go kill snake. Go when you like, no one say no. Then we give you new name. Then we call you Lord-of-the-Snake."

As Hans, who now was engaged in lighting his corncob pipe, did not deign to answer these remarks, Harut turned to me and said:

"Lord Macumazana, your leg still bad, eh? Well, I bring you some ointment what make it quite well; it holy ointment come from the Child. We want you get well quick."

Then suddenly he broke into Bantu. "My Lord, war draws near. The Black Kendah are gathering all their strength to attack us and we must have your aid. I go down to the river Tava to see to certain matters, as to the reaping of the outlying crops and other things. Within a week I will be back; then we must talk again, for by that time, if you will use the ointment that I have given you, you will be as well as ever you were in your life. Rub it on your leg, and mix a piece as large as a mealie grain in water and swallow it at night. It is not poison, see," and taking the cover off a little earthenware pot which he produced, he scooped from it with his finger some of the contents, which looked like lard, put them on his tongue and swallowed them.

Then he rose and departed with his usual bows.

Here I may state that I used Harut's prescription with the most excellent results. That night I took a dose in water, very nasty it was, and rubbed my leg with the stuff, to find that next morning all pain had left me and that, except for some local weakness, I was practically well. I kept the rest of the salve for years, and it proved a perfect specific in cases of sciatica and rheumatism. Now, alas! it is all used and no recipe is available from which it can be made up again.

The next few days passed uneventfully. As soon as I could walk I began to go about the town, which was nothing but a scattered village, much resembling those to be seen on the eastern coasts of Africa. Nearly all the men seemed to be away, making preparations for the harvest I suppose, and as the women shut themselves up in their houses, after the Oriental fashion, though the few that I saw about were unveiled and rather good looking, I did not gather any intelligence worth noting.

To tell the truth, I cannot remember being in a more uninteresting place than this little town with its extremely uncommunicative population, which, it seemed to me, lived under a shadow of fear that prevented all gaiety. Even the children, of whom there were not many, crept about in a depressed fashion and talked in a low voice. I never saw any of them playing games or heard them shouting and laughing, as young people do in most parts of the world. For the rest we were very well looked after. Plenty of food was provided for us and every thought taken for our comfort. Thus hill, faster than any horse could gallop.

"Now I hoped that he had gone for good and thought of going myself. Still I feared to do so lest I should meet him somewhere, so I made up my mind to wait till daylight. It was as well, Baas, for about half an hour later he came back again. Only now he could not jump, he could only crawl. Never in my life did I see a snake look so sick, Baas. Into the cave he went and lay there hissing. By degrees the hisses grew very faint, till at length they died away altogether. I waited another half-hour, Baas, and then I grew so curious that I thought that I would go to look in the cave.

"I lit the little lantern I had with me and, holding it in one hand and my stick in the other, I crept into the hole. Before I had crawled 10 paces I saw something white stretched along the ground. It was the belly of the great snake, Baas, which lay upon its back, quite dead.

"I know that it was dead, for I lit three wax matches, setting them to burn upon its tail, and it never stirred, as any live snake will do when it feels fire. Then I came home, Baas, feeling very proud because I had outwitted that great-grandfather of all snakes who killed Bena my friend, and had made the way clear for us to walk through the cave.

"That is all the story, Baas. Now I must go to wash those dishes," and without waiting for any comment, off he went, leaving us marveling at his wit, resource and courage.

"What next?" I asked presently.

"Nothing till tonight," answered Ragnall, with determination, "when I am going to look at the snake which the noble Hans has killed and whatever lies beyond the cave, as you will remember Harut invited us to do unmolested, if we could."

"Do you think Harut will keep his word, Ragnall?"

"On the whole, yes, and if he doesn't I don't care. Anything is better than sitting here in this suspense."

"I agree as to Harut, because we are too valuable to be killed just now, if for no other reason; also as to the suspense which is unendurable. Therefore, I will walk with you to look at that snake, Ragnall, and so, no doubt, will Hans. The exercise will do my leg good."

"Do you think it wise?" he asked doubtfully; "in your case I mean?"

"I think it most unwise that we should separate any more. We had better stand or fall all together; further, we do not seem to have any luck apart."

CHAPTER XVII.

The Sanctuary and the Oath.

THAT evening, shortly after sundown the three of us started boldly from our house, wearing over our clothes the Kendah dresses which Ragnall had bought and carrying nothing save sticks in our hands, some food and the lantern in our pockets. On the outskirts of the town we were met by certain Kendah, one of whom I knew, for I had often ridden by his side on our march across the desert.

"Have any of you arms upon you, Lord Macumazana?" he asked, looking curiously at us and our white robes.

"None," I answered. "Search us if you will."

"Your word is sufficient," he replied with the grave courtesy of his people. "If you are unarmed we have orders to let you go where you wish, however you may be dressed Yet, Lord," he whispered to me, "I pray you do not enter the cave, since one lives there who strikes and does not miss, one whose kiss is death. I pray it for your own sakes, also for ours, who need you."

"We shall not wake him who sleeps in the cave," I answered enigmatically, as we departed rejoicing, for now we had learned that the Kendah did not yet know of the death of the serpent.

An hour's walk up the hill, guided by Hans, brought us to the mouth of the tunnel. To tell the truth, I could have wished it had been longer, for as we drew near all sorts of doubts assailed me. What if Hans really had been drinking and invented this story to account for his absence? What if the snake had recovered from a merely temporary indisposition? What if it had a wife and family living in that cave, every one of them thirsting for vengeance?

Well, it was too late to hesitate now, but secretly I hoped that one of the others would prefer to lead the way. We reached the place and listened. It was silent as a tomb. Then that brave fellow Hans lit the lantern and said:

"Do you stop here, Baases, while I go to look. If you hear anything happen to me, you will have time to run away," words that made me feel somewhat ashamed of myself.

However, knowing that he was quick as a weasel and silent as a cat, we let him go. A minute or two later suddenly he reappeared out of the darkness, for he had turned the metal shield over the bull's eye of the lantern, and even in that light I could see that he was grinning.

"It is all right, Baas," he said. "The father of serpents has really gone to that land whither he sent Bena, where no doubt he is now roasting in the fires of hell, and I don't see any others. Come and look at him."

So in we went and there, true enough, upon the floor of the cave lay the huge reptile, stone dead and already much swollen. I don't know how long it was, for part of its body was twisted into coils, so I will only say that it was by far the most enormous snake that I have ever seen. It is true that I have heard of such reptiles in different parts of Africa, but hitherto I had always put them down as fabulous creatures transformed into and worshiped as local gods. Also, this particular specimen was, I presume, of a new variety, since, according to Ragnall, it both struck like the cobra or the adder and crushed like the boaconstrictor. It is possible, however, that he was mistaken on this point; I do not know, since I had no time, or indeed inclination, to examine its head for the poison fangs, and when next I passed that way it was gone.

I shall never forget the stench of that cave. It was horrible, which is not to be wondered at, seeing that probably this creature had dwelt there for centuries, since these large snakes are said to be as long-lived as tortoises and, being sacred, of course, it had never lacked for food. Everywhere lay piles of cast bones, amongst one of which I noticed fragments of a human skull, perhaps that of poor Savage. Also the projecting rocks in the place were covered with great pieces of snake skin, doubtless rubbed off by the reptile when, once a year, it changed its coat.

For a while we gazed at the loathsome and still glittering creature, then pushed on, fearful lest we should stumble upon more of its kind. I suppose that it must have been solitary, a kind of serpent rogue, as Jana was an elephant rogue, for we met none and, if the information which I obtained afterwards may be believed, there was no species at all resembling it in the country. What its origin may have been I never learned. All that the Kendah could or would say about it was that it had lived in this hole from the beginning and that Black Kendah prisoners, or malefactors, were sometimes given to it to kill, as White Kendah prisoners were given to Jana.

The cave itself proved to be not very long, perhaps 150 feet, no more. It was not an artificial, but a natural hollow in the lava rock, which I suppose had once been blown through it by an outburst of steam. Towards the further end it narrowed so much that I began to fear there might be no exit. In this I was mistaken, however, for at its termination we found a hole just large enough for a man to walk in upright and so difficult to climb through that it became clear to us that certainly this was not the path by which the White Kendah approached their sanctuary.

Scrambling out of this aperture with thankfulness, we found ourselves upon the slope of a kind of huge ditch of lava, which ran first downwards for about 80 paces, then up again to the base of the great cone of the inner mountain, which was covered with dense forest.

I presume that the whole formation of this peculiar hill was the result of violent volcanic action in the early ages of the earth. But as I do not understand such matters I will not dilate upon them further than to say that, although comparatively small, it bore a certain resemblance to other extinct volcanoes which I had met with in different parts of Africa.

We climbed down to the bottom of the ditch that, from its general appearance, might have been dug out by some giant race as a protection to their stronghold, and up its further side to where the forest began on deep and fertile soil. Why there should have been rich earth here and none in the ditch is more than we could guess, but perhaps the presence of springs of water in this part of the mount may have been a cause. At any rate it was so.

The trees in this forest were huge and of a variety of cedar, but did not grow closely together; also there was practically no undergrowth, perhaps for the reason that their dense, spreading tops shut out the light. As I saw afterwards both trunks and boughs were clothed with long gray moss, which even at midday gave the place a very ghostly appearance. The darkness beneath those trees was intense, literally we could not see an inch before our faces. Yet rather than stand still we we struggled on, Hans leading the way, for his instincts were quicker than ours. The steep rise of the ground beneath our feet told us that we were going uphill, as we wished to do, and from time to time I consulted a pocket compass I carried by the light of a match, knowing from previous observations that the top of the Holy Mount lay due north.

Thus for hour after hour we crept up and on, occasionally butting into the trunk of a tree or stumbling over a fallen bough, but meeting with no other adventures or obstacles of a physical kind. Of moral, or rather mental, obstacles there were many, since to all of us the atmosphere of this forest was as that of a haunted house. It may have been the embracing darkness, or the sough of the night wind amongst the boughs and mosses, or the sense of the imminent dangers that we had passed and that still awaited us. Or it may have been unknown horrors connected with this place of which some spiritual essence still survived, for without doubt localities preserve such influences which can be felt by the sensitive among living things, especially in favoring conditions of fear and gloom. At any rate, I never experienced more subtle and yet more penetrating terrors than I did upon that night, and afterwards Ragnall confessed to me that my case was his own. Black as it was, I thought that I saw apparitions, among them glaring eyes and that of the elephant Jana standing in front of me with his trunk raised against the bole of a cedar. I could have sworn that I saw him, nor was I reassured when Hans whispered to me below his breath, for here we did not seem to dare to raise our voices:

"Look, Baas. Is it Jana glowing like hot iron who stands yonder?"

"Don't be a fool," I answered "How can Jana be here, and, if he were here, how could we see him in the night?" But as I said the words I remembered Harut had told us that Jana had been met with on the Holy Mount, "in the spirit or in the flesh." However this may be, next instant he was gone and we beheld him or his shadow no more. Also we thought that from time to time we heard voices speaking all around us, now here, now there and now in the tree tops above our heads, though what they said we could not catch or understand.

Thus the long night wore away. Our progress was very slow, but guided by occasional glimpses at the compass, we never stopped but twice, once when we found ourselves apparently surrounded by tree boles and fallen boughs, and once when we got into swampy ground. Then we took the risk of lighting the lantern, and by aid of it picked our way through these difficult places. By degrees the trees grew fewer so that we could see the stars between their tops. This was a help to us as I knew that one of them, which I had carefully noted, shone at this season of the year directly over the cone of the mountain, and we were enabled to steer thereby.

It must have been not more than half an hour before the dawn that Hans, who was leading—we were pushing our way through thick bushes at the time—halted hurriedly, saying:

"Stop, Baas, we are on the edge of a cliff. When I thrust my stick forward it stands on nothing."

Needless to say, we pulled up dead and so remained without stirring an inch, for who could say what might be beyond us? Ragnall wished to examine the ground with the lantern. I was about to consent, though doubtfully, when suddenly I heard voices murmuring and through the screen of bushes saw lights moving at a little distance, 40 feet or more below us. Then we gave up all idea of making further use of the lantern and crouched still as mice in our bushes, waiting for the dawn.

It came at last. In the east appeared a faint pearly flush that by degrees spread itself over the whole arch of the sky and was welcomed by the barking of monkeys and the call of birds in the depths of the dew-steeped forest. Next a ray from the unrisen sun, a single spear of light, shot suddenly across the sky, and as it appeared, from the darkness below us arose a sound of chanting, very low and sweet to hear. It died away and for a little while there was silence broken only by a rustling sound like to that of people taking their seats in a dark theater. Then a woman began to sing in a beautiful contralto voice, but in what language I do not know, for I could catch nothing of the words, if these were words and not only musical notes.

I felt Ragnall trembling beside me and in a whisper asked him what was the matter. He answered, also in a whisper:

"I believe that is my wife's voice."

"If so, I beg you to control yourself," I replied.

Now the skies began to flame and the light to pour itself into a misty hollow beneath us like streams of many-colored gems into a bowl, driving away the shadows. By degrees these vanished; by degrees we saw everything. Beneath us was an amphitheater, on the southern wall of which we were seated, though it was not a wall but a lava cliff between forty and fifty feet high, which served as a wall. The amphitheater itself, however, almost exactly resembled those of the ancients which I had seen in pictures and Ragnall had visited in Italy, Greece and Southern France It was oval in shape and not very large, perhaps a flat space at the bottom may have covered something over an acre, but all around this oval ran tiers of seats cut in the lava of the crater. For without doubt this was the crater of an extinct volcano.

Moreover, in what I will call the arena stood a temple that in its main outlines, although small, exactly resembled those still to be seen in Egypt. There was the gateway or pylon; there the open outer court with columns round it supporting roofed cloisters, which, as we ascertained afterwards, were used as dwelling places by the priests. There beyond and connected with the first by a short passage was a second rather smaller court, also open to the sky, and beyond this again, built like all the rest of the temple of lava blocks, a roofed erection measuring about 12 feet square, which I guessed at once must be the sanctuary.

This temple was, as I have said, small, but extremely well proportioned, every detail of it being in the most excellent taste, though unornamented by sculpture or painting. I have to add that in front of the sanctuary door stood a large block of lava, which I concluded was an altar, and in front of this a stone seat and a basin also of stone supported upon a very low tripod. Further, behind the sanctuary was a square house with window places.

At the moment of our first sight of this place the courts were empty, but on the benches of the amphitheater were seated about 300 persons, male and female, the men to the north and the women to the south. They were all clad in pure white robes, the heads of the men being shaved and those of the women veiled, but leaving the face exposed. Lastly, there were two roadways into this amphitheater, one running east and one west through tunnels hollowed in the encircling rock of the crater, both of which roads were closed at the mouths of the tunnels by massive wooden double doors, 17 or 18 feet in height. From these roadways and their doors we learned two things: First, that the cave where had lived the father of serpents was, as I had suspected, not the real approach to the shrine of the Child, but only a blind; and, secondly, that the ceremony we were about to witness was secret and might only be attended by the priestly class of families of this strange tribe.

Scarcely was it full daylight when from the cells of the cloisters round the outer court issued 12 priests, headed by Harut himself, who looked very dignified in his white garment, each of whom carried on a wooden platter ears of different kinds of corn. Then from the cells of the southern cloister issued 12 women, or rather girls, for all were young and very comely, who ranged themselves alongside of the men. These also carried wooden platters, and on them blooming flowers.

At a sign they struck up a religious chant and began to walk forward through the passage that led from the first court to the second. Arriving in front of the altar they halted and one by one, first a priest and then a priestess, set down the platters of offerings, piling them above each other into a cone. Next the priests and the priestesses ranged themselves in lines on either side of the altar, and Harut took a platter of corn and a platter of flowers in his hands. These he held first towards that quarter of the sky in which swam the invisible new moon, secondly towards the rising sun and thirdly towards the doors of the sanctuary, making genuflections and uttering some chanted prayer, the words of which we could not hear.

A pause followed, that was succeeded by a sudden outburst of song wherein all the audience took part It was a very sonorous and beautiful song or hymn in some language which I did not understand, divided into four verses, the end of each verse being marked by the bowing of every one of those many singers towards the east, towards the west and finally towards the altar

Another pause till suddenly the doors of the sanctuary were thrown wide and from between them issued —the goddess Isis of the Egyptians as I have seen her in pictures. She was wrapped in closely clinging draperies of material so thin that the whiteness of her body could be seen beneath. Her hair was outspread behind her, and she wore a headdress or bonnet of glittering feathers, from the front of which rose a little golden snake. In her arms she bore what at that distance seemed to be a naked child. With her came two women, walking a little behind her and supporting her arms, who also wore feather bonnets but without the golden snake, and were clad in tight-fitting transparent garments.

"My God!" whispered Ragnall, "it is my wife!".

a strong and quiet pony was brought for me to ride because of my lameness. I had only to go out of the house and call and it arrived from somewhere, all ready saddled and bridled, in charge of a lad who appeared to be dumb. At any rate, when I spoke to him he would not answer.

Mounted on this pony I took one or two rides along the southern slopes of the mountain on the old pretext of shooting for the pot. Hans accompanied me on these occasions, but was, I noted, very silent and thoughtful, as though he were hunting something up and down his tortuous intelligence. Once we got quite near to the mouth of the cave or tunnel where poor Savage had met his horrid end. As we stood studying it a white-robed man whose head was shaved, which made me think he must be a priest, came up and asked me mockingly why we did not go through the tunnel and see what lay beyond, adding, almost in the words of Harut himself, that none would attempt to interfere with us as the road was open to any who could travel it. By way of answer I only smiled and put him a few questions about a very beautiful breed of goats with long silk hair, some of which he seemed to be engaged in herding. He replied that these goats were sacred, being the food of "one who dwelt in the Mountain, who only ate when the moon changed."

When I inquired who this person was he said with his unpleasant smile that I had better go through the tunnel and see for myself, an invitation which I did not accept.

That evening Harut appeared unexpectedly, looking very grave and troubled. He was in a great hurry and only stayed long enough to congratulate me upon the excellent effects of his ointment, since "no man could fight Jana on one leg."

I asked him when the fight with Jana was to come off. He replied:

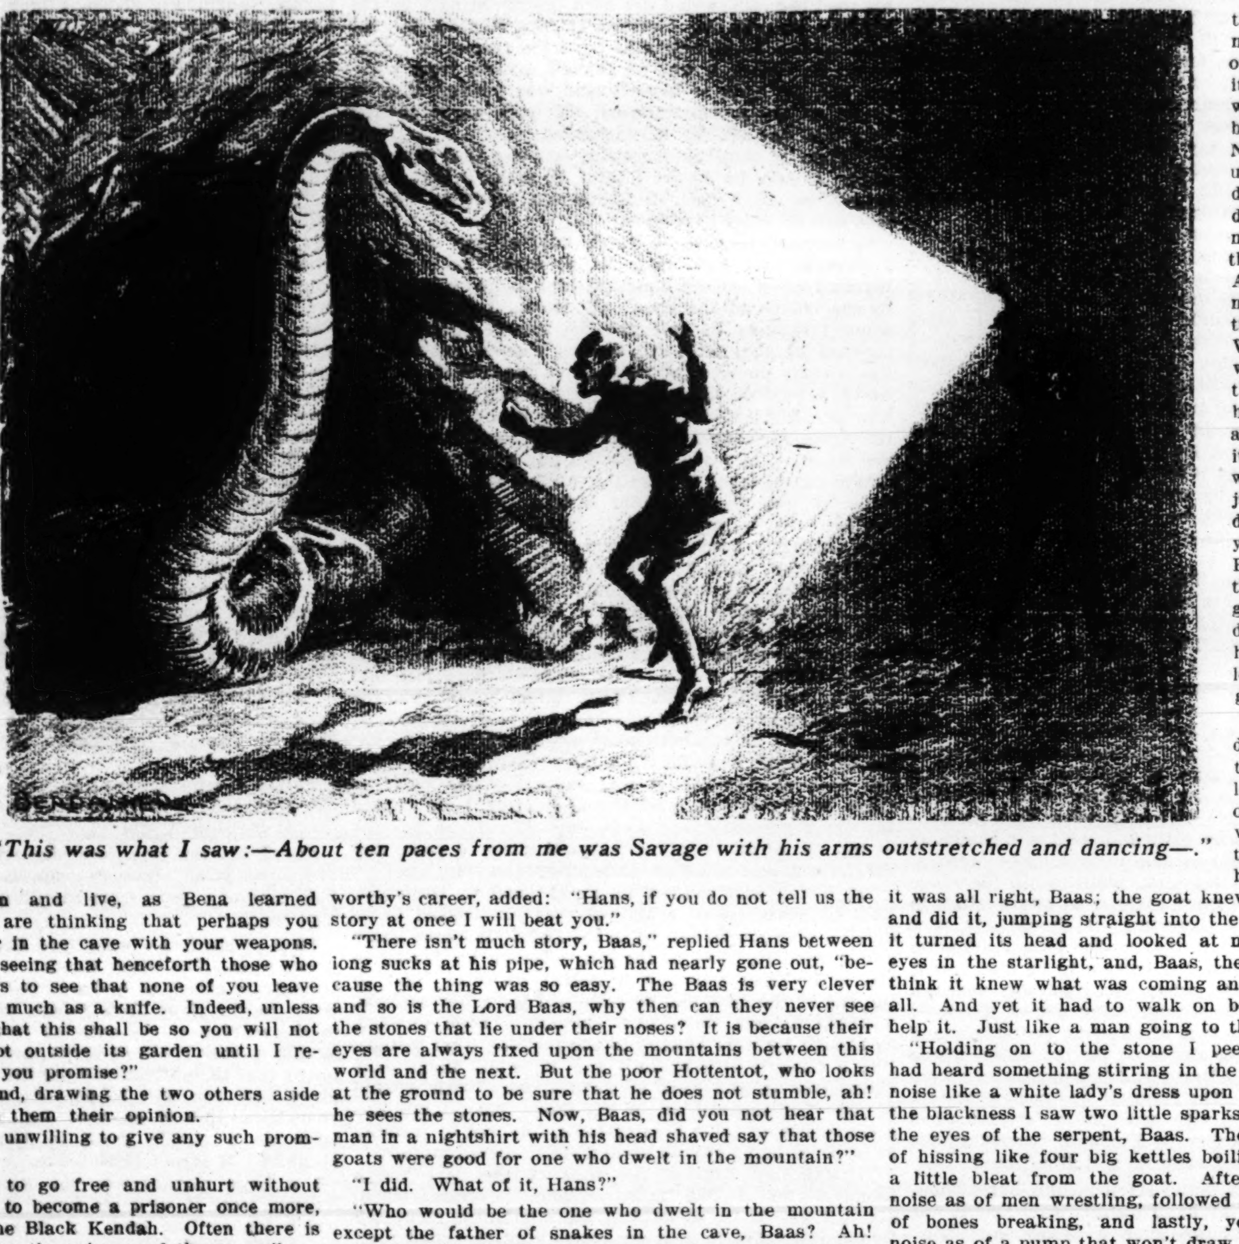
"Lord, I go up the Mountain to attend the Feast of the First-fruits, which is held at sunrise on the day of the new moon. After the offering the Oracle will speak and we shall learn when there will be war with Jana, and perchance other things."

"May we not attend this feast, Harut, who are weary of doing nothing here?"

"Certainly," he answered with his grave bow. "That is, if you come unarmed; for to appear before the Child with arms is death. You know the road; it runs through yonder cave and the forest beyond the cave. Take it when you will, Lord."

"Then if we can pass the cave we shall be welcome at the feast?"

"You will be very welcome. None shall hurt you there, going or returning. I swear it by the Child. Oh! Macumazana," he added, smiling a little, "why do you talk folly, who know well that one dwells in yonder cave whom none may look upon and live, as Bena learned not long ago? You are thinking that perhaps you might kill this dweller in the cave with your weapons. Put away that dream, seeing that henceforth those who watch you have orders to see that none of you leave this house carrying so much as a knife. Indeed, unless you will promise me that this shall be so you will not be suffered to set foot outside its garden until I return again. Now do you promise?"



"This was what I saw:—About ten paces from me was Savage with his arms outstretched and dancing—."

I thought a while and, drawing the two others aside out of hearing, asked them their opinion.

Ragnall was at first unwilling to give any such promise, but Hans said:

"Baas, it is better to go free and unhurt without guns and knives than to become a prisoner once more, as you were among the Black Kendah. Often there is but a short step between the prison and the grave."

Both Ragnall and I acknowledged the force of this argument and in the end we gave the promise, speaking one by one.

"It is enough," said Harut; "moreover, know, Lord, that among us White Kendah he who breaks an oath is put across the river Tava unarmed to make report thereof to Jana, Father of Lies. Now, farewell. If we do not meet at the Feast of the First-fruits on the day of the new moon, whither once more I invite you, we can talk together here after I have heard the voice of the Oracle."

Then he mounted a camel which awaited him outside the gate and departed with an escort of 12 men, also riding camels.

"There is some other road up that mountain, Quatermain," said Ragnall. "A camel could sooner pass through the eye of a needle than through that dreadful cave, even if it were empty."

"Probably," I answered, "but as we don't know where it is and I dare say it lies miles from here, we need not trouble our heads on the matter. The cave is our only road, which means that there is no road."

That evening at supper we discovered that Hans was missing; also that he had got possession of my keys and broken into a box containing liquor, for there it stood open in the cooking hut, with the keys in the lock.

"He has gone on the drink," I said to Ragnall, "and upon my soul I don't wonder at it; for sixpence I would follow his example."

Then we went to bed. Next morning we breakfasted rather late, since when one has nothing to do there is no object in getting up early. As I was preparing to go to the cookhouse to boil some eggs, to our astonishment Hans appeared with a kettle of coffee.

"Hans," I said, "you are a thief."

"Yes, Baas," answered Hans.

"You have been at the gin box and taking that poison."

"Yes, Baas, I have been taking poison. Also I took a walk and all is right now. The Baas must not be angry, for it is very dull doing nothing here. Will the Baases eat porridge as well as eggs?"

As it was no use scolding him, I said that we would. Moreover, there was something about his manner which made me suspicious, for really he did not look like a person who has just been very drunk.

After we had finished breakfast he came and squatted down before me. Having lit his pipe he asked suddenly:

"Would the Baases like to walk through that cave tonight? If so, there will be no trouble."

"What do you mean?" I asked, suspecting that he was still drunk.

"I mean, Baas, that the dweller-in-the-cave is fast asleep."

"How do you know that, Hans?"

"Because I am the nurse who put him to sleep, Baas, though he kicked and cried a great deal. He is asleep; he will wake no more. Baas, I have killed the Father of Serpents."

"Hans," I said, "now I am sure that you are still drunk, although you do not show it outside."

"Hans," added Ragnall, to whom I had translated as much of this as he did not understand, "it is too early in the day to tell good stories. How could you possibly have killed that serpent without a gun, for you took none with you, or with it either for that matter?"

"Will the Baases come and take a walk through the cave?" asked Hans with a snigger.

"Not till I am quite sure that you are sober," I replied; then, remembering certain other events in this worthy's career, added: "Hans, if you do not tell us the story at once I will beat you."

"There isn't much story, Baas," replied Hans between long sucks at his pipe, which had nearly gone out, "because the thing was so easy. The Baas is very clever and so is the Lord Baas, why then can they never see the stones that lie under their noses? It is because their eyes are always fixed upon the mountains between this world and the next. But the poor Hottentot, who looks at the ground to be sure that he does not stumble, ah! he sees the stones. Now, Baas, did you not hear that man in a nightshirt with his head shaved say that those goats were good for one who dwelt in the mountain?"

"I did. What of it, Hans?"

"Who would be the one who dwelt in the mountain except the father of snakes in the cave, Baas? Ah! now for the first time you see the stone that lay at your feet all the while. And, Baas, did not the bald man add this one in the mountain was only fed at new and full moon, and is not tomorrow the day of the new moon, and therefore would he not be very hungry on the day before new moon, that is, last night?"

"No doubt, Hans; but how can you kill a snake by feeding it?"

"Ah! Baas, you may eat things that make you ill, and so can a snake. Now you will guess the rest, so I had better go to wash the dishes."

"Whether I guess or do not guess," I replied sagely, the latter being the right hypothesis, "the dishes can wait, Hans, since the Lord there has not guessed; so continue."

"Very well, Baas. In one of those boxes are some pounds of stuff which, when mixed with water, is used for preserving skins and skulls."

"You mean the arsenic crystals," I said with a flash of inspiration.

"I don't know what you call them, Baas. At first I thought they were hard sugar and stole some once, when the real sugar was left behind, to put into the coffee—without telling you, Baas, because it was my fault that the sugar was left behind."

"Great heavens!" I ejaculated, "then why aren't we all dead?"

"Because at the last moment, Baas, I thought I would make sure, so I put some of the hard sugar into hot milk and, when it had melted, I gave it to that yellow dog which once bit me in the leg, the one that came from Beza-Town, Baas, that I told you had run away. He was a very greedy dog, Baas, and drank up the milk at once. Then he gave a howl, twisted about, foamed at the mouth and died and I buried him at once. After that I threw some more of the large sugar mixed with mealies to the fowls that we brought with us for cooking. Two cocks and a hen swallowed them by mistake for the corn. Presently they fell on their backs, kicked a little and died. Some of the Mazitu, who were great thieves, stole those dead fowls, Baas. After this, Baas, I thought it best not to use that sugar in the coffee, and later on Bena told me that it was deadly poison. Well, Baas, it came into my mind that if I could make that great snake swallow enough of this poison, he, too, might die.

"So I stole your keys, as I often do, Baas, when I want anything, because you leave them lying about everywhere, and to deceive you first opened one of the boxes that are full of square-face and brandy and left it open, for I wished you to think that I had just gone to get drunk like anybody else. Then I opened another box and got out two one-pound tins of the sugar which kills dogs and fowls. Half a pound of it I melted in boiling water and some real sugar to make the stuff sweet, and put it into a bottle. The rest I tied with string into 12 little packets in the soft paper which is in one of the boxes and put them in my pocket. Then I went up the hill, Baas, to the place where I saw those goats are kraaled at night behind a reed fence. As I had hoped, no one was watching them because there are no tigers so near this town, and a man does not steal the goats that are sacred. I went into the kraal and found a fat young ewe which had a kid. I dragged it out and, taking it behind some stones, I made its legs fast with a bit of cord and poured this stuff out of the bottle all over its skin, rubbing it in well. Then I tied the 12 packets of hard poison-sugar everywhere about its body, making them very fast deep in the long hair, so that they could not tumble or rub off.

"After this I untied the goat, led it near to the mouth of the cave and held it there for a time while it kept on bleating for its kid. Next I took it almost up to the cave, wondering how I should drive it in, for I did not wish to enter there myself, Baas. As it happened I need not have troubled about that. When the goat was within five yards of the cave it stopped bleating, stood still and shivered. Then it began to go forward with little jumps, as though it did not want to go, yet must do so. Also, Baas, I felt as though I wished to go with it. So I lay down and put my heels against a rock, leaving go of the goat.

"For now, Baas, I did not care where that goat went, so long as I could keep out of that hole where dwelt the father of serpents that had eaten Bena. But it was all right, Baas; the goat knew what it had to do and did it, jumping straight into the cave. As it entered it turned its head and looked at me. I could see its eyes in the starlight, and, Baas, they were dreadful. I think it knew what was coming and did not like it at all. And yet it had to walk on because it could not help it. Just like a man going to the devil, Baas!

"Holding on to the stone I peeped after it, for I had heard something stirring in the cave making a soft noise like a white lady's dress upon the floor. There in the blackness I saw two little sparks of fire, which were the eyes of the serpent, Baas. Then I heard a sound of hissing like four big kettles boiling all at once, and a little bleat from the goat. After this there was a noise as of men wrestling, followed by another noise as of bones breaking, and lastly, yet another sucking noise as of a pump that won't draw up the water. Then everything grew nice and quiet and I went some way off, sat down a little to one side of the cave, and waited to see if anything happened.

"It must have been nearly an hour later that something did begin to happen, Baas. It was as though sacks filled with chaff were being beaten against stone walls there in the cave. Ah! thought I to myself, your stomach is beginning to ache, Eater-up-of-Bena, and, as that goat had little horns on its head—to which I tied two of the bags of the poison, Bass—and, like all snakes, no doubt you have spikes in your throat pointing downwards, you won't be able to get it up again. Then—I expect this was after the poison-sugar had begun to melt nicely in the serpent's stomach, Baas—there was a noise as though a whole company of girls were dancing a war dance in the cave to a music of hisses.

"And then—oh! then, Baas, of a sudden that father of serpents came out. I tell you, Baas, that when I saw him in the bright starlight my hair stood up upon my head, for never has there been such another snake in the whole world. Those that live in trees and eat bucks in Zululand, of whose skins white men make waistcoats and slippers, are but babies compared to this one. He came out, yard after yard of him. He wriggled about, he stood upon his tail with his head where the top of a tree might be, he made himself into a ring, he bit at stones and at his own stomach, while I hid behind my rock, praying to your reverend father that he might not see me. Then at last he rushed away down the

OF all the modes designed for various occasions during the hot summer months, none are more attractive than those for afternoon wear, the style makers seemingly having devoted more than their usual attention to making this class of frocks in such a variety as to please all tastes.

Slightly suggestive of the harem and its beauties is the new blouse skirt, which is a feature of the gowns for this season. It is made merely by tucking the skirt up at the bottom in a loose, blousy manner, and has become extremely popular. Two examples of this are to be seen on this page.

Some of the gowns for this season give a faint recollection of other days. For instance, there has been a noticeable return to the guimpe, which was a popular favorite some years ago. The suspender dress also is coming back, a "de luxe" edition of which is shown here.

The gown in which the guimpe is employed, in Figure 1, is of strawberry shade moire silk, combined with steel metal lace. The only trimming is the embroidery on the sleeves. The tucked in skirt gives the dress a tunic effect.

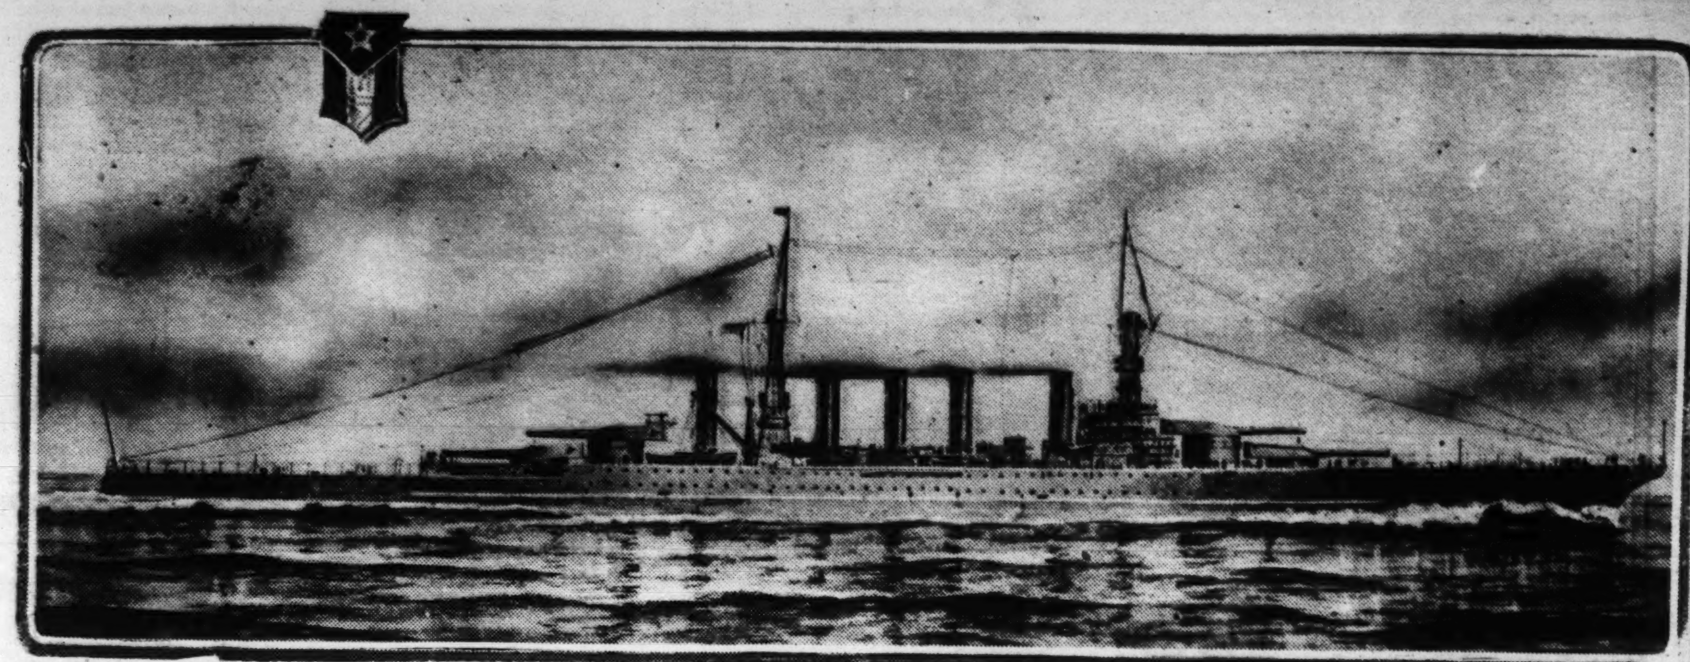
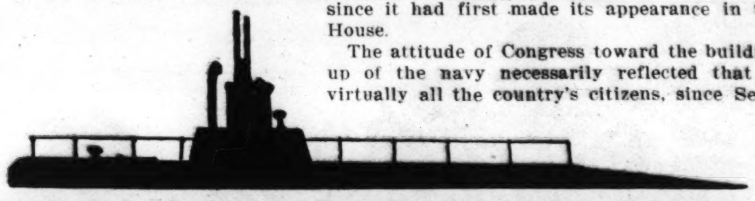
The New American Navy in the Making



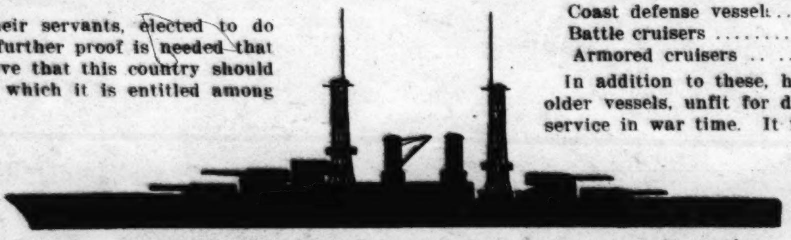
Six of these—This painting, made by a naval architect, gives an idea of the general construction of the powerful new battle cruisers. They will be of about 38,000 tons, 850 feet long, and will develop a speed of about 35 knots. Like the new dreadnoughts they will carry 16-inch guns. Cost, each, $21,933,531.

THE passing by Congress in the closing hours of the last session of this year's naval bill, calling for an expenditure of half a billion dollars, demonstrated more than anything else how public sentiment toward the navy has changed in the last few years. In its journey through the House and the Senate it encountered few obstacles and none of an imposing nature. When it reached the Senate for final disposal there was only a handful of "little navy" men to oppose it, and these, after having had a number of amendments rejected by overwhelming majorities, saw the futility of further opposition and gave up with hardly a fight. Moreover, many millions of dollars had been added to the appropriations in the measure since it had first made its appearance in the House.

The attitude of Congress toward the building up of the navy necessarily reflected that of virtually all the country's citizens, since Senators and Congressmen are their servants, elected to do their bidding. Therefore, no further proof is needed that Americans have come to believe that this country should continue to hold the place to which it is entitled among naval powers of the world.

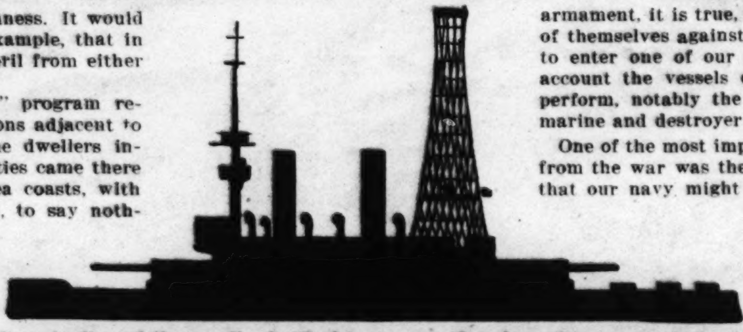


One hundred and forty-two of these—sixty-seven of the new submarines will be the last word in efficiency. Details of improvements are naturally kept secret by the Navy Department.



Twenty-seven of these — ships of the dreadnought type now in service have main batteries of twelve 14-inch guns. Each ship is of 32,000 tons displacement or a trifle under, and develops a maximum speed of 21 knots an hour. The 10 new ships authorized of this class will carry eight 16-inch guns. The vessels will cost $18,713,431 each.

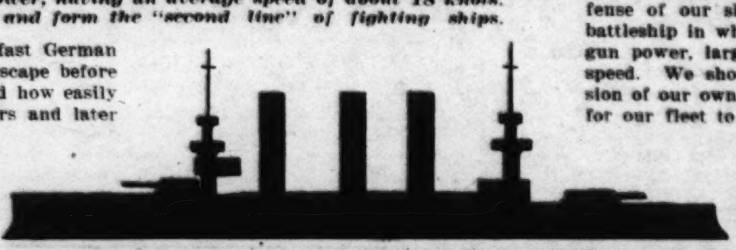
The most radical change in sentiment is to be noted in the Middle West and in other sections of the country which, in time of war, would most likely be immune from naval or even military operations. The consensus of opinion among this class was that the expenditure of such vast sums of money on the navy was perfect foolishness. It would be hard to convince a St. Louisan, for example, that in the event of war this city would be in peril from either land or sea forces.



Twenty-five of these—the battleships, or predreadnoughts, are vessels of around 20,000 tons, which carry guns of a caliber no larger than 12-inch. They also are slower, having an average speed of about 18 knots. They are older vessels and form the "second line" of fighting ships.

It was natural that the "bigger navy" program received most of its support from the sections adjacent to our sea coasts and the great lakes. The dwellers inland were unable to see that when hostilities came there would be these thousands of miles of sea coasts, with their cities and harbors, to be protected, to say nothing of our island possessions and especially the Panama Canal, which certainly would be a rich prize for an enemy. Expert naval opinion on the matter they took with the usual "grain of salt;" the navy men had an ulterior motive.

Then the European war broke out, and this is what caused public sentiment to change. The war demonstrated how easy it was for fast German cruisers to dash over to the British coast, bombard towns and escape before a British squadron could be assembled to punish them. It showed how easily commerce could be swept from the seas, first by raiding cruisers and later by the submarine arm, the use of which by Germany showed how woefully deficient we were in this branch of the service. But above all it demonstrated that no matter what the efficiency of the personnel in naval strategy and marksmanship, modern naval battles are won largely through the speed and gun power and armament of the vessels. It brought home to them that the units of a first-class fighting fleet have to be the last word in construction and to possess the very latest in engines, guns and all other equipment. The people came to realize that modern wars are won by those nations which gain the mastery of the sea.



Twenty of these—armored cruisers of about 14,000 tons, carrying four 8-inch or 10-inch guns. They are a little swifter than battleships, averaging about 22 knots, and are armed heavily enough to resist anything in their class owned by foreign nations.

When the 1918 naval bill was passed early this month a long stride was taken toward the completion of the great three-year building program which was promulgated in the naval act approved Aug. 29, 1916. The funds appropriated in the latest bill brought the total provided to considerably more than two-thirds of the $544,666,113 necessary to carry out the three-year program and only one more appropriation for this purpose now must be made. Then, when all the ships which this money is providing are completed and put into service, the United States will have a navy! Here, at a glance, is what we are going to get for our $544,666,113:

10 scout cruisers.
50 torpedo-boat destroyers.
9 fleet submarines (seagoing).
3 800-ton type submarines.
55 smaller type submarines.
3 fuel ships.
2 ammunition ships.
1 hospital ship.
1 repair ship
1 transport.
2 destroyer tenders.
1 submarine tender.
2 gunboats.

Now will be shown what constituted our navy prior to the adoption of the three-year program. The list includes ships which were building up to July, 1916, and embraces only the fighting craft, but by comparison with what the navy will be when all the vessels recently authorized have been completed it will be seen that there is a vast difference between the "old" navy and the "new." In the classifications a dreadnought is a battleship having a main battery of all big guns, 11 inches or more caliber, the pre-dreadnoughts are those battleships of about 10,000 tons or more displacement, whose main batteries are of more than one caliber, and coast defense vessels include smaller battleships and monitors:

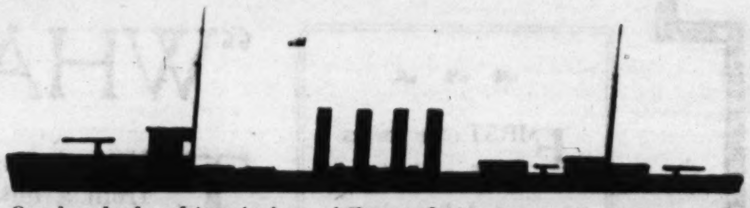
	Old Navy.	New Navy.		Old Navy.	New Navy.
Dreadnoughts	17	27	Cruisers	15	15
Battleships	25	25	Destroyers	74	124
Coast defense vessels...	4	4	Torpedo boats	6	6
Battle cruisers	0	6	Submarines	75	142
Armored cruisers	10	20

In addition to these, however, the United States has hundreds of smaller and older vessels, unfit for duty with the main fleets, but which would be in active service in war time. It is not generally known that in this list are a number of monitors, flat-bottomed craft with a revolving turret not greatly unlike the first ship of that class, the Monitor, which revolutionized naval warfare in the Civil War. These vessels easily could be used in harbor defense work in wartime and recently one of them was employed in the work of stretching steel defense nets in New York harbor.

On the active list, also, could be placed the little gunboats and converted gunboats which now are being used by the naval militia of the various states. Their armament, it is true, is not formidable, but they could give a good account of themselves against commerce raiders of other nations which attempted to enter one of our unprotected harbors. One must likewise take into account the vessels of all other classes, each having a special duty to perform, notably the colliers, the oil ships, the hospital ships, the submarine and destroyer "mother" ships, the repair ships and the transports.

One of the most important lessons which American naval experts learned from the war was the necessity of building fast battle cruisers. In order that our navy might have a unit of these craft at the earliest possible moment, the initial appropriations for the three-year program provided for four of them and another was added in the bill just passed. A battle cruiser is designed to combine gun power with speed, and of their value to the United States, Commander Yates Stirling Jr., U. S. N., said recently in a magazine article:

"From the very nature of the problem of defense of our shores we require a type of battleship in which must be combined great gun power, large cruising radius and high speed. We should be able to hold possession of our own waters. It does not suffice for our fleet to meet an enemy on or near our coast line; we must meet him beyond, in order that our peace lines of communication may remain unmolested. This principle holds for every type of warship.



One hundred and twenty-four of these—destroyers are the "eyes" of the fleet and are designed for speed rather than fighting. They attain from 28 to 31 knots. Their batteries are composed of guns of small caliber. They are vessels of from 700 to a little more than 1000 tons.

"Barring England and Mexico, an attack upon the United States, in the initial stages, must be conducted in many vessels across many miles of sea. In the event of war, therefore, with an enemy across the sea, our first duty will be to gain touch with his attacking expedition as far from our coast as possible and convenient in order to harass and eventually annihilate it. Slow battleships seem to have no place in our 'attacking' fleet. We should have types capable of 'controlling the surface' from our shores to the advancing enemy. By this means we shall lessen, if not eliminate, the danger of enemy submarines, and give our own mobile offensive type submarines an added value. Gun power, radius of action and speed are essential for this work."

Fifteen of these—three classes of ordinary cruisers, ranging from about 2000 to 10,000 tons, carrying 5, 6 and 8-inch guns and with speeds of from 16 to 26 knots. They are essentially commerce destroyers, and because of their larger guns could sink hostile torpedo boats of any class.

At times small Moslem forces had advanced to within 20 miles of the canal and the heart of England had been clutched with fear until the invaders were driven off. The main force of the Moslems, however, had, since the beginning of the war, been stationed at El Arish, on the Mediterranean shore of the Sinai Peninsula, a constant menace to the British in Egypt and the water artery through which flowed the life-giving foodstuffs to Great Britain.

The first attack in force toward the Suez Canal was made by the Turks on Nov. 12, 1914. After a three-day battle they were driven back across the desert to El Arish, which was regarded as the most strongly fortified spot on Sinai. For a long time after that there was little fighting in the vicinity of the canal. The Dardanelles campaign, the Russian advance through Armenia and the British attacks in Irak and Mesopotamia had compelled the Turks to utilize large forces elsewhere and El Arish was largely stripped of the large garrison that had been stationed there at the beginning of the war.

The British aeroplanes kept informed of the weakening of the El Arish defenses, but as the English made no move in that direction the Turks were lulled into such a security that they practically stripped the garrison to add the troops to a large force being sent to the help of the hard-pressed Austrians in Galicia. This was the opportunity for which the British were waiting.

On Dec. 22, 1916, a laconic statement in London announced that the British had occupied El Arish. It seems that the "Anzacs" who had been removed to Egypt after the withdrawal from the Dardanelles campaign, together with a native camel corps, had started east from El Kantara, on the canal, along the caravan route, which follows the Mediterranean shore a few miles inland, and the Turks, learning of the advance and realizing the futility of a stand, had abandoned El Arish and retreated to Magdadah, 20 miles to the southeast.

The British followed closely behind the Turks and the next day occupied Magdadah, virtually destroying the entire Moslem force which had fled from El Arish. Several thousand prisoners were taken, together with a large number of Krupp guns and rifles. Further south another English force advanced through an opening in the hills, called Mitla Pass, and put another Turkish force to flight, burning their camps and capturing more artillery.

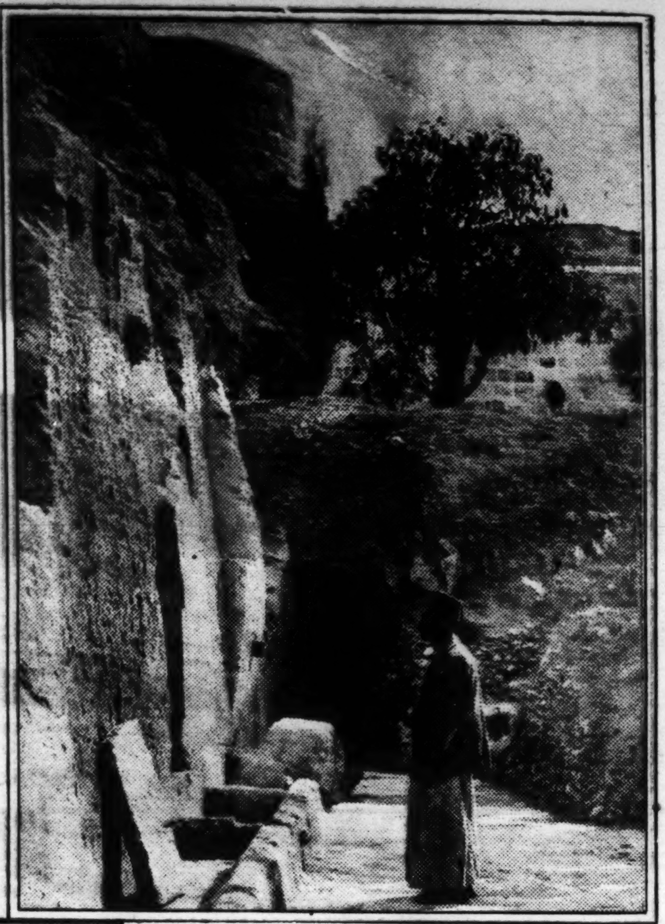
Some days later the British invaders of Palestine attacked the Turks at Rafa and after defeating and sending them into a precipitous flight, destroyed a relieving force that had arrived too late to be of any service.

Since that time the British advance has been slow and methodic. The part of Palestine where the operations are now taking place is far from being a land of "milk and honey." In fact, it is a desert of shifting sand, where no life is found. Every drop of water and every ounce of food used by the troops must be carried along. Heavy guns must be dragged through shifting sands which reach to the wheel hubs. Yet the most recent report of the operations of the invaders puts the "Anzacs" at El Chalil, about 15 miles south of the holy city.

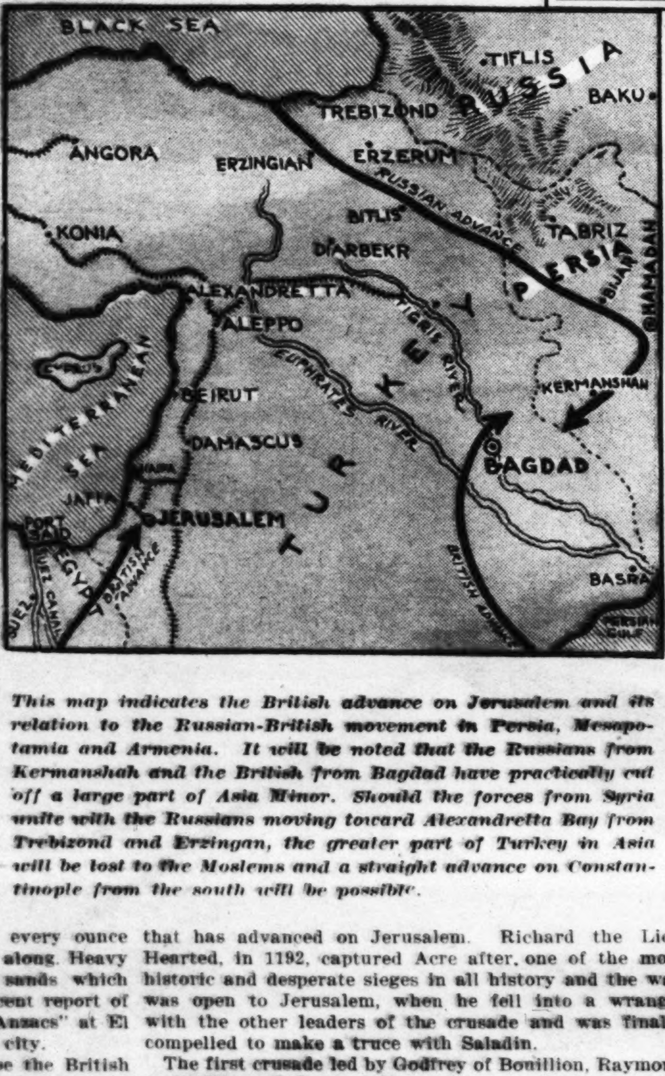
It is expected that when the time is ripe the British fleet will co-operate with the land forces moving on Jerusalem. Jaffa, the port of the Holy City, on the Mediterranean, is illy defended against an attack by a British fleet, and a railroad line connects the port with Jerusalem. With the Jaffa-Jerusalem line in their possession, the British would find an almost unimpeded advance towards Acre, Antioch, Beirut and Alexandretta.

This is the route taken by Napoleon after his famous expedition to Egypt. On May 19, 1798, he set sail for Alexandria with 40,000 men. He captured Malta, the present great English naval base, on the way, and on July 21 fought the battle of the pyramids. A month later Nelson destroyed the French fleet at the Bay of Aboukir and the French army was left without communications. Thereupon Napoleon attempted to create a revolt in Turkey. On Feb. 20 he took El Arish by storm, and within the next two weeks occupied Gaza and Jaffa. He then moved on Acre. With the help of Admiral Sir Sidney Smith the Turks defeated the French and Napoleon returned to France, through the blockade, a defeated man. The army he left behind in Egypt and Syria almost vanished through disease and constant fighting with Turks and nomadic tribes.

Jerusalem, Acre, Jaffa, El Arish and Antioch all were in the path of the crusaders from 1095 to 1219. The present British force is not the first that has advanced on Jerusalem. Richard the Lion Hearted, in 1192, captured Acre after one of the most historic and desperate sieges in all history and the way was open to Jerusalem, when he fell into a wrangle with the other leaders of the crusade and was finally compelled to make a truce with Saladin.



Church of Holy Sepulchre.



This map indicates the British advance on Jerusalem and its relation to the Russian-British movement in Persia, Mesopotamia and Armenia. It will be noted that the Russians from Kermanshah and the British from Bagdad have practically cut off a large part of Asia Minor. Should the forces from Syria unite with the Russians moving toward Alexandretta Bay from Trebizond and Erzingan, the greater part of Turkey in Asia will be lost to the Moslems and a straight advance on Constantinople from the south will be possible.

The first crusade led by Godfrey of Bouillion, Raymond of Toulouse, Robert of Normandy and Bohemund and Hugh the Great, after great privations, crossed through Asia Minor, penetrated Syria and laid siege to Antioch. For seven months the city withstood the siege while disease and hunger decimated the ranks of the crusaders: Thousands abandoned the expedition, including Peter the Hermit, who had been largely responsible for inaugurating the crusade. In June, 1098, Antioch was taken and the inhabitants were massacred by the victors. Shortly afterwards the crusaders were themselves besieged in Antioch and after great suffering managed to drive off the Saracens. Of the 600,000 who had started on the crusade, only 40,000 remained to complete the enterprise by the capture of Jerusalem July 15, 1099. The Latin kingdom of Jerusalem was founded, with Godfrey as King.

In 1144 Nur-Ed-Din, Emir of Mosul, advanced to destroy the new kingdom of Jerusalem. His march toward the Holy City caused the preaching of the second crusade which was led by Louis VII of France and Conrad III of Germany. In 1147 an immense army of crusaders crossed the Bosphorus, but through the treachery of the Byzantine Emperor the invaders were badly defeated, and when they laid siege to Damascus the disaster was completed, and only a few of those who had started on the crusade were able to return to Europe.

The death blow to the Christian hold on Jerusalem, however, came from Egypt, where the famous Saladin gathered together a large force, invaded Syria along the route taken by the present British expedition and defeated the Christian armies disastrously at Tiberias. Jerusalem fell into the hands of the Turks in October, 1187.

This brought about the third crusade. The leaders of this expedition were great historical figures—Richard the Lion Hearted, Barbarossa, Emperor of Germany, and Philip of France. Quarrels between the leaders caused the failure of this expedition though Saladin was compelled to agree to a compromise whereby Christian pilgrims were to be permitted to visit Jerusalem without paying a tax. The fourth crusade was a complete failure, as far as taking Jerusalem was concerned. The army was diverted to attack the Byzantine empire in 1204, and no further attempt was made against the holy city until 24 years later.

The leader of the fifth crusade, the Emperor Frederick recovered by a truce with the Sultan of Egypt possession of Jerusalem, but in 1244 the Turks again regained the city. In 1248 the sixth crusade was undertaken by St. Louis of France. His army was cut to pieces by the Turks and he himself made prisoner and held for an enormous ransom. Subsequently he went on to Palestine, but the expedition produced no substantial results. In 1270 St. Louis organized the seventh crusade, but turned aside to conquer Tunis and was there killed. This was the last effort of Christian Europe to wrest Jerusalem from the Moslems.

Among the more striking episodes of these religious wars were what are known as the Children's Crusades. Of these there were two, both in 1212, the impelling idea being that children, who were innocent, could accomplish what men, sinners, were unable or were not permitted by God to accomplish. In France, a shepherd lad, Stephen of Cloyes, announced that he was sent by God to crush the Saracens. He gathered about him 30,000 children and they were embarked on seven ships at Marseilles. Two of the vessels foundered at sea, but the other five reached Alexandria, where the children were seized and sold as slaves. Seventeen years later many of them were released through the intervention of Emperor Frederick.

At this same time a boy named Nicholas started a similar propaganda in Germany. With 20,000 children he crossed the Alps and after terrible hardships arrived at Genoa. The Archbishop of that city, who appeared to be more enlightened than his contemporaries, persuaded the children to return to Germany. On the march back through the Alps hundreds died from the hardships and but a pitiful remnant returned to the towns from which they had started.

The boy Nicholas, after taking part in the siege of Damietta, in 1219, returned to Cologne, where he subsequently lived.

"WHAT SHIP WAS THAT? ANY PASSENGERS?"

FIRST of a series of paintings by noted American artists depicting present-day events which are certain to become historical.

* * *

THIS painting was made by J. Burns from a detailed description of the sinking of the Laconia by Floyd P. Gibbons, a Chicago newspaper man, who was one of the survivors of that liner and whose graphic story of its destruction has appeared in the Post-Dispatch. Mr. Burns is regarded as one of the best marine painters in America and was formerly connected with Harper's Weekly and the London Graphic.

The Laconia was torpedoed off the coast of Ireland, near where the Lusitania went down, Feb. 25. According to Mr. Gibbons:

"As our boat's crew steadied her head into the wind a black hull, glistening wet and standing about eight feet above the surface of the water, approached slowly and came to a stop opposite the boat and not six feet from it."

Then ensued a conversation between the commander of the German submarine and Chief Steward Ballyn in which the U-boat skipper asked the name of the ship he had sunk.

"The Laconia," Ballyn answered.

"What?"

"The Laconia, Cunard line," responded the steward.

"What did she weigh?"

"Eighteen thousand tons."

"Any passengers?"

"Seventy-three," replied Ballyn; "men, women and children, some of them in this boat. She had over 200 in the crew."

"Did she carry cargo?"

"Yes,"

"Well, you'll be all right soon. The patrol will pick you up." And without further sound, the submarine moved off.

Two American women passengers, Mrs. Mary E. Hoy and her daughter Elizabeth of Chicago, died from exposure in one of the small boats. Several others also succumbed.

A Wonderful New Product

NOTHING else like it made anywhere. Not a soap powder. Not a chipped soap. Not a cake soap! But wonderful, pure essence of soap in flakes! Even in looks entirely different from anything you have ever seen. Ready to use; no shaving or chipping required; pour boiling or very hot water over the flakes, whisk into a lather, and instantly you get just the rich, creamy lather you have always wanted. Dissolves dirt and cleans perfectly without rubbing. Made by a special formula, and special machinery controlled by the makers of Lux.

These flakes won't hurt any fiber, whether cotton, silk or wool! Can't injure anything that pure water alone won't injure. Order a package today and make some of the tests shown below. That is the way to settle for all time the product you will use for all fine laundering.

Lux positively won't shrink woolens. It leaves your sweaters, blankets, crocheted articles, all your woolens, just as they were when new Pure Essence of Soap in Flakes !

This wonderful new product is not only new, different, but it actually looks different. The moment you open the package, you will see that you have never seen a soap product anything like Lux.

Lux is made in the form of flakes. These flakes are thin, delicate, pure, actually transparent. They dissolve immediately in hot water. This makes Lux unequaled for speedy production of an excellent lather.

It is the modern form of soap—no shaving or chipping required. It makes an instant lather which dissolves dirt without rubbing. In fine laundering soap should never be rubbed directly on the article. Lux is such an advance over a cake of soap that, once you have tried Lux, you will never again be satisfied with a cake of soap for anything but rough washing.

One important reason why you want your soap for fine laundering in flake form

Lux is made in flake form because in these tiny flakes is condensed more real cleansing value than is possible in any other form of soap.

The process by which Lux is made is used only for Lux—the very machinery which "flakes" the soap is patented and controlled by the manufacturers of Lux.

Lux needs only to be used in small quantities, owing to its absolute purity and wonderful richness.

This is due to the fact that in flake form Lux can be kept pure concentrated soap; in this form there is no need for any air, any moisture, or any kind of "filler," which have no cleansing value. There is absolutely nothing but pure soap in each transparent flake. Lux can't injure anything that pure water alone won't injure.

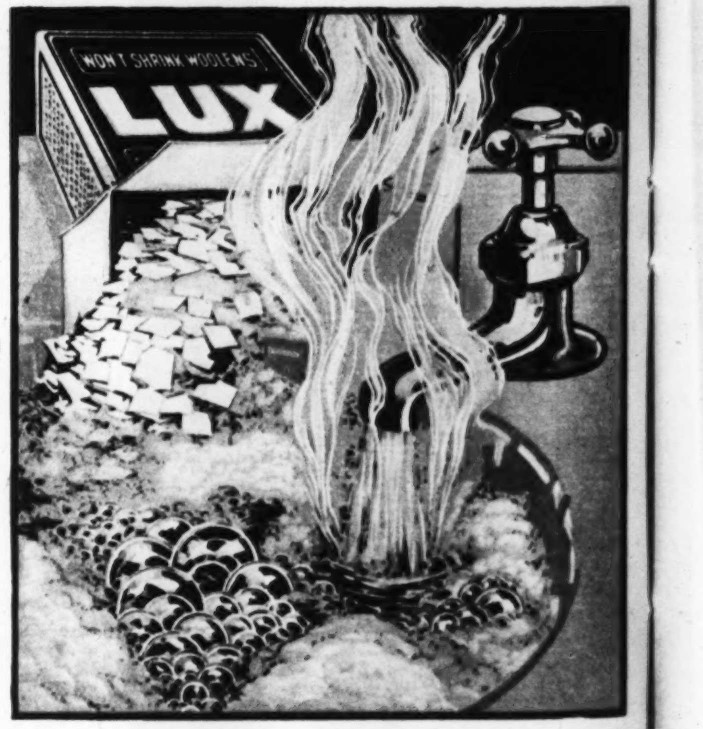
These flakes melt the moment you throw them into hot water. They are so completely soluble that not the slightest trace of soap is left in the garment to yellow it.



Throw the flakes of Lux into hot water; whisk into a lather and instantly you will have such a rich, creamy lather as you have always wanted.

Lux is unequaled for—

How to wash woolens so they will not shrink

Woolen fabrics differ wholly from any other fabric. In wool, the surface of each fiber is made up of scales, overlapping like tiny fish scales.

Ordinarily, when wet, these fibers expand, but the moment alkali in water comes in contact with wool fiber, these little scales interlock, the fiber draws up—and the fabric has "matted" and shrunk.

The sensitiveness of wool fiber to alkali and to rubbing, are the causes of shrinkage.

In the choice of your soap product, and in the way you handle woolens, lies the secret of safety, of complete success in laundering woolens. Lux actually won't shrink woolens. It contains no free alkali; its thick, hot lather dissolves dirt without rubbing; its wonderfully pure, mild flakes leave woolens soft and fleecy, just as they were when new.

So many other products have claimed that they won't shrink woolens, and you may have had so many woolen garments shrink until they were no longer usable, that when we tell you that Lux positively won't shrink woolens, you find it difficult to believe. But will you not order one package and try it on some woolen article in your home? Use it the Lux way—with hot water. Think what it means to you to have at last found something which will wash woolens wonderfully!

Why silks turn yellow

Authorities on silk say that the action of alkali on silk makes it acquire a yellow color which cannot be washed out. Also that when an alkali is combined with hot water, it affects the silk fibers, breaking them down very easily. Lux contains no free alkali and gives a remarkable lather when used in moderately warm water. You can wash silk with Lux over and over again, and it will stay as white as when you bought it.

Never rub silk
The Lux suds when used must be lukewarm
Rinse perfectly in lukewarm waters
Never dry in the sun
Stretch thoroughly and press when wet
Never have your iron very hot

What its users think of Lux

"Before using up one box of Lux, the uses had all been justified to my complete satisfaction and delight. 'Does not shrink woolens'—proved by washing a white woolen sweater. 'Does not turn silk yellow'—the constant laundering of crepe de Chine and silk waists justifies this claim. I get twice as much wear out of my silk blouses. 'Have found Lux especially good for fine laces and lace curtains because no rubbing is required. A white lace Syrian scarf with silver in it, which had previously been sent to the cleaners, looked like new when washed with Lux, and saved me one dollar besides."—D. Fullerton, N. Y. City.

"Lux has greatly prolonged the life of my chamois and silk gloves. For washing blankets I consider it quite the most wonderful soap ever made. And I use it for unusual things which you wouldn't ever dare to try to wash with any other soap. For instance, I washed my silk lamp shades in the bath tub with Lux, and they came out in absolutely perfect condition, quite as good as the day they were bought. There is nothing like Lux."—Mrs. J. R. Barker, Cambridge, Mass.

"I used your Lux Soap for some very fine laces with better results than I could get from other preparations, using less soap, time and energy."—Mrs. P. Dreyer, 532 East 89th Street, N. Y. City.

Now on sale at all grocery and department stores

The claims for Lux sound so remarkable, they have been made so often for other products when they are not really true, that you may not credit what we have told you about it. But will you not get just one ten-cent package of Lux and make these tests yourself? If you are not entirely satisfied, your dealer has been instructed to return your money.

Once you have actually seen Lux and used it yourself, we know you will tell other women that you have at last found the ideal soap product for all fine laundering.
